STATE DIDN'T SHOW ITS CASE TO SECURE INDICTMENT AGAINST SUPERINTENDENT LEO M. FRANK

No Documentary Evidence Was Placed Before the Grand Jury and James Conley, the Negro Sweeper Who Made Sensational Affidavit About Writing Certain Notes at Frank's Dictation on Day Before Tragedy, Was Not Examined by the Jury

DR. HURT COULD NOT SAY POSITIVELY THAT MARY PHAGAN HAD BEEN ASSAULTED BEFORE DEATH

Both the Other Two Witnesses Gave Their Opinion in the Affirmative–Complete Summary of Evidence on Which the Grand Jury Decided That Frank Must Stand Trial for Death of Girl–Has Lee Given New Evidence to His Attorney?

While Solicitor General H. M. Dorsey will make no statement, it is undoubtedly true that the state did not show "its hand" even in the secrecy of the grand jury room to secure the indictment Saturday of Leo M. Frank on the charge of murdering Mary Phagan.

Sharing interest with the returning of a true bill against the factory superintendent, is the sensational eleventh hour statement of James Conley that he wrote certain notes similar in language to those found by the murdered Mary Phagan at Mr. Frank's dictation.

Despite the fact that Conley stuck to his story when vigorously cross examined by Solicitor Dorsey, it is said that the official does not fully credit the negro's sensational statement.

It was not necessary to put the negro before the grand jury and Mr. Dorsey did not go into the details of his statement until after the true bill had been returned.

Even then he did not consider Conley's statement of sufficient importance to secure from a safety deposit vault the notes found by the slain girl's body, and they have never been offered Conley for identification.

The effect of the negro's statement on the state's whole case is known to the solicitor alone. Its influence is apparently disturbing, as it has been said that the solicitor was preparing to introduce finger print and handwriting experts in an effort to show that Frank himself wrote the words on the two sheets of paper found in the basement of the National Pencil factory on the morning of April 27.

If Conley's story can not be shaken, the experts will not be needed unless it is to swear to the similarity of his handwriting to that of the notes.

It is a significant fact that the renewed interest of the detectives in Conley came after P. A. Flak, the finger print expert, had examined the notes and the prints of the fingers of the several people held in connection with the case.

It has been learned that no documentary evidence, not even the notes, themselves, was produced before the grand jury which returned a true bill charging Leo. M. Frank with the murder.

Neither Frank's own statement, nor the statement of Newt Lee to the coroner's jury was used.

The only "expert" testimony before the grand jury was that of Dr. J. W. Hurt, the county physician. Dr. Hurt, it is said, couldn't tell the grand jurors whether or not Mary Phagan had been criminally assaulted before she was strangled to death.

This point, it is said, was dealt with by the testimony of Police Sergeant Dobbs, who was among those who first inspected the body, and W. H. Gheesling, of the Bloomfield Undertaking establishment, who prepared Mary Phagan's body for burial.

In the opinion of both of these men, although neither has especial medical knowledge, the girl was assaulted.

RESUME OF EVIDENCE.

A resume of the evidence, so far as the reporters have been able to learn, which was introduced before the grand jury is as follows: Dr. J. W. Hurt told the condition of the slain girl's body without going into details, it is said, of the result of the exhumations; Police Sergeant Dobbs told of the demeanor of the negro Lee, the position of the body, and other details relative to its finding by the police in the pencil factory basement.

The testimony of Detective J. N. Starnes, who was on the stand Friday, is an unknown quantity. Starnes has been working directly with the solicitor general and has been on the case from the first.

R. P. Barrett, employe of the factory, told of finding the girl's hair and the supposed blood spots near it in the machine room of the factory, where, according to the theory of the state, Mary Phagan was first approached by her assailant.

W. W. Rogers, former county policeman, told of the demeanor of Frank when first interviewed by the police after the tragedy, and of circumstances surrounding Frank's first view of Mary Phagan's body at the morgue in the undertaking establishment. He told also of Frank's changing the tape on the time clock Sunday after the tragedy.

Miss Grace Hix, the young lady who worked at a machine next to Lee's desk in the factory, told of first identifying her friend's dead body.

E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the factory, told of the condition of the elevator on the day of the tragedy and the following morning. So far as Holloway could tell, the elevator had not been moved.

H. R. Darley, general foreman at the factory, testified, but the substance of his statement has never been made public. Darley just after the tragedy professed ignorance of circumstances bearing on it.

Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, told of the interview which Frank and Newt Lee held in the cell at police headquarters when the negro is alleged to have practically charged his superintendent with the crime, and when Frank is alleged to have told the negro not to discuss the subject any more.

R. B. Haslett, city detective, testified as to the demeanor of Frank when he was placed under arrest on the Tuesday following the tragedy.

FOUND NO ONE IN OFFICE.

Miss Monteen Stover, former employe of the factory, testified that she went to the factory about 12:10 o'clock on the day of the tragedy and just a few minutes after Mary Phagan went there for her pay envelope, and found no one in the office. After waiting some time, Miss Stover says she left the factory as she did not return until the Saturday after the tragedy, when she got the pay envelope for which she made the trip to the factory on Memorial day.

M. Gantt testified that Frank was extremely nervous when he met him at the door of the factory at 6 o'clock on the evening of the tragedy.

W. H. Gheesland, an undertaker, testified that in his opinion Mary Phagan was assaulted before she met her death and he gave it as his opinion that the girl had been dead a number of hours before the body was found.

After a short discussion in which the point that an indictment is by no means a conviction was made, a true bill was returned against Leo M. Frank and the bill against Newt Lee was left untouched. The jurors deliberated only five minutes.

Lee will undoubtedly remain a while in jail.

HAS LEE TALKED?

His lawyer Bernard L. Chappell says he doesn't want him out and gives the sensational reason that the murderer of Mary Phagan would seek to influence the negro's testimony in some way. This naturally leads to the inference that Lee has told more than has ever been made public and probably he has told more to his lawyer than to the police despite their vigorous examination.

Solicitor Dorsey states that he did not ask the grand jury to take any action on the negro's case. Lee has never been held in the light of a principal by the police who have always contended that Frank is responsible for the death of Mary Phagan. Certainly the negro will remain in jail until after the trial of Frank which will probably be set for the third week in June.

The fact that no effort was made to put character witnesses before the grand jury is not considered unusual and in all probability the character

Department at Washington Orders Investigation of the Charges of Insubordination Which Has Hurt Service

"I HADN'T HEARD OF IT," DECLARES POSTMASTER

Thinks Some Person, "Disgruntled Over Discharge," May Mave Preferred Charge, Welcomes Investigation

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—That he is making a personal inquiry into the conduct and management of the Atlanta postoffice as a result of charges of insubordination among the clerks and general lack of discipline in the office was admitted tonight by First Assistant Postmaster General Daniel C. Roper.

It was learned further, on good authority, that postoffice inspectors have been, or will be, ordered by Postmaster General Burleson to make a sweeping, though none the less fair and impartial, investigation of conditions as they now prevail in the office and as they have prevailed for months past.

While no one in authority in the postoffice department will admit it, the belief is that the double-barreled investigation of the Atlanta office foreshadows the early removal of Hugh L. McKee, the postmaster. Mr. McKee's term of office does not expire until January 6, 1914.

PIER COLLAPSES, DASHING HUMAN BURDEN TO DEATH

Thirt--three Dead and Scores Injured in Disaster at Long Beach

(By Associated Press.)

LONG BEACH, Cal., May 24.—Too weak to uphold the burde nof nearly 10,000 human beings assembled for the festivities of "British Empire Day" the land end of the big double decked municipal pier in front of the city auditorium collapsed today. Hundreds of persons on the top deck were plunged on the heads of other hundreds crowded on the second deck. The lower deck then gave way, and all were dropped down a chute of shattered woodwork to the tide washed sands, twenty-five feet below.

Thirty-three persons—mostly women, were killed by the shivered timeber or crushed to death by the falling bodies of companions and friends. Fifty more were seriously injured, while hysteria and freight caused the disabling of scores of others.

A section of the auditorium, which went down in the crash, and the debris from it was added to the wreck that fell on top of the injured and dead.

MANY HEADS MAY FALL IN RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE

Shakeup to Touch George W. Pepper and Chas. Rager of Atlanta, It Is Said.

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24.—A general reorganization of the railway mail service which will include the removal of General Superintendent Theodore Ingalls, of Kentucky, and the demotion or transfer of six or seven division superintendents, is planned by the postoffice department.

The plan will be put in operation just as soon as its details have been worked out and perfected. George W. Pepper, of the fourth division, which includes the states of Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida, will, it is parative strangers to the southern division superintendents to lose out in the general shake-up. His chief clerk, Charles Rager, will also go, it is believed.

Mr. Pepper's headquarters are in Atlanta. Both he and Mr. Rager are com-

BROYLES ENDS WAIT AND ORDERS ARREST OF MAYOR'S PROTEGE

Dr. W. D. Roper, Convicted on Liquor Charges, Trundled to Stockade for Lack of $500 Fine

"MAYOR MUST PUT HIS CLEMENCY IN WRITING"

Recorder Broyles Takes Radical Step to Force Issue on Temporizing Methods – He Scores Mayor Again

Coincidental with the alleged attack upon Mayor Woodward and the hot retort of the police head, City Recorder Nash R. Broyles further muddled Atlanta's social mix-up Saturday afternoon when he ordered the arrest of Dr. W. D. Roper, proprietor of a drug store at Wall and Pryor streets.

Dr Roper, who was convicted of having whiskey in his place of business for the purpose of sale and of disposing of the liquor, was tried in police court several months ago and found guilty. He fought through the higher courts a long legal battle to have the sentence reversed, and lost. Two months ago the court of appeals handed down a decision sustaining Recorder Broyles.

Then Mayor Woodward stepped in. The city's executive instructed Chief of Police Beavers not to molest Roper because he was considering a pardon or reduction of sentence for the druggist. Obeying the admonition Chief Beavers did not arrest Roper.

Saturday afternoon Recorder Broyles made a written request to the police head that Roper be arrested and made to pay the $500 fine imposed upon him or serve thirty days in the stockade in lieu thereof. The offender was taken into custody immediately by Detective Chandler.

SCORES MAYOR WOODWARD.

Recorder Broyles followed his action by condemning strongly the attitude of Mayor Woodward, in a statement to The Journal.

"Mayor Woodward has the right under the city charter to exercise the power of pardon or reduction of fines in police court cases without my recommendation," said Recorder Broyles, "but he has no legal right to wait two or three months before making such a decision. Under the law he is entitled to

COLYAR TELLS WHERE HE AND COL FELDER OUGHT TO BE FOR GOOD OF SOCIETY

Editor The Journal:

I herewith hand you a telegram in answer to one that I got Chief of Police Beavers to send, which explains one of Thomas B. Felder's visions, which appeared in the Morning Eye-Opener of Saturday, and from my relations and connections with this astute and would-be bribe-giver, my conscience tells me that society at large would be better off if T. B. Felder and myself were both in Sing Sing.

"FELDER IS THE MOUTHPIECE OF THE VICE GANG," DECLARES CHIEF OF POLICE JAS. L. BEAVERS

"This Is the First Gun in a Fight to Oust Me From Office," Says the Chief in an Interview Given Out Saturday Afternoon – "This Issue Is Between the Decent People and the Allies of Vice Who Have Controlled the City Politically for Years"

MAYOR WOODWARD SAYS HE'S AGAINST BEAVERS, BUT NOT IN ANY CONSPIRACY TO REMOVE HIM FROM OFFICE

Says He Differs With the Chief on Policy, Not Personally. The Mayor Says Recent Dictograph Episode Has Destroyed His Belief in the Efficacy of That Ingenious Instrument – Charles C. Jones Denies Any Part in Fight to Remove Chief

As one of the many outgrowths of the alleged dictographed conversations of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, Mayor Woodward, Charlie C. Jones and E. O. Miles, in which they are quoted as seeking evidence to impeach Police Chief James L. Beavers and Detective Chief N. A. Lanford, Chief Beavers late Saturday afternoon gave out a red-hot statement in which he charged that the vice gangsters were conspiring to oust him from office because of his activity in closing up Atlanta's restricted district.

The chief declared that Colonel Felder was the mouthpiece and agent of the gang which seeks his scalp. He said this gang was endeavoring to get him in a corner and that the fight now on and that it would be a fight to the finish.

According to Chief Beavers he has been informed that checks aggregating $1,500 have been deposited to be given over to any woman who could get him into a room with her.

"The houses have been closed eight months and they will remain closed as long as I am chief," he says. "Those fighting me will resort to any political trick to bring my undoing. I am fully advised as to what they are doing and all I ask is that the decent people of this city continue to give me their support."

CHIEF BEAVERS' STATEMENT.

Following is the statement issued by Chief Beavers:

"It's a fight to the finish. The battle is on. I am going to force the vice gangsters into the open. This is the first gun in an attempt to get me out of office. I have shot into their hole so hot that they've got to come out.

"Felder was hit first and it was so warm for the others that they had to show their hand. The issue is now between the decent people of the city and the allies of vice, who have controlled the city politically for years.

"I know that the majority of the people of Atlanta are with me in the fight, and all I want is their continued support.

"This has outgrown a personal issue and any issue which may have developed in connection with the Phagan case, and has assumed the proportions of the hottest fight in the political history of Atlanta.

"I will fight them to a finish if I die in my tracks. They are trying to back me in a corner, and I fight when they try that. Even a rat will to back me in a corner, and I fight when they try that. I do not propose to wait until I am forced too far back into a corner before defending myself.

"MOUTHPIECE OF THE GANSTERS."

"Felder is the mouthpiece of the gang and an agent to get me out of office. The vice gangsters are losing money because of the closing of the restricted district and, while I do not believe they will do anyone bodily harm, I am satisfied they will not hesitate at political trickery.

"I have heard it rumored that three $500 checks have been deposited by three different men interested in houses in the former restricted district for any woman who could get me into a room with her.

"The Atlanta Constitution has never been in sympathy with me in my efforts to eliminate vice. It has done much to hinder and hamper my work. This paper seems to have made a personal fight on me, never losing an opportunity to embarrass my efforts.

"Shortly after the houses were closed I had a talk with Mr. Clark Howell, editor of the Constitution, in his office. During the conversation the question of suppressing vice came up and Mr. Howell remarked that there was no doubt that the houses were then closed, but asked whether I would be able to keep them closed. I replied that they will remain closed as long as I am in office.

"Mr. Howell never commended nor condemned my reply, but ever since that time the Constitution has indirectly used its influence against me."

WOODWARD HOOTS AT THE IDEA OF "PLOT" TO OUST BEAVERS

Mayor Woodward last night was interviewed by a Journal reporter in regard to Chief Beavers' statement.

Among other things, the mayor said:

"I haven't read the chief's statement; but if he charges or intimates that I am connected with or in sympathy with any conspiracy to throw him out of his job, then he is simply mistaken.

"I have not been a supporter of Chief Beavers since I became mayor, but everybody's known that. There's been no secret about it so far as I was concerned. I've got nothing personal against him. I simply differ with his policy in reference to the vice question. And I must say that neither he nor Chief Lanford have elevated the standard of the police department in the way they have handled the situation.

"Now, understand me. I don't want to get into any controversy with Chief Beavers. As I said, I've got nothing against him personally at all. And I have not hampered him or interefeerd with him in his management of the police department, and don't intend to.

"As for the conspiracy which you say he speaks of, there is no such thing so far as I know. I think about all the conspiracy that exists, is what Lanford and his detectives have tried to create.

"It looks like the detectives fixed up what they thought was a nice little trap, and then went to work to catch everybody the yhad it in for—myself included.

"Of course if I had it to do over again I probably wouldn't go to the Williams House. I shouldn't have gone when I did, I reckon, but should have made them see me in my office if they had anything in the way of graft evidence. But I went, and there was absolutely nothing said by me that I am ashamed of or want to conceal from the public.

"'PICTOGRAPHS NO GOOD'

"This much I will say, though, and that is if the dictograph record purporting to show what was said is a fair sample of the dictograph, then it is one of the biggest fakes that ever came down the pike. I used to think it was a fine thing in detecting criminals and such like, but I think now that it must be used by very honest, high-toned men or else it becomes an instrument of crookedness and blackamail.

"Ed Miles simply came to me and said he thought he had found so emevidence of graft in the police department and asked me if I would mind going with him over to the Williams House. I couldn't go right then, but went over later.

"My motive was simply this, and no more: If there was evidence of graft in the police department—real evidence—I wanted it. Certainly I did. A man would be a poor mayor if he wouldn't want to unearth graft, if such existed. I told them if they had anything that would be of value, that is, something that could convince, I thought they needn't be uneasy about Febuary losing his job, or about being paid for their trouble. And by that I didn't mean they'd be paid in a way that was improper. That was all there was to it. They promised to deliver the goods, but I never heard from them any more."

"I'M IN NO CONSPIRACY TO OVERTHROW CHIEF," SAYS JONES

Further than to deny that he is involved in a fight against Chief of Police Beavers or harbors any enmity against that official, Charles C. Jones, proprietor of the Rex beer-beer saloon and a participant in one of the alleged conversations overheard by the police with the dictograph, refused to make any statement Saturday night.

"I have no statement to make," he said.

"The only thing I want to say," he added, "is that I am not in any conspiracy to overthrow Chief Beavers.

"I went to the room in the Williams house N. 2, as callmed. I was invited there by Miles. I went out I wasn't in the place more than five minutes."

Jones also asserts that the record of the dictograph is faulty. He declares that certain parts of his conversation which would explain most of the apparently embarrassing remarks accredited to him have been left out.

GEORGIA TO HAVE FOUR BIG CHAIRMANSHIPS

Congressman William Schley Howard Will Have Place on Military Committee

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The state of Georgia will fare unusually well in the reorganization of the house of representatives by the ways and means committee. She will come out with four desirable chairmanships, and representation of practically all of the important standing commitees, unless the program is changed.

Congressman W. C. Adamson, of the Fourth, and T. W. Hardwick, of the Tenth, will continue as chairmen of the commerce and coinage committees respectively. Congressman Thomas M. Bell, of the Ninth, and Dudley M. Hughes, of the Twelfth, will get chairmanships. The former will head the census committee and the later will be chairman of the education committee. Congressman William Schley Howard, of the Atlanta district, will be given a place on the military affairs committee besides holding what he already has in the way of assignments. He will succeed to the vacancy occasioned by the retirement from this committee of Mr. Hughes.

Mr. Howard feels particularly fortunate in landing this assignment. The military committee deals with many matters of legislation in which the city of Atlanta has a direct interest. Mr. Howard feels that he can be of genuine value through his work on this committee. It will enable him to press legislation for the development of the army post at Fort McPherson and the construction of a military road.

vision. They were transferred there two or three years ago by former Postmaster General Hitchcock, and their service has been unsatisfatcory, it is said.

The complaints against the railway mail service have become general, and the alleged inefficiency has been a source of trouble, annoyance and inconvenience to the entire postal system in the south.

MAY SEGREGATE RACES.

It is believed that one of the inevitable results of the shake-up in the railway mail service especially with reference to the southern division, will be the eventual elimination of the negro from the service.

It is understood that there will be inaugurated with the reorganization a well considered plan to segregate the races. While the purpose of this segregation is not to drive out the negro, it is believed that this will be its ultimate effect.

It is contended with good reason that if the races are segregated and the negroes forced to work in crews to themselves, a vast majority of them will be forced out of the service through inefficiency. It is claimed that most of them lack the knowledge and initiative to meet the rigid requirments of the department, as reflected by the demands of the service and echoed by the civil service regulations.

That the negroes have been able to hold on in the railway mail service is attributed to the fact that, under the Hitchcock regime, they were sandwiched in between competent and efficient white clerks in the mail cars. Their delinquencies thus escaped detection.

No other division of the postoffice department has been so loaded with negroes as has the railway mail service. It is contended by persons who have studied conditions that the ascendency of the negro as a race in the railway mail service, coupled with the parsimonious policy of the Hitchcock administration has done more to cripple the postal service than any other thing.

MAIL CLERKS' CONFERENCE.

Pending the general reorganization of the service, efforts will be made by the department to improve the service much as possible under existing conditions. A delegation of railway mail clerks from the fourth division are expected to appear Monday before the second assistant postmaster general for a conference concerning conditions in that territory.

John Hogan, a railway mail clerk of Atlanta, will head the delegation, which will have the support of the senators and congressmen from Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida. This delegation will request that the service be restored to its condition before Hitchcock's economy knife dealt it a blow. The department will be asked to increase the force of clerks on the heavy runs, to allow more car space for the work, etc.

retention. Subsequent developments tend to show, however, that Mr. Sutton came to Washington for a conference with postoffice officials concerning conditions at the Atlanta office. It is understood that he was directed to prosecute a vigorous inquiry into charges that have been filed with the department.

Inspector R. E. Barry will, it is understood, co-operate with Sutton in the investigation of the office, and if their report sustains the charges that have been made, it is not improbable that others besides Postmaster McKee will be removed.

HOKE SMITH RETICENT.

Senator Hoke Smith and Congressman William Schley Howard were non-committal tonight when asked about the investigation. Other than to admit that they "understood" that an inquiry had been ordered, or might be ordered, they would not comment on alleged conditions.

It was impossible to ascertain from postal authorities tonight the exact nature of the alleged insubordination and lax discipline in the office. It is understood, however, that there has been much friction among clerks in the office, and that all of this has made for inefficiency and demoralization, to the injury of the service.

"First I've Heard of Charges," Says McKee

The foregoing dispatch was read to Postmaster McKee over the telephone last night and he made the following statement:

"This is the first I have heard of charges of insubordination being preferred against the office.

"If any clerks are insubordinate, they are removed upon my recommendation without an investigation. A number have been removed at various times on my recommendation for the good of the service. The department has never turned me down yet, and I say this for the new Democratic administration as well as for the previous administration.

"I don't know who could have preferred the charges, unless it may have been some disgruntled person who was discharged. Things like this often happen, you know, in other lines of business as well as postoffices.

"So far as an investigation is concerned, I am not afraid of one at all. Provided, of course, it is fair and impartial, and that is the only kind I expect from the department.

ASKED FOR INSPECTION.

"A month or so ago I went to Washington to see Postmaster General Burleson. I told him in my opinion a postoffice ought to be inspected and checked up once a year at least, and that I'd like for him to have the Atlanta office inspected as soon as possible. His reply was that he didn't expect to be able to have it done very soon, because there were so many other offices which needed it worse than mine.

"In addition to what I say about regular inspections, I had two special reasons for wanting this one. I wanted, first, to show the department what good service the office is giving the public. And I wanted, second, to show the department that we need additional men. The inspection hasn't been made yet. I am satisfied that when it is made, the result will be a recommendation to the department to give us more help.

"The Atlanta postoffice is giving good service, and I believe the public agrees with me when I say so.

"I'd like to read you a letter I got today. Of course it doesn't touch on the service as a whole, but it shows the special efforts we are making to give the best service possible."

THANKS FROM PRESBYTERIANS.

The letter was one from Rev. Jere A. Moore, D.D., secretary of the executive comittee which prepared for the three geral Presbyterian assemblies. It was as follows:

"Mr. Hugh McKee, Postmaster:

"My dear Mr. McKee—In behalf of our general assemblie's executive committee, I extend to you and to the men of the postoffice our hearty appreciation of the service rendeerd by the postoffice in handling the mail at the assembly churches.

"I would also call your attention to the fact that the assemblies before adjourning passed resolutions of thanks to the postoffice for its kindness and service rendered.

"Most respectfully,

(Signed.) "JERE A. MOORE."

FAVORABLE COMMENT ON SENATOR BACON'S BILL

It Is Generally Believed That Measure to Create Embassy Will Pass

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Bacon believes that the bill which he has introduced to increase the rank of the American legation in Spain to an embassy will be passed by congress. The comment invited by the bill is entirely favorable. It is recognized as a move on the part of the United States to wipe out the last vestige of feeling resulting from the Spanish-American war. As such, it is believed that the monarchy of Spain will accept it and that the result will promote a warmer feeling of friendship between the people of the two nations.

The commercial aspect of Senator Bacon's proposal is, however, more important to the American nation. The importance of his bill in this light will be better appreciated when it is considered that Spain is the mother of most of the South and Central American republics, and that an act of generosity by the United States toward Spain cannot but strike a responsive chord in the sentimental people to the south. The United States just now is seeking very hard to improve its relations with the southern countries, with a view to increasing trade.

Only ten nations of the world are recognized by the American government with ambassadors. They are Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria Turkey, Italy, Russia, Mexico, Brazil, Japan.

Florida Senators Win Victory Over House in Big Baseball Battle

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 24.—A great crowd witnessed the game of baseball between select members of the house and senate this afternoon with Governor Trammell as umpire of the strikes and balls and Attorney General Tom West as umpire of base decisions. Tomlin, Taylor and one or two other real baseball players retired from the game after two innings to give the other members a chance to show their prowess, and it was at this stage that the house began to lose. The result was that they were recalled. The final score was 12 to 11 in favor of the senate.

The house and senate devoted the day to local bills and passed some measures locally important, including the Petersburg city limits extension bill. The most important development of the day perhaps was the turn taken in the house on the drainage bonding measure.

MANCHESTER

IS THE PLACE

If Horace Greely lived today he would say: "Go South, young man." This is the field of opportunity, and Manchester is the flower of the field. You can do better at Manchester.

Nature has blessed Manchester with a glorious climate, healthful waters and an invigorating atmosphere; pioneers of progress have selected it as a railroad center for the lines which stretch into the coal and iron fields of Alabama, the trade centers of the east and middle west and the seaboard of the Atlantic Ocean. Man has taken advantage of these natural and geographical gifts and added varied opportunities for the bread winner; comforts and conveniences of the city for his wife, and furnished free schooling for his children.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE ANSWER BOOK

In all Booklovers' Campaigns the big prize winners in nearly every case were those who used an Answer Book.

And here is the reason:

When they have secured their Answer Book they are under no more expense to submit the full ten answers to each prize picture. Without the Answer Book they are figuring every extra answer at two cents each and the natural thing for them to do is hold down to one or two answers on each picture.

But the owner of an Answer Book does not need to figure that way and can turn in the full set of 750 answers using only one of each picture and writing the answers opposite each picture in the Answer Book.

The Answer Book plan is the nearest way to submit your answers and costs you less than the picture and coupon method. You can secure one at The Journal office for 50c or by mail 60c. With it you will receive the first 35 pictures free.

Now is the time to get your Answer Book and increase your chances of winning a big prize.

CHIEF LANFORD CALLS FELDER'S CHARGES FALSE

Denies That Police Have Suppressed Evidence in the Phagan Mystery

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford, when apprised of Colonel Felder's statement as issued Saturday afternoon to the effect that the police had plotted to protect and shield the slayers of Mary Phagan, pronounced the charges as absurd as they were false.

In replying to Colonel Felder's assertion that Chief Lanfor and some of the men on the detective force had banded themselves with the Pinkertons to suppress evidence in the Phagan case the minute Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee were placed under arrest, Chief Lanford said:

"The people of Atlanta themselves can judge just how much evidence we have suppressed on Frank and Lee from the result of the Phagan investigation thus far. Our efforts have been to find the slayer of Mary Phagan at any event and we believe that we have succeeded.

"The mere fact that my men worked with the Pinkertons spells nothing sinister. The Pinkertons are employed by the National Pencil company, it is true, but they are employed only to find the murderer of Mary Phagan. Like the city detective department the Pinkertons believe they have succeeded.

"At any event, no matter what Tom Felder may charge against this or any other department of the police, future developments in the Phagan case will vindicate utterly the position of the police.

THE COLEMAN AFFIDAVIT.

On Colonel Felder's accusation that the affidavit of J. W. Coleman imputed to repudiate Felder's employment in the case, was forced from Coleman by Chief Lanford, the head of the detectives said:

"I know absolutely nothing of the Coleman affidavit until it came to my office duly signed. Even then I objected to the fact that it was sworn to by C. C. Febuary, a police stenographer, who happens also to be a notary. As a result, I made m men take it back and have it attested by a notary who had no police connections.

"That is the full story of the Coleman statement. It was pmade voluntarily."

"As for any attempt on my part or the part of any of my men to hurt the case of the state against Leo M. Frank at this late hour, as charged by Colonel Felder, I have only this to say:

"When Colonel Felder intimates that Mrs. Formby, who made an affidavit to the effect that Frank phoned for a room for himself and a girl on the afternoon of the murder, was dug up by the detective department to kill the state's theory that the murder occurred in the afternoon, he knows it is untrue.

"I was informed by a friend that Mrs. Formby was in possession of valuable information relating to the Phagan case. I sent Detectives Norris and Chewning to see her and they reported that she asserted Frank had called her on the phone Saturday, April 26 at 6 o'clock, asked for a room for himself and a girl.

"I went to see Mrs. Fomby and she told me the same story. I asked her if she objected to coming to police headquarters the following morning and putting her statement in legal form. She said she would.

"As a result, Mrs. Fromby came to police headquarters and made the affidavit."

A VOLUNTARY CONFESSION.

Chief Lanford then said that the confession of Conley relative to the notes found in the pencil factory was made by the negro voluntarily.

"Saturday morning," he said, "Conley sent for Detective John Black, saying that he had something he wanted to tell Black when down to the cell and the negro opened up. He told Black that he had written the notes at Frank's dictation and also that Frank had passed the latter was arrested. the pencil factory and whispered to him 'to be a good boy and everything would come out all right.'

"The police never claimed that Conley had confessed to the killing, he merely talked of the notes.

"It is easy for anyone to see that there is no police plot to protect Frank or Lee, or both, or anyone, for that matter. Colonel Felder's statement is absurd, but he had to say something."

HERE IS GRAND JURY INDICTMENT CHARGING LEO M. FRANK WITH MURDER

STATE OF GEORGIA, Bill of Indictment
FULTON, COUNTY.

Foreman, L. B. Bell

2	A. D. Adair Jr	13	A. L. Smithman
3	T. O. H. Arnus	14	Thos. Hines
4	B. F. Bell	15	R. G. Hasbrand

6	Bob Benjamin	17	W. L. Pray
7	Wm E. Rimr	18	R. A. Redding

10	Warner Duncan	21	Albert Boylston
11	Geo. A. Gushin	22
12	B. C. Glass	23

In the name and behalf of the citizens of Georgia, charge and accuse LEO M. FRANK of the County and State aforesaid, with the offense of MURDER for that the said LEO M. FRANK in the County aforesaid on the 26 th. day of April, in the year of our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Thirteen, with force and arms did unlawfully and with malice aforethought kill and murder one Mary Phagan by then and there choking her, the said Mary Phagan, with a cord placed around her neck, contrary to the laws of said State, the good order, peace and dignity thereof.

Hugh M. Dorsey, Solicitor-General
J. A. Starnes, Prosecutor

Fulton Superior Court, 1913

The above is a facsimile of the bill of indictment returned by the Fulton county grand jury accusing Leo M. Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan on April 26.

As an indictment must set out the particular way in which it is charged that a crime was committed, this bill charges that Frank killed the girl by choking her with a cord placed around her neck.

Twenty-one of the twenty-three members of the grand judy signed the indictment, the other two being absent.

a reasonable time. Two months is not a reasonable time.

"Mayor Woodward must toe the scratch. He has to face the music. And he has got to make a written record of these actions of his if he expects them to hold water in my court.

"If he wants to pardon all the blind tigers who are convicted regularly under the laws, why, let him do so. He has that right under the city charter. But if he is going to defeat the ends of justice by exercising this right promiscously and injudiciously, let him do it in a legal way and decide on his pardons and reductions in a reasonable time.

SAME MEDICINE FOR OTHERS.

"There are a number of similar cases against violators of the liquor law in which the defendants now are roaming at large under the protection of the mayor. If he doesn't take action in a reasonable time—either pardon them, reduce their fines, or let my judgment stand—I am going to order all of them arrested as in the case of Dr. Roper."

Following his arrest Dr. Roper was taken to the police station. He failed to pay his fine and less than half an hour later he was on his way to the city stockade. Unless the $500 is paid he will remain there for thirty days.

In a caustic interview published by The Journal, Friday, Recorder Broyles severely scored Mayor Woodward for his attitude toward violators of the liquor law, and strongly intimated that it is the aim of the city executive to protect this class. He went so far as to say that Mayor Woodward's action defeated the ends of justice, hampered the police in their work of ridding the city of vice, and encouraged law violators.

Volcanoes Smoking

SEATTLE, Wash., May 24.—Advices from Alaska say that four of the great volcanoes of the Alaska peninsula and the Aleutian archipelago are smoking. They are Katmai, which broke into violent eruption June 6 last after slumbering for generations; Pawloff, which always sends up a column; Shisaldin, which has awakened after a sleep of two years and Ilimea. Three distinct columns are rising from the crater of Katmai and the spreading smoke causes a yellow haze for a radius of 200 miles.

STATE DIDN'T SHOW ITS CASE TO SECURE INDICTMENT OF LEO M. FRANK

witnesses will never testify against the factory superintendent.

The grand jury investigation still leaves as an unknown quantity the results of the analysis of the blood stains on the shirt of Newt Lee, on the shirt of the negro Conley, and on the floor of the machine room. Of especial interest is this analysis since the rumor that blood, not rust, as the detectives supposed, was found on James Conley's shirt.

Solicitor Dorsey states that he himself does not know the result of the two post mortems performed by Dr. H. F. Harris, of the state board of health, who twice exhumed Mary Phagan's body.

Chief of Detectives Newpo Lanford characterizes the returning of the indictment against Mr. Frank after so few witnesses had been heard as a triumph for the detctive department, and declares that the bill was secured without the state having to expose a big part of its case against the accused factory superintendent.

CITIZENS DENY AUTHORITY FOR USING THEIR NAMES

Capt. English, Robt. F. Maddox and Others Comment on Dictograph Interview

Captain James W. English, president of the Fourth National bank, Saturday gave The Journal a statement to the effect that he has had no connection whatever with Attorney Thomas B. Felder's investigation of the Mary Phagan murder mystery.

Robert F. Maddox, vice president of the American National bank, made a similar statement.

Captain English said:

"I don't know what Mr. Felder could have had in mind when he made the statement, if he did make it, that I, among other citizens, was backing him in his efforts to solve the Mary Phagan murder mystery. I never had a conversation with him or with anyone representing him in regard to the Phagan case. In fact, I have not conferred with anyone about the case, beyond casually asking some of the city detectives their theory of the case, and casual discussion of the case with friends. I want to make it clear that I have never talked with Mr. Felder, with anyone representing him, or with anyone associated with him, in regard to his efforts to discover the guilty party."

Mr. Maddox said:

"I don't know whether Mr. Felder made the statement, attributed to him in the dictograph manuscript or not. So far as I am concerned, I have had no connection whatever either directly or indirectly with Mr. Felder's investigation of the Phagan case."

The statement to which the above statements are made in reply, is that part of the dictograph record where Mr. Felder is quoted as telling Febuary and Coylar that some of the best citizens in Atlanta were backing him (Felder) in his investigation, and as mentioning the names of Captain English and Mr. Maddox.

GOVERNOR BROWN DECLINES TO COMMENT.

Governor oJseph M. Brown declined to comment on the alleged statement of Mr. Felder to the effect that no matter who was governor he would be able to have any man turned loose who got the papers for him. "I do not believe that the people of the state of Georgia expect a statement from me," said the governor.

In this connection the statement of Governor-elect John H. Slaton is in substance that of Governor Brown. "I do not think any reply by Mr. Felder is expected of me. He has never approached me on the question."

Solicitor Hugh Dorsey said:

"Why, there is no use for me to deny any such remarks as those attributed to Colonel Felder, and I certainly do not wish to express my opinion in the matter. Colonel Felder never expressed to me any intention of taking steps to attempt to show graft or fraud on the part of the city police or detectives."

Our Prices and Plans
Attractive to Business Men

This is proven by the rapid strides of our business and the number of transactions that we have with business men who carefully consider before they purchase property.

Our plans are clean cut, based upon accurate business principles carefully figured, and assure against loss or dissatisfaction.

Our diamonds are as cashable as a certified check at any time within one year of purchase, as we guarantee to buy back at ninety cents on the dollar.

We also take back our diamonds at full purchase price in part payment on larger stones at any time, and allow, in addition, any meantime advance in price, as we think this gain belongs to our customer.

This means that you can wear a hundred dollar diamond a whole year at a cost of less than a dollar a month; or that it is worth a hundred dollar bill to you whenever you want to gratify your taste for a larger diamond, and that you receive the benefit of any advance in values.

Isn't it gratifying to be constantly assured of the value of your property?

Quality and weight, and prices really the lowest, all in plain figures from which we never vary, is doubly assuring and argues contented possession.

Our prices are figured without regard for the profit of a single sale, but to make satisfied customers and to realize from the greatest amount of business.

COLYAR IMPUTES ARREST TO FELDER CONSPIRACY

Knoxville Charge Against Him Not Pressed for More Than Four Years

A. S. Colyar was detained late Saturday afternoon on the request of E. D. Connors, chief of police of Knoxville, Tenn., to face an indictment charging forgery returned four years ago by the grand jury at that city. The amount involved is $90.

Colyar hotly maintains that his arrest is a plot of Colonel T. B. Felder's to get him out of town. He declares that the Knoxville official was prompted to press the old charge against him by a friend of Felder's.

Colyar was taken into custody by city detectives on the street and accompanied them to police headquarters. He was closeted with Chief of Police Kearns and Chief of Detectives Lanford for nearly an hour. Later he secured bond and was allowed his liberty.

SAYS FELDER CAUSED ARREST.

"I have been in Knoxville many times since the indictment was returned against me," Colyar told Chief Kearns, "and there never was any attempt to press the charge or arrest me. If Felder had not devised the plot, no action would have been taken at this time."

Colyar says that the charge of forgery grew out of the complaint of a woman of questionable character in the Tennessee city. His statement was corroborated by the chief of police of Knoxville in a long distance message to Chief Kearns. He said that about four years ago he was called in to draw up her will, and that she paid him for the work in a check for $90. The check, he says, passed through several hands and was honored at the bank. The woman did not allege that it was a forged paper until six months later, he maintains.

CHIEF BEAVERS' STATEMENT.

To set at rest all speculations and rumors, Chief of Police Beavers gave out the following statement Saturday afternoon outlining the connection of A. S. Colyar with the recent sensational developments.

"I first met Mr. Colyar on Monday, May 5. Detective Ogburn came to me and told me that he had met a man on the street who he thought could get valuable information in the Phagan case and these matters which have developed later. He named Colyar and said he had known him for several years.

"I told Detective Ogburn to have Colyar call on me in my office. Colyar refused to come and I went to his room in the Williams house No. 2. He told me then that he thought he could get valuable information for me and I told him if he could get it in a legitimate and honest way to go ahead.

"That is the extent of my personal acquaintance with Colyar. I didn't speak to him again until today, although I was, of course, advised of his activity and the part he took in the case by Chief of Detectives Lanford."

COLYAR AIDS DETECTIVES.

Chief Lanford, in commenting on Colyar's connection with the detective department, said that he was by no means an agent of the city and that he had only been with the detectives because it was thought his aid would be valuable. "We are always ready to accept any aid of real value," said the chief, "and we did not, of course, refuse his.

"He said that he had been associated with Colonel Felder for several years and that the latter owed him a considerable sum of money for copying and writing he had done for him in legal cases. I think he said he did $12,000 worth of work and received only $600 for it.

"I had several conferences with Mr. Colyar and he always was square in his dealings with me.

"In connection with the charges of Colonel Felder I would like to ask the colonel why, if he thought Colyar a crook and all the rest of the things he called him, he let himself be led into a trap?"

PISTOLS USED TO STOP THIEF ON DECATUR STREET

A There was excitement a-plenty on Decatur street about 4:30 Saturday afternoon, when Robert Gibson, a dusky denizen of the section around Rutter street, made a well-executed side-swipe at a knotted handkerchief, containing about $1.50 and with which Lou Taylor, an acquaintance, was proceeding toward her domicile at 29 Hilliard street. Before Lou could discover who was the bold depredator, Robert had covered half the two blocks to the police station, and had a crowd of some twenty-five or thirty behind him.

Attracted by the noise and shouting, several policemen joined in when he reached the vicinity of the barracks, and ten or twelve shots were fired in the direction of the negro, although no one of the large crowd was hit. The negro landed into a negro dive and was dragged out by the cops and placed under arrest.

HERE ARE AFFIDAVITS SUBMITTED BY COL. FELDER

Following are five affidavits submitted to the newspapers by Colonel Thomas B. Felder, of Atlanta, for publication by Williams attorneys answering the dictograph quotations.

First appears the affidavit of C. W. Teble, representative of the Burns detective agency investigating the murder of Mary Phagan. Second is that of W. A. Milner, an attorney of Cartersville. Third comes that of W. D. Rhea, formerly of Nashville. Fourth, is the deposition of C. R. Atchison, formerly of Nashville. And fifth comes the affidavit of E. W. McNeal, formerly of Nashville.

Following is Mr. Teble's affidavit:

MR. TOBIE'S AFFIDAVIT.

"GEORGIA—Fulton County:

"Personally appeared before the undersigned, an officer authorized by law to administer oaths, C. W. Teble, who first being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is a citizen of Chicago, with offices in the First National Bank building of that city, and that he is manager of the criminal department, west, of the William J. Burns National Detective agency; that he has occupied this position for the past ten months; that he has been connected with the William J. Burns National Detective agency, as manager of the Tillotson Detective agency, correspondents of the William J. Burns National Detective agency; that prior to the time deponent was connected with the Pinkerton National Detective agency for a period of nine (9) years; that he severed his connection with the Pinkerton National Detective agency in May, 1909.

WAS NOT DISCHARGED.

"Deponent says on oath that the statement that he was discharged by said agency is utterly, absolutely and deliberately false; that he resigned from said agency, and not under compulsion, but of his own volition.

"Deponent further says on oath that during the period of his labors as a detective, covering the United States, Canada and some of the foreign countries, his work has never been brought into question, and his character as a man and detective has never been assailed.

Deponent further says on oath that about two weeks ago he was instructed by Raymond J. Burns, the secretary and treasurer of the William J. Burns National Detective agency, who was acting under instructions from his office, to come to Atlanta on a murder case and report to Colonel Felder. Arriving in Atlanta, he had a conference with Colonel Felder, and immediately entered upon the work at hand. Later he had a lengthy conference with Colonel Felder and Hon. Luther Z. Rosser.

NO IMPROPER REQUEST. . . .

"Deponent further says on oath that for the past ten days he has been diligently at work in an effort to unearth the Phagan murderer or murderers; that during this time no hint, suggestion or proposition has been made to him by either Jew or Gentile, man, woman or child, to work in the interest of Frank, or any other suspect; that during this period he has acted conscientiously, faithfully and diligently in an effort to ferret out the mystery and place the crime upon the shoulders of the guilty party. At no time has deponent ever been requested, required or instructed to investigate the police or the detective department, or in short, to perform any other duty in connection with his stay in Atlanta, except the duty which brought him to this city; namely, the investigation of the Mary Phagan case.

"DELIBERATE FALSEHOOD."

"Deponent further says on oath that the statement imputed by an afternoon paper to Colonel Felder to the effect that I was going to Colonel Felder's office "to meet a committee of citizens, among whom were Mr. Hirsch, Mr. Meyer and Mr. Greenstein, and several other prominent Jews in the city" is a deliberate, malicious and willful falsehood. As a matter of fact, I never heard of either one of these gentlemen until I read their name in the papers on yesterday afternoon, and I have never met them or either of them at Colonel Felder's office, or elsewhere, and deponent positively believes that this statement is made as a part of a well-planned conspiracy to discredit his efforts, and the efforts of Colonel Felder, to unearth the Phagan murderer or murderers.

"Deponent further said on oath that he never laid eyes on Colyar in his life until he met him at the office of Col. T. B. Felder on Sunday evening, May 18.

FIRST MET COLYAR.

At the time of deponent's arrival at said office, there conference between Colyar and Colonel Felder, which had evidently been brief, was drawing to a close, and at Colyar's invitation, I made an appointment to meet him at the Piedmont hotel on the following morning, as he stated that he had very important information in connection with the Phagan case, which he desired to impart to deponent. After meeting at the Piedmont hotel the said Colyar stated to deponent that he had a number of affidavits involving the chief of police and chief of detectives which he desired to submit to him; that he was not here on that mission, and declined to examine the affidavits, whereupon the said Colyar stated to said deponent that the city police and detective departments were undertaking to discredit Colonel Felder's, Solicitor General Dorsey's and deponent's efforts, and added that deponent had three things to fight, to wit: jealousy, politics and graft, and repeated it by saying, "Remember now, you are up against J. P. & N." Deponent reached the conclusion almost instantly that this man was a crook and humbug, and thereupon ended the interview abruptly, and although he has received numerous telephonic communications from him since, he has declined to meet him at his hotel or elsewhere in the city of Atlanta.

HAS BEEN "BLOCKED."

"Deponent further says on oath that he is advised and believes that in his diligent efforts to unravel the Phagan mystery he has been obstructed by some secret agency at every "turn of the road." In his efforts to interview witnesses he has found them reluctant to give information and to give him necessary information, with the result that deponent reached the conclusion that said witnesses were acting under instructions in their conduct.

"Deponent further says on oath that there is nothing in the Phagan mystery with the William J. Burns National, or with the co-operation of the agencies that should be in sympathy with the efforts of the William J. Burns National Detective Agency, guilt should be fastened upon the real criminal by absolute and conclusive evidence.

MR. MILNER'S AFFIDAVIT

"GEORGIA, FULTON COUNTY.

"Following is W. A. Milner's affidavit: "In person before me the undersigned attesting officer, authorized under the laws of said state to administer oaths, appeared W. A. Milner, who first being duly sworn deposes and says: That he is a practicing attorney in Cartersville, Bartow county, Georgia, and that he is a citizen of the United States, Georgia and some of the foreign countries, his work has never been brought into question, and his character as a man and detective has never been assailed.

Deponent further says that said Colyar arose in a religious meeting on one occasion and confessed that he was an ex-convict, which has been informed, and that his record was criminal and that he wished to reform; deponent further says that said Colyar married a lady in Cartersville, and that he bears an unsavory reputation in Bartow county, and that said Colyar could not be believed on oath.

MR. RHEA'S AFFIDAVIT

Following is the affidavit of W. D. Rhea:

"STATE OF GEORGIA, COUNTY OF FULTON.

"Personally appeared before the undersigned officer, authorized by law to administer oaths, W. D. Rhea, who first being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he was formerly a resident in the city of Nashville, and lived there until 1897, and subsequently the deponent resided there from 1902 to 1910, when he removed to the city of Atlanta, where he has resided since at 308 Ponce de Leon avenue, and now at the Georgian Terrace. Deponent further says, and that, that he has known A. S. Colyar for thirty years, during a portion of this time he lived as next door neighbor to him at Nashville, and that he is thoroughly well acquainted with his reputation, honesty, character and veracity. Deponent further says, on oath, that he is in a general way acquainted with the criminal record of this man Colyar, covering the period of his acquaintance with him; that he has from time to time been arrested for divers and sundry crimes, such as forgery, blackmail, fraud, and that he has operated in a number of the states in the Union and has been incarcerated in the jails of many of them; that he is looked upon as a notorious crook wherever he is known, and deponent does not hesitate to say that, from his knowledge of his character and reputation, he would not believe him on his oath.

MR. ATCHISON'S DEPOSITION.

Following is the deposition of Mr. Atchison:

"STATE OF GEORGIA, COUNTY OF FULTON.

"Personally appeared before the undersigned, an officer authorized by law to administer oaths, C. R. Atchison, who, first being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he was born and reared in the city of Nashville, Tenn., and lived there until January 1, 1910, when he removed to the city of Atlanta, state and county aforesaid, and since that date has been a citizen thereof.

"Deponent further says that he resides at the Georgian Terrace in said city, and is vice president of The Massengale Advertising agency, with offices in the Candler building, said city, county and state.

"Deponent further says on oath that he has known A. S. Colyar, Jr., from boyhood, and that he is thoroughly well acquainted with his reputation and character for truth and veracity.

"Deponent further says on oath that he is in a general way familiar with the criminal record of Colyar, covering a period of approximately twenty-five (25) years. Deponent knows that he has been arrested during this period in several states of the union for the offenses of forgery, perjury and impersonating others to obtain money; that he has been incarcerated in the jails of several states; that he is a moral degenerate, pervert, and a chornic crook and blackleg, and deponent does not hesitate to say that from a knowledge of his character and reputation he would not believe him on oath.

MR. M'NEIL'S AFFIDAVIT. . . .

Following is the affidavit of Mr. McNeil:

"Georgia, Fulton County.

"Personally appeared before the undersigned, an officer authorized by law to administer oaths, E. W. McNeil, who first being duly and legally sworn, deposes and says: That he was a citizen of the city of Nashville, Tenn., from 1887 to 1894; deponent is now a citizen of Atlanta, with office and place of business at 52 South Forsyth street. Deponent says on oath that he is familiar with the character and reputation of A. S. Colyar, Jr. Deponent says on oath that the said Colyar is known as a professional crook, blackleg and adventurer; that he has been charged from time to time with offenses of forgery, perjury, conspiracy, black mail, etc.; that from time to time he has been incarcerated in the jails from the city of New York to New Orleans. Deponent firmly believes that there is not a crime in the catlogue that he would not willingly and quickly commit for money. On account of his father deponent makes this affidavit with great reluctance, but nevertheless is compelled to make this affidavit, because of the charges made by the said A. S. Colyar, Jr., against one of our best and most reputable citizens of the city of Atlanta. From a knowledge of the character of the said Colyar deponent says without hesitation that he would not believe him on his oath.

"LANFORD IS THE CONTROLLING GENIUS OF CONSPIRACY TO PROTECT THE MURDERER OF LITTLE MARY PHAGAN"

So Declares Colonel Thomas B. Felder in Scathing Arraignment of Chief of Detectives and Those Assisting Him, Says Lanford and the Pinkerton Detectives Are Doing All They Can to Hamper the Phagan Investigation—Refers to Lanford as the "Lieutenant Becker" of the Department

CHARGES A. S. COLYAR WITH BEING A SELF-CONFESSED FORGER AND BLACKMAILER

Colonel Felder Says He Met Colyar Two and a Half Years Ago, During His Controversy With Governor Blease, and That Colyar Palmed Off Forged Affidavits on Him—Declares Colyar Came to Him With Tales of Corruption in Police Department and Asked for $1,000 for His Information

Charging Atlanta police officials with a conspiracy to shield and protect the murderers of Mary Phagan and styling Chief Newport Lanford as "the Lieutenant Becker of Atlanta and controlling genius" of the plot, Colonel Thomas B. Felder late Saturday gave out an emphatic statement vehemently denying the attempted bribery and other charges hurled at him by the police in the now famous dictograph records.

That a dictograph was used Colonel Felder doubts, and if one was used in the Williams house, he asserts, the record was changed by the persons using the record. This he tends to establish by showing that the record quotes him now in the first person singular and again in the second person singular. The record, he asserts, was "framed."

Colonel Felder asserts that the plot was hatched with the day Leo M. Frank was arrested and maintains that since that time the police have done nothing else save protect the two suspects and obstruct the work of the Burns agency and Solicitor Dorsey.

He attacks A. S. Colyar in a half dozen affidavits appended to his lengthy statement. Colyar, he says, is morally and mentally irresponsible and merely a tool in the hands of Lanford and his agents.

He charges that the Coleman affidavit, imputed by the police to be a repudiation of Felder's connection with the Phagan investigation, was obtained from J. W. Coleman under pressure.

The police plot, he charges, involves the Inkertons and was organized by Chief Lanford and the Atlanta operatives for the Pinkertons employed the day after the Phagan murder by the National Pencil company.

HIS RELATIONS WITH COLYAR.

The statement given out by Colonel Felder, as he had announced Friday, constitutes a narrative of the events leading up to the conferences in Williams House No. 2, where the dictograph was operated by Colyar and G. C. Febuary.

Colonel Felder says that he met Colyar a year or so ago during the Blease investigation and was then convinced of the man's irresponsibility. Colyar, he says, came to his office recently and began a discussion of the Phagan case representing that the police were suppressing evidence. Colyar, so the statement sets forth, claimed to have or could get evidence showing the whole police plot and affidavits involving the moral character of both Chief Lanford and Chief Beavers. These, he said, consisted of lists of protected "blind tigers" and "disorderly houses."

Colonel Felder denies offering Febuary any sum of money for his information, and says that he told the pair that he was interested in nothing but the Phagan matter.

He advised them he says to place the other matters before Major Woodward or any number of reputable Atlanta citizens, who he asserts, he was sure would take up the matter for the city's welfare.

Colonel Felder asserts that the confession held by the police from the negro Conley, setting forth that Conley wrote the notes found in the basement of the plant of the National Pencil company, was forced from him by the police and is really not the truth.

COLONEL FELDER'S STATEMENT.

Colonel Felder's statement in full follows:

To the People of Atlanta:

The publication of the sensational "story" in The Atlanta Journal on yesterday afternoon relating to myself and my connection with the Phagan case is but the symptom or manifestation of one of the most diabolical conspiracies ever hatched by a venal and corrupt "system" to protect crime in a civilized community. To be more specific, this conspiracy was formed just after the arrest of Newt Lee and Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan. The controlling genius of it is Newport Lanford, chief of the city detectives, its object is to shield and protect the murderers of this innocent child, and in its wicked ramifications it marks our distinguished (?) chief of detectives as the Lieutenant Becker of our "system," and renders his coconspirators as dangerous to the lives, liberty, property and reputation of our citizens as the bloody and deadly society of the Mafia. Pity it is that the press of the city has been and is being made the innocent, if effective, instrument in their hands to further and effectuate the object of this wicked conspiracy by prostituting their potential columns to the exploitation of the mass of forgeries and perjuries which has been given to the public through their columns, for be it known that these papers have tacitly sanctioned the utterances of Colyar by reproducing his affidavits in the face of the fact that the editors and proprietors of all would without hesitation swear that they would not believe him on oath if called upon to do so. Strangely enough, a portion of the criminal record of this man Colyar is reproduced, showing him to be a man steeped in crime and infamy, while in the parallel column is published his defamatory utterances against me.

CHARGES LANFORD WITH ENDEAVORING TO SHIELD PHAGAN MURDER SUSPECTS.

I would have the good people of this community know that from the day and hour of the arrest of Lee and Frank, charged with the murder of little Mary Phagan, Newport Lanford and his coconspirators have left "no stone unturned" in their efforts to shield and protect these suspects, and I shall demonstrate later on the truth of this statement with so much clearness that "he who runs may read."

In furthering and effectuating this conspiracy they have suborned perjury, winked at forgeries, and, in short, employed every agency that law and growing criminal instincts could control and conjure up, in their fiendish efforts to shield the murderers of this girl Lieutenant Becker Lanford secured the services of A. S. Colyar, Jr., whose criminal record was known to the "lieutenant," but whose services he willingly availed himself of.

Having premised this much, I shall now address myself to the task of disposing of Lieutenant Lanford's "Man Friday," A. S. Colyar.

HOW HE MET COLYAR.

About two and one-half years ago, while I was engaged in a controversy with the criminal and vagabond governor of the state of South Carolina, a prominent citizen of Atlanta, a client and friend of mine, whose name I withheld because he is not now in the city and I have been unable to reach him over the phone, but whose name will be given later, called at my office, and, discussing this controversy, said that he knew a man by the name of A. S. Colyar, Jr., sometimes lawyer, detective, newspaper man, etc., who had spent some time in the state of South Carolina, and who was in possession of valuable information touching that situation.

He afterwards brought this man Colyar to my office, and after discussing the matter with him at length, I reached the conclusion that he was thoroughly independable, and the interview closed. Afterwards, he was sent to the state of South Carolina to obtain the information, and forwarded to me three affidavits which seemed to establish conclusively that the governor of that state had been engaged in criminal practices. Upon a careful examination of these affidavits, I discovered that the jurats attached to the three affidavits were all signed by the same notary, and that he purported to be the genuine affidavits. This aroused my suspicions, and I sent a trusted clerk from my office to the state of South Carolina to personally interview the affiants, with the result that he reported to me that the man Colyar had represented to them that they were heirs at law to a considerable estate in Tennessee, and that if they would make an affidavit stating who they were, he would be able to secure for them their respective inheritances without cost. Indeed, that he was sent to them for that purpose, whereupon the affidavits were prepared and signed. That afterwards Colyar attached the jurats to the genuine affidavits and attached them to the spurious affidavits which he furnished. These affidavits are now in my files and are subject to inspection of anyone who may be interested. It is needless for me to add that they were never made public in connection with the charges of criminal conduct lodged against the vagabond governor of South Carolina.

SAYS COLYAR CONFESSED FORGERY.

Afterwards I met this man Colyar accidentally in the city of Chattanooga, and when I confronted him with the fact that he had forged these affidavits he freely confessed the forgery to me and stated that he had been reduced financially to dire extremities, and that he had forged the affidavits in order to get money from the gentleman who had introduced him to me. I respectfully submit that after this experience with this man it does not seem reasonable that I would entertain respect for him, much less repose confidence in him.

MEETS COLYAR AGAIN.

On Sunday afternoon, while engaged in a conference at my home with parties interested in the Phagan case, I received a telephone message and was informed that the party speaking was A. S. Colyar, Jr. He stated to me that it was important for him to have an interview with me during the afternoon or evening of Sunday. I made an appointment to meet him at my office at 8:15 o'clock. I met him by appointment. Knowing the man's character, I telephoned Mr. Tobie, of the William J. Burns National Detective agency, and Mr. E. O. Miles, my friend and client, to come to my office. In my conversation with Colyar he stated to me that the city detective forces had been engaged in suppressing evidence in the Phagan case; that they were in a conspiracy with the Pinkertons, who had been employed to investigate this case by Frank, one of the suspects, and that they had entered into a conspiracy to thwart the efforts of the Burns agency and myself in the investigations in progress; that he overheard a conference between Lanford and the Pinkerton agent who was employed in the case by Frank to the effect that it was important to circumvent the efforts of the Burns agency and myself in establishing the guilt of the murderer or murderers of Mary Phagan; that on the Sunday evening Lanford had caused an affidavit to be prepared and dated back and had forced Mr. and Mrs. Coleman to sign it under threats and duress, repudiating my employment; that Lanford had arrested a negro by the name of Connelly, as I remember, and had held him at the police station for two or three weeks, and had forged a confession of the negro to the effect that he himself had killed Mary Phagan, and that Newt Lee and Frank were neither participants in the murder nor had knowledge thereof; that in order to discredit the Burns agent, the solicitor's office and myself, they had framed up affidavits charging the solicitor general, the Burns agent and myself with corruption, and that at the opportune time these would be given to the public through hand bills.

WANTED DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

I stated to Colyar that I would not accept his statements even under oath, and that if he had any documentary evidence establishing the fact that these parties were engaged in a conspiracy to suppress evidence, I would like to see it, whereupon he handed me the original Coleman affidavit, what purported to be a copy of the confession of the negro Connelly, what purported to be an original affidavit in relation to the solicitor general, and also what purported to be an original affidavit that one of the leading newspapers of the city had been bribed by the suspects or their friends. In this conversation he told me that he had original affidavits establishing the immorality of the chief of police and the chief of detectives, and that they were guilty of acts involving moral turpitude, and he specified the acts. It is not necessary to give these to the public at this time, but they will be published later. I stated to him that I was not interested in the moral and official depravities of the chief of police and chief of detectives, except in so far as they might relate to the suppression of evidence in the Phagan case.

He thereupon asked me if the mayor of the city was interested in obtaining this evidence. I told him that I was not in the confidence of the mayor; that I had not spoken with him for months, but that if he was not interested in the exposure of official rottenness in the various city departments, he would be a strange and unnatural official, and that I would bring the matter to his attention, which I afterwards did.

MEETS COLYAR AND FEBUARY.

On the following day Colyar called me over the phone and asked me if I would meet him and some friends of his who had knowledge of the facts heretofore adverted to. Colyar stated to him that I was coming into the city on Monday evening and would meet them at my office. Colyar and a young man by the name of Febuary at my office, according to appointment. The interview of Monday evening developed in substance and effect what was developed on Sunday evening, together with the additional fact that young Febuary stated that he had been used so much by the chief of police and chief of detectives in carrying out their projects of corruption that he was sick and tired of the job and would like very much for us to assist him in getting other employment; that if I would assist him, he would willingly turn over to me all documents, files, etc., going to show that these parties were engaged in suppressing evidence in the Phagan case, and that while they were ostensibly working for the city and for the interests of the people, that they were really working in conspiracy with the Pinkertons—the employes of Frank, to shield and protect Frank.

He also exhibited to me numerous affidavits, documents, etc., purporting to be evidence of the official corruption of the two chiefs.

SUBMITTED "GRAFT" LISTS.

Among other documents submitted, were two lists which he claimed that he prepared for the Chief of Police Beavers and Chief of City Detectives Lanford, purporting to contain a list of blind tigers and immoral houses which were under the protection of these departments and from whom they received monthly payments for this alleged protection. I made it plain to both of these parties that I had no interest whatever in any of these documents except such as might tend to establish the fact that they were suppressing evidence in the Phagan case. They asked me if Mayor Woodward and other gentlemen in the city, naming them, would be interested in obtaining this evidence. I stated to them that I thought that not only Mayor Woodward, but every other prominent citizen in the city of Atlanta, such as Mr. Sam Inman, Captain English, Mr. Grant, Mr. Maddox, and scores of others, would be entirely willing to raise a fund to drive these people from the high places, if they were guilty of the acts of moral turpitude alleged against them. They asked me if in my judgment they could be indicted and punished if they turned over this evidence to the mayor or his agents.

EXPLAINS REFERENCE TO OFFICIALS.

I gave it as my judgment that they could not, and that even if they could, I had too much confidence in the mayor of the city of Atlanta, in the prosecuting attorney of the circuit, of the criminal courts, and of the governor, as a last resort, to believe that any of these officials would suffer them to be punished if they made of themselves instrumental means of exposing the colossal corruption which they represented existed in the various departments the city government.

This conference lasted one hour and fifteen minutes. Just before it drew to a close Colyar asked me if I would be willing to pay him and Febuary one thousand dollars for this documentary evidence.

ASKED $1,000.

I told him emphatically that I would not.

He then asked me if I thought the mayor of the city would be willing to pay to him and Febuary one thousand dollars for this evidence, and to protect them. I told him that I was not in a position as the one he now held upon the delivery of the evidence to them.

I told him that I entertained no doubt that if they could furnish the mayor with evidence conclusively establishing the guilt of Beavers and Lanford, the mayor, through the public-spirited citizens of the town, would be willing to raise this sum of money and pay it over to them for the documentary evidence. This ended my interview upon this occasion.

On the following morning I received a telephonic communication from this man Colyar asking me if I would come to his room at the Williams house at 1 o'clock. I told him that I had an engagement. He asked me when it would be convenient for me to meet him. I stated at 2:30, so, at the appointed time, I called upon him at his room at the Williams hotel. While there I met Febuary. My conference with them lasted perhaps ten minutes, as I was back in my office before 4 o'clock to meet an appointment, and having stopped en route for at least ten minutes to receive a treatment from my throat specialist.

DICTOGRAPH MANUFACTURED.

I shall demonstrate in my affidavit attached to this card, and made a part thereof, that the alleged dictograph stuff is manufactured.

In my brief interview with these parties at the Williams House, I stated to them that I would not pay them a cent for the documents that they had in their possession establishing the moral turpitude of Atlanta, its chief and Chief Lanford; that I had no interest in this branch of the controversy, and that I had declined employment in this branch of the controversy; but I stated to them that I had talked with the mayor and that I had made an appointment with Mr. Miles, and that I would meet Mr. Miles, who was making some investigations for the mayor, at my office at 4 o'clock, and that I would send him over to them.

When I arrived at my office at 4 o'clock Mr. Miles and Mr. Tobie, of the Burns National Detective agency, were awaiting me, and I gave Mr. Miles a note of introduction to this man Colyar, which I am informed and have presented.

WOULDN'T GO TO LAKEWOOD.

On the day after Mr. Miles asked me if I would object to accompanying him to Lakewood for a conference with Colyar and Febuary. I stated to him that I most emphatically declined, and advised him to do likewise, and he acted upon my advice. I stated to him further that if they had any business with me, they could conduct it at my office, but that I declined the situation. I had no business with them.

If I had consented to pay money for this evidence, I could have paid it either on Sunday or Monday night and all of the documents would have been turned over to me.

The statement contained in the affidavits of this man Colyar and of Febuary that I offered them one thousand dollars for the Coleman affidavit is absurd to justify a denial. Why would I pay one thousand dollars for this affidavit when I could reprint the press of the conspirators to obtain another affidavit within five minutes after the surrender of this affidavit to me?

In this connection, I desire to state that in my career at the bar, covering a quarter of a century, I have never directly sought employment in any case—civil or criminal. I have never found it necessary to resort to barratry to keep busy in my profession. It is inconceivable that I, or any other reputable lawyer, would seek employment to prosecute a man for murder.

EMPLOYED BY COMMITTEE

I was employed in the Phagan case by a committee of citizens residing in the vicinity of the family of the Phagan girl. My contract of employment is in writing, and is duly signed by my employers. It is not given in this connection a copy of the contract and the name of the signers, for the very obvious reason that with them access in possession of "Lieutenant Becker" Lanford and his co-conspirators, my clients would immediately become the objects of attack at the hands of the "system." The contract above referred to was made with my law firm, Felder, Anderson, Dillon & Whitman, and is in our files and open to the inspection of any decent citizen at any time. In addition to this employment, I was employed by a committee of prominent and distinguished ladies in the city of Atlanta to aid in this investigation. The names of these ladies are withheld from publication for obvious reasons.

I have just said, and I do not now say, that I was ever employed either by Mr. or Mrs. Coleman, but I do say that on Friday afternoon, the date I do not remember, being the day or the day upon which the coroner's inquest was to be held at the police barracks, I was called over the 'phone by one of the gentlemen who employed me in the case and asked to come down to the barracks. Immediately repaired to the barracks and stated to my client that I felt a delicacy in appearing at the coroner's inquest unless my employment was approved by the parents of the deceased girl.

MET MR. COLEMAN.

I was thereupon introduced to Mr. Coleman, and explained to him my feelings in the matter, and stated that he had no money to employ counsel; that he appreciated the unselfish act of his neighbors in their efforts to assist in the investigation, and so far as he was concerned, my employment met with his approval; but being the stepfather of the young girl, it was proper for not to "ratify my employment at that time, but would ask his wife to come to my office on the following day to the end that she would ratify the same. On the following day I left for the city of New York without seeing the mother of Mary Phagan, and was absent form the city for ten days.

I entertain the same feeling now that I did then, and feel that the delicacy in participating in the case without the approval of the parents of the deceased girl, although I have a right to do so by my clients and many of the best people in the city of Atlanta.

In this connection I desire to submit for the consideration of the graft-ridden people of this city the statement that my employment in this case was never brought into question until the criminal investigator of Mr. Burns appeared upon the scene.

CHARGES "CONVERSION."

On Sunday following his appearance "Lieutenant Becker" Lanford dictated an affidavit to his secretary, Mr. February, and had the same signed by Mr. or Mrs. Coleman, and without knowing what they would be willing to say in relation to it, although in the meantime repairing to the home of the Colemans, coerced them into signing the same, as I am informed, by threats that if they or either of them refused to sign the affidavit of Mr. Burns or myself with the case, they would take no further interest in the case.

The character of William J. Burns for honesty and courage is too well established in the American mind to need endorsements at my hands. The insinuation emanating from the city detective department that he could be hired to betray his clients, as formally circulated by them, needs no contradiction or refutation at my hands. A sufficient answer to such insinuation is that there was no time during the McNamara investigation, if Burns was purchasable, that he would have received to call off the case a million dollars flat. This fact is known of all men who are familiar with the current events appertaining to that investigation.

Moreover, I deem it the work of supererogation to enter a denial in my own behalf to the base insinuation that I have been employed in conjunction with Burns by the Jews of the city to assist in shielding Frank from prosecution. I have never conferred with any Jew upon this subject, and in behalf of the Jews, who constitute a large and most respectable element of our population, I desire to brand the insinuation as a vile, baseless slander promulgated by the city detectives as a part of the conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice in this case.

The statement that Tobie had an appointment at my office for a conference with Messrs. Hirsch, Meyers and Greenstein is a figment of the disordered and distempered imagination of "Lieutenant Becker" Lanford, and his "Man Friday," A. S. Colyar, Jr.,

LAUDS MR. HIRSCH.

Mr. Joseph Hirsch needs no defense at my hands from this vile and baseless insinuation. He has lived a long and honored life in this community, and I gravely doubt if there is a man, woman or child in it who would believe any man who stated on oath that Joseph Hirsch would do a dishonorable thing to shield either Jew or Gentile, much less to enter into a conspiracy to bribe and corrupt lawyers and detectives who are engaged in an honest effort to establish the guilt of a murderer.

Let me put this question frankly to the people of Atlanta. Is it not passing strange that the city detective department, whose wages are paid by the taxpayers of this city, should "hobnob" daily with the Pinkerton Detective agency, an agency confessedly employed in this investigation to work in behalf of Lee Frank, that they would take this agency into their daily and hourly confidence and repose in it their confidence, and co-operate with it in every way possible, and withhold their co-operation from W. J. Burns and his able assistants who are engaged by the public and for the public in ferreting out this crime?

HINTS ULTERIOR PURPOSE.

What is the purpose of the city detective in violently assailing me and the Burns agency if it is not to protect the real criminal in this case? What motives inspired them in their almost superhuman efforts to hinder, circumvent and defeat the efforts of this great agency in locating the criminal or criminals in this case?

From the moment that Leo Frank and Newt Lee were placed under arrest the city detectives, or a majority of them (I am advised and believe that there are several good and honest men in the department) have been engaged in a systematic effort to destroy all tangible evidence against the suspect. When they got possession of the note that was found by the body of the dead girl, and which constitutes, or should, the "Rock of Gibraltar" of the evidence in this case, and which should have been promptly placed for safe-keeping in a safety deposit vault, it was turned over to a reporter of one of the papers, who had the custody of this note for several days, and when it was demanded by the able solicitor general of the circuit it was only forthcoming after a diligent search.

AS TO NEGRO CONLEY.

I was informed by Messrs. Colyar and Febuary that shortly after the murder the city detectives arrested a negro by the name of Connelly and kept him in close confinement for several weeks, and that they extorted from him a written confession that he, and not Frank, was the perpetrator of this crime, and the further confession that the negro had been procured to write the note that was found by the body of the deceased, thereby destroying the effect of any evidence that might be introduced in this case to show that Frank was author of the note so found.

Thereafter, on the day the grand jury was convened for the purpose of investigating the charges against Frank and Lee, "Lieutenant Becker" Lanford furnished the press of the city an affidavit which he had secured from a woman of questionable veracity and character, containing the recital that between the hours of 4 and 10:30 on the fatal evening Frank called her over the 'phone several times, importuning her to permit him to bring this girl to her lodging house. The object and purpose of this affidavit are so obvious that it is needless for me to more than advert to it, and are as follows: To destroy the state's theory presented by the medical experts and Frank's hold at the Burns agency, that this girl came to her death between the hours of 12 and 1 on Saturday, and further to establish the fact that the girl was alive between the hours of 6:30 and 10:30 p. m., thus enabling Frank to establish by positive and conclusive proof an alibi.

CHARGES MALPURPOSE

Hour by hour, day by day and step by step, has this conspiracy headed all of his energies and efforts to the single purpose of diverting suspicion from the accused in this case and throwing about them the cloak of his protection.

I have neither the time or the disposition to discuss at length the affidavits reproduced in the press of the city made by Colyar and Febuary. As to these, I deem it only necessary to say that they are false from beginning to end.

As to the so-called dictograph, I wish to say that it will be developed that this is either manufactured and fabricated, or was so greatly revised and changed by the stenographer who took the notes, if a dictograph was in fact used, which I doubt, as to greatly impair, if not totally destroy the meaning of what was said on the occasions referred to. To begin with, it is impossible for the conversation imputed to me to have occurred and been recorded in less than an hour. As I have stated heretofore, in this article, I was in the room at the Williams House not more than five or ten minutes, arriving there at 3:30 and reaching my office at 4 p. m., stopping en route to have my throat treated by a throat specialist, which consumed from twelve to fifteen minutes. I mention this fact as illustrating the impossibility that the so-called dictograph report could be genuine. The dictograph is an instrument that records conversations with exactitude and any expert can instantly detect the genuine from the spurious.

EVIDENCE OF FRAME-UP.

While this purported conversation is permeated with evidence of its being a frame-up, I think it will be sufficient to call the attention of the public to but one paragraph from to illustrate what I have stated.

Colyar is quoted in the alleged dictograph report as follows: "I said this young man does not want to lose his position." I am quoted as answering, "Well, he says, tell him for me that I will get him a position today just as good as the one he has." It will be observed that my answer, instead of being in the first person, singular number, is in the second person singular number, thereby clearly establishing that it is a frame-up.

The next illustration: Felder, "Well, you understand I do not want the papers unless they are evidence enough to put Lanford and Beavers out of business." Colyar made the answer as follows: "Now, Colyar says, you say that you have all the papers that will put them out." This alleged colloquy reported from the dictograph between Colyar and myself clearly demonstrates that it is a frame-up.

WROTE UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

In conclusion, permit me to say that I have written the above and foregoing pages under great difficulties.

I have been constantly interrupted during the day by diligent newspaper reporters and by friends throughout the city and state assuring me that they are ready to aid in exposing the conspirators in their efforts to prejudice Burns and myself and to protect the murderer or murderers of Mary Phagan.

Owing to the interruptions, I have only been able to cover some features of the case. In a later communication which I will furnish the press for publication I expect to go into details in respect of the alleged corrupt practices of the heads of the several departments at the police station. Their many acts of moral turpitude are well known to numerous citizens of the city of Atlanta, and to them my recital will be no news.

I pledge the good people of Atlanta to address myself at an early date assiduously to the task of not only fully exposing all of the conspirators, but to bring about their impeachment upon proceedings that I expect to institute looking to this end, and, if I am successful in "scooping them from the high places," I shall regard it as not only a great service rendered to a graft-ridden people, but the greatest achievement in my professional career.

Scotland has always been a law-abiding nation, but Tories chose, taking Ireland as their cue, to identify anarchy in some way or other with home rule, and thus it came about that the Scottish movement received a sudden check. Then came the dark days of Jingoism when the very idea of nationality was trodden underfoot, when as the outcome of the spread of force, brute force was treated as a shallow sentimentalism unworthy of the attention of empire makers. Then came the reaction. The Boer war revealed to the astonished Imperialist despots the undying vitality and enormous strength of nationality, a revelation which justified Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman in basing his scheme for the pacification of South Africa on the principle of devolution.

CRUSHERS PREPARE FOR BIG ANNUAL CONVENTION

A meeting of the rules comittee of the Cotton Seed Crushers' association of Georgia will be held in the rooms of the commercial club tomorrow morning, May 27, at which time members of the association are invited to be present to discuss new rules, etc., for the coming session.

This committee always meets just prior to the annual convention of the association which will take place at Atlantic Beach, Fla., Monday and Tuesday, June 2 and 3. Many prominent speakers are expected on that occasion and the program committee is now at work in perfecting arrangements.

The interstate convention will be held in Chicago, June 23, and it is expected that Georgia will send a large delegation there.

"YOU WENT TO WILLIANS HOUSE LIKE A LAMB TO THE SLAUGHTER," COLYAR TELLS FELDER IN LETTER

Former Tennesseean in Open Letter Tells Colonel Felder That He Was Never Caught With Goods Until Last Wednesday—Colyar Says He Strayed From the Path He Should Have Followed When He Went to Wash Attorney's Political Linen in a State in Which Colonel Felder Could Not Set Foot

A. S. Colyar has addressed the following open letter to Colonel Thomas B. Felder:

Colonel Thomas B. Felder.

Sir: Knowing you as I do, I anticipate you; promised attack on me in the press of Sunday, as you have announced you intended to make, and were I to attempt to answer you, I would have to resort to the lowest and vilest billingsgate, which I do not care to do, for to do so would be to prostitute the refinement that I inherited from birth, and place me on a level with such ilk as you. Therefore, it is my purpose to address you this letter and ask you the following questions:

First. Is it not a notorious fact that you are the attorney of every crook, gambler, Mary Magdalene and the whisky ring, provided of course any one of this clan has the price to pay you?

Second. Have you the audacity to ask the people of this city to believe that your relations were straight to prosecute Leo M. Frank for the paltry sum of $500, and then donate that fee to the Burns Agency to secure the evidence that the chief of detectives had already procured? Is it not a notorious fact that you received a hundred thousand dollars in the famous dispensary cases of South Carolina, a state by the way whenever you start to New York you always buy a ticket by a route that does not touch its border?

Third. Is it not a notorious fact that you have been known far and wide, not only as an attorney but as an astute politician, lobbyist, and pardon broker, and did you not receive one hundred thousand dollars from Charles W. Morse, or his wife, to deliver the goods?

Fourth—It does not make any difference to me, personally, what kind of an attack you may see fit to make upon me with your wife pen, and I note that you state that you c'n get one thousand men to swear that they would not believe me on oath, I desire to ask you that before you can impeach my cnath does not the law require you to bring forward my neighbors and my ac*quaintances who know me and who will* state that upon their knowledge of me they would not believe me on oath? Or is it your pupose to scour among your clients, principally those who belong to the red light district and the whiskey ring and are ever ready to do your bidding, even the swearing a man's life or character away, one of whom called upon me this afternoon by the name of McNeil, who professed to live in Nashville, Tenn., some fifteen years ago, and wanted to rake up an old boyhood acquaintance, as his breath smelled like a distillery on legs, so much so that my wife left the room, and knowing that you are in the habit of digging up such people as this when you have got any dirty work to carry out. I was extremely reticent with him, and fortunately I had two gentlemen in the hotel office, of unimpeachable character, who happened to be sitting close enough to me to know that about all Mr. McNeil got out of me was yea and nay.

SAYS FELDER IS SORE.

Fifth.—Is it not a fact that you are sore because this city happens to have at the present time a high-toned, honorable Christian gentleman, who is a man of God and tries to practice his belief in the Christian religion, and would not prostitute his oath of office as chief of police by catering to you and your cohorts? And if he had wouldn't he have been the grandest chief in your poor eyes that are glued by filthy lucre that ever ruled Atlanta's police department, for there has never been any one who knows you that will doubt the assertion that you have been a worshipper of gold instead of God, and had no conscientious scruples as to how you obtained it.

Sixth.—I note that you are going to attack me with an affidavit from one, W. A. Milner, attorney-at-law, of Cartersville, Ga., in which he charges me with the crime of having professed religion in Cartersville and acknowledging that I was an ex-convict. As to this charge, which was made in the Constitution of Saturday, I refer to a telegram printed in this issue of The Journal, exclusively. Is it a crime to profess religion?

It was not considered so in the home that I was raised in under the influence of a sweet Christian mother, which no doubt you yourself had the same kind of a mother, but I fear that you and I both have strayed far away from the early influence of our sweet Christian homes. In fact I am free to confess that I have done so since the time that I helped you wash your dirty, filthy political linen in South Carolina. And I fear that the gentleman from Cartersville would not know religion if he were to met it upon the public highway. For religion believes in helping the fallen to rise and not pushing them down. I cannot control things that happened in Cartersville among so empeople that I did not know forty years ago, but have since become connected with, and I have to pay the price of a poor miserable amlice carried in the fertile brain of Colonel Milner, who belongs to the political clan that you aer aligned with.

DOES NOT KNOW HIM.

7. I note that you are attacking me in an affidavit purporting to have bee nsigned by one W. D. Ray, of Nashville, Tenn., who claims to be a neighbor of mine. For your information as well as Mr. Ray, I wish to state that I do not know him, and that I have not been a resident of Nashville, Tenn., since April, 1899, and I never knew any Ray in Nashville, Tenn., and I would appreciate the fact if you would tell me who he is. I also note that you are attacking me with one Atchison of Nashville, who says that I am a moral degenerate and pervert. I presume that Mr. Atchison has qualified, that he is an expert witness, and has not allowed you to frame up the affidavit for him to sign, as everyone who knows you, know that you are an artist in such matters.

I note that you have brought into your affidavit catcory your royal flunky, C. W. Tobie, who took occasion to attack me in a sheet published in this city Saturday afternoon. But the ear marks of his article show too plainly that the author of it was Tobie's master, Felder. What does Tobie know about me? And is it not a fact that you and Tobie are sore because your scheme has been exposed, to graft a large amount of money out of the citizens of Atlanta. And don't you know it to be a fact that Tobie is ready to sign any affidavit pertaining to any subject that you might suggest? And don't you also know that when you and Tobie attempt to slur the Atlanta police department and the Pinkerton Detective agency and charge me with being a tool in their hands to break you and the Burns' agency down, that it is only a makeshift to divert the public mind from the real issue that you, a member of the Atlanta bar and a former member of the legislature from Fulton county, and a poser as a statesman, and a great lawyer, would forget your high profession and stoop so low as to attempt to bribe a poor, honest young man, struggling to get a foothold in life, to rob his chief and superior officer of certain valuable papers in the Phagan case for $1,000? Before you call me a moral dezenerate and pervert think of the enormity of your attempted crime in trying to brand this young man as a thief the balance of his life.

DID GIVE INTRODUCTION.

Ninth—Now, colonel, I did not intend to write such a lengthy letter when I started, but I desire to call your attention to another matter. You have stated in one of your many newspaper interviews, where you had a chance to get free advertising, which is part of your egotistical nature to feast and fatten upon, that you refused to give an introduction to one E. O. Miles. To refresh your memory, I refer you to that card of introduction with your signature attached to it, reproduced in this issue of The Journal, and I hope that you have not become such a moral pervert since we parted company as to denounce the signature a forgery. But, yet, if you found yourself hemmed in, and saw no other escape, I dare say that you would not hesitate to denounce it as such.

In conclusion, permit me to say frankly and candidly that I have strayed away from the path I should have followed in life in some instances, but the difference between you and I, Colonel, is simply this: I have been caught in times gone by, and you have never been caught with the goods on you until you walked into room No. 31 in the Williams ouse No. 2 like a lamb for the slaughter, and allowed yourself to be taken by the dictograph, and it is natural you are sore. I do not blame you. Any farmer will tell you that when a pig gets caught in a sty he will squeal. I note that the people of Bellwood as well as the Colemans have repudiated you.

The ox knoweth its owner and the ass knoweth his master's crib, but my people do not know me, O Israel."

If is sad to think when a gentleman of your ability and standing at the bar; who controlled governors, and judges, solicitors generals, and last but not least great mayors, and started out to gain a great reputation in the Phagan case, alas! has come to a sorrowful end because he could not induce a poor, young struggling stenographer to commit the crime of larceny for the paltry sum of $1,000. ood-bye, Colonel, I am going try to live honest in the future, and I know that I can do so if I will only be more guarded in the associations that I form than I have been in the past.

A. S. COLYAR.

Atlanta, Ga., May 24, 1913.

P. S. I note I was arrested Saturday afternoon on a frame up of four years standing in my native state, brought against me by a member of the Red Light District, among whom you have so many clients.

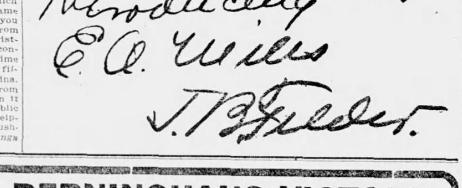
At the request of A. S. Colyar, Jr., The Journal publishes a facsimile of a note of introduction to E. O. Miles given to Colyar by Colonel T. B. Felder. The note was given prior to the dictographed conferences. The facsimile follows:



CHATTANOOGA READY TO ENTERTAIN VETERANS

First Contingent of Battle-Scarred Heroes Arrives for the Festivities

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 24.—The first special train movement into this city bringing veterans to the reunion, arrived this afternoon laden with seventy-five battle-scarred heroes from Shreveport, La. The veterans are the first large body to apepar on the field. They were met by a committee from reunion headquarters and immediately taken care of.

Forsyth School Closes

FORSYTH, Ga., May 24.—After one of the most successful years in all its history, the school term at Banks Stephens Institute, of Forsyth, came to a close last night with the delivery of diplomas to the graduating class of fourteen young men and women.

WOODWARD HOOTS AT THE IDEA OF "PLOT" TO OUST BEAVERS

Mayor Woodward last night was interviewed by a Journal reporter in regard to Chief Beavers' statement.

Among other things, the mayor said:

"I haven't read the chief's statement; but if he charges or intimates that I am connected with or in sympathy with any conspiracy to throw him out of his job, then he is simply mistaken.

"I have not been a supporter of Chief Beavers since I became mayor, but everybody's known that. There's been no secret about it so far as I was concerned. I've got nothing personal against him. I simply differ with his policy in reference to the vice question. And I must say that neither he nor Chief Lanford have elevated the standard of the police department in the way they have handled the situation.

"Now, understand me. I don't want to get into any controversy with Chief Beavers. As I said, I've got nothing against him personally at all. And I have not hampered him or interefeerd with him in the management of the police department, and don't intend to.

"As for the conspiracy which you say he speaks of, there is no such thing so far as I know. I think about all the conspiracy that exists, is what Lanford and his detectives have tried to create.

"It looks like the detectives fixed up what they thought was a nice little trap, and then went to work to catch everybody the yhad it in for—myself included.

"Of course if I had it to do over again I probably wouldn't go to the Williams House. I shouldn't have gone when I did, I reckon, but should have made them see me in my office if they had anything in the way of graft evidence. But I went, and there was absolutely nothing said by me that I am ashamed of or want to conceal from the public.

"DICTOGRAPHS NO GOOD"

"This much I will say, though, and that is if the dictograph record purporting to show what was said is a fair sample of the dictograph, then it is one of the biggest fakes that ever came down the pike. I used to think it was a fine thing in detecting criminals and such like, but I think now that it must be used by very honest, high-toned men or else it becomes an instrument of crookedness and blackamil.

"Ed Miles simply came to me and said he thought he had found so emeviidence of graft in the police department and asked me if I would mind going with him over to the Williams House. I couldn't go right then, but went over later.

"My motive was simply this, and no more: If there was evidence of graft in the police departenmt—real evidence —I wanted it. Certainly I did. A man would be a poor mayor if he wouldn't want to unearth graft, if such existed. I told them if they had anything that would be of value, that is, something that could convince, I thought they needn't be uneasy about Febuary losing his job, or about being paid for their trouble. And by that I didn't mean they'd be paid in a way that was improper. That was all there was to it. They promised to deliver the goods, but I never heard from them any more."

BURLESON ASKED TO SEGREGATE THE RACES

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The race question has been put squarely up to Postmaster General Burleson, in a petition signed by more than 5,000 railway mail clerks, urging the segregation of white and negro employes in the service.

It was presented by Robert A. Prather, of Little Rock, Ark. The petitioners asked that the postmaster general issue an order putting the segregation into effect at once.

MINISTER DE LA BARRA TO LEAVE OLD MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—Francisco de la Barra, minister of foreign affairs, has been granted a leave of absence. He announces that he intends to go abroad. He probably will visit the United States, and later proceed to Europe. It is understood that sub-Secretary Carlos Pereyra will act as minister.

Senor de la Barra's object in leaving Mexico at the present time is to separate himself from politics, in the belief that his withdrawal from the political struggle will best serve the interests of his country. He will arrange affairs in his department so that he can leave as soon as possible.

Depreciation! The thing that makes cars expensive. No one wants a car that's out of date and out of style. You wouldn't have brass trimmings on your car today. Nowadays nothing will do except electric starter and electric lights. Yet many purchasers are urged into buying right-hand drive cars when the same factory will eventually show new models with left drive and center control, cowl dash and tank and wire wheels, features you get on the Henderson now and at no extra cost.

Exactly one year ago today we first offered—left drive and center control with cowl dash. Isn't this convincing evidence that the Henderson really is the year ahead car?

Important Note to Dealers!

A year ago we made a similar announcement and took the automobile trade by storm. The response was instantaneous. Everyone knew a car the Hendersons produced would take foremost rank. Now we are ready with the Henderson De Luxe—the "year ahead" car.

Our distributing houses are real institutions. They have Henderson cars—they have Henderson parts—they have completely equipped shops. Furthermore, they now have new De Luxe Henderson Cars. The dealer who secures territory now open can drive the Henderson De Luxe demonstrator home if near a distributing house, otherwise prompt shipment from Indianapolis.

Turkish Bath Cures Rheumatism At Home

Costs But 2c a Bath, and the Body Is Rid of Uric Acid Poison, With Astonishing Rapidity.

Quickly Cures Kidney Trouble, Nervous Prostration and All Skin Diseases.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish bath, taken at home, is becoming a rage. Those who have used the bath have been completely carried away with enthusiasm because of the astonishing results obtained.

Well-known physicians say that the Robinson Thermal Bath at home, is about to become an almost universal conqueror of disease. This is not an exaggeration. Any man or woman can prove its results inside of 24 hours, in some cases 30 minutes.

In cases of rheumatism, especially, the uric acid poison is extracted from the system through the pores, almost as liquids are sucked up through a straw. Drugs merely smother the poison or drive it back. They do not extract the poison from the body.

Just read this letter:

"I loaned my cabinet to an old friend all crippled up with rheumatism, last May. Feet, legs and hands badly swollen. He had spent some time at different Hot Springs without relief. A week ago he started in to use the cabinet, taking the steam heat in the morning and the dry heat at night, before going to bed. He kept this up a week, and yesterday and today he was as well as ever."

"GEO. A. FREEMAN,

"Mgr. Temptation Mining & Milling Co., Silverton, Colo."

Anyone can now take Robinson Thermal baths at home and at a cost of only about 2c a bath. They are the best spring medicine, too. They make the thick, sluggish blood normal take out the impurities and cure "spring fever" right off. The only way to take these baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, which is a unique and marvelous invention.

That great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," retail price $2.00, Free at our Main Store, upon request, for a limited time only. Be sure to get a copy. Also see the interesting demonstration of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets; no obligation to purchase.

Cabinets range in price from $5.50 to $15.00.

ANOTHER BERNINGHAUS VICTORY

INTERIOR OF HANDSOME BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA SHOP

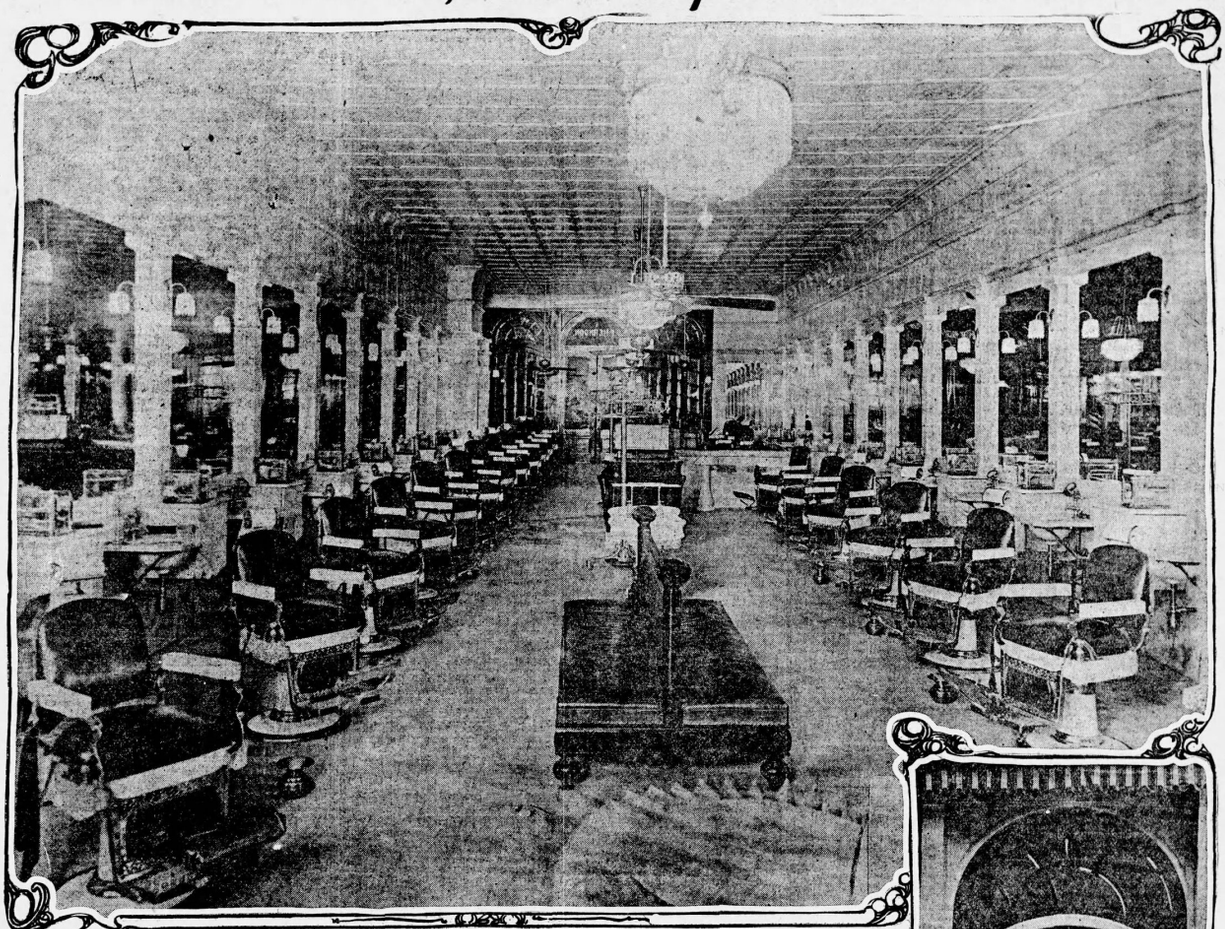
Owned by Messrs. Pickard and Maloney and equipped with eighteen "World's Greatest Sanitary Barber Chairs," manufactured by The Empire Berninghaus Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

THE BRANNEN BARBERS SUPPLY COMPANY

Agents for the World's Greatest Barber Chairs, Atlanta, Georgia.

Herndon's Remodeled Barber Shop, the Largest and Finest in the World, Will Be Open for the Inspection of the Public, Monday 2 P. M. to 10 P. M.

All work in the shop will be suspended during those hours---there will be music by a band---flowers for the ladies, and souvenirs for the men. A magnificently equipped establishment, finished throughout in finest marble and plate glass mirrors. Herndon searched the world for ideas to give Atlanta the best barber shop in existence. He has succeeded and it is well worth your while to drop in and see it tomorrow.



Interior view of Herndon's Remodeled Barber Shop, 66 Peachtree running through to Broad street. It is pure white from floor to ceiling and its elegance is unsurpassed.

THE remodeled barber shop of A. F. Herndon at 66 Peachtree street has been completed, and will be formally offered for the inspection of the public tomorrow between the hours of 2 p. m. and 10 p. m.

During those hours all work will be stopped. The shop will be decorated with flowers; there will be music by a band; posies for the ladies and souvenirs for the men.

On this occasion Atlantians will be given an opportunity of seeing something of which they may be justly proud—the establishment in their city of the largest and most magnificently equipped barber shop in the world, by a Georgia-born and Georgia-bred negro, who has won and held the patronage and respect of the best people in Atlanta for over twenty years.

This barber shop is unique. In it Herndon has managed to preserve the best tradition of the south, so far as service is concerned, and has added to them the finest equipment that modern scientific progress can provide. The combination is ideal.

KNOWN FOR TWENTY YEARS

Practically everybody, who has lived in Atlanta for many years, knows about Herndon and his barber shop. He came here from Jonesboro, Ga., in the early '80s, and has been here ever since. 'Way back in '86 he had a shop on Whitehall street, near where the viaduct now stands. He had a barber shop at the old Markham House until it burned. Then he opened his shop in the Norcross building, where the Fourth National bank now stands. He was burned out there with practically no insurance, but opened up again and established some ten years ago or more at 66 Peachtree the Herndon barber shop that has been there ever since.

When Herndon decided some time ago that he would remodel his shop, he determined to make it the finest establishment of its kind in the south, and if possible, in the world. He visited the barber shops of every big American city from New York to Frisco. He found the finest in St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago and Los Angeles.

SEARCHES WORLD FOR IDEAS

In each city which he visited, he studied conditions, made notes of the improvements, and when he returned to Atlanta he had a whole budget of information on practically every large, highclass barber shop in the country.

But even then, he wasn't satisfied. He wanted to have "the best in the world," not merely as an advertising catch-phrase, but as an actual fact. He was satisfied that Atlanta would welcome and justify by its continued patronage the establishment of such a shop.

So, after he had made the grand tour of American cities from coast to coast, he set out for Europe. The principal things he learned there, so far as the interior of barber shops is concerned, confirmed him in his certainty that American shops were best, and that the only good barber shops in Europe today are the few which have adopted American methods and American equipment.

He visited the barber shops in the big hotels of every capital in Europe, and found that they did not measure up to American standards. Thus he learned that "the best barber shop in the world" would be a shop that combined the ideal qualities of the American shops which he had visited.

WHAT HE FOUND IN EUROPE

But his trip to Europe was not fruitless from a business standpoint. One valuable idea he did bring back with him—an architectural idea—and in the skilful hands of Architect L. P. McGee, the application of the idea has made the frontage of his shop on Peachtree street one of the most interesting features of that noted thoroughfare.

While in Paris, Herndon saw a doorway on the Avenue de l'Opera, which he immediately decided was the handsomest door he had ever seen on a business establishment in his life. The doors were over sixteen feet high, made of small panes of double plate glass, less than a foot in diameter, set in an elaborate but elegant framework of solid mahogany. Herndon had photographs made of these doorways, and brought them back to Atlanta. Skilled workmen have duplicated the pattern, and the result is that the doors of the Herndon barber shop are the handsomest doors in Atlanta, barring none.

When you step through them, as you probably will sometime tomorrow afternoon as you are passing, you will be face to face with a sight well worth seeing.

ALL MARBLE AND PLATE GLASS

The main floor of Herndon's shop fronts 24 feet on Peachtree, and runs back a full 102 feet. The wide entrance at 66 Broad street. The walls of this spacious room are of white marble and plate glass. The floor is of white marble. The ceiling is of white enameled steel; the electric chandeliers are wrought bronze and crystal; the barbers' chairs, twenty-three of them, in two long rows, are in keeping with these elegant surroundings. They are heavy white enamel, finished in green leather. The whole atmosphere of such a place is one of elegance and scrupulous cleanliness.

The shop is absolutely sanitary. All the razors, brushes, combs and other barbers' implements and accessories are kept in an antiseptic sterilizer. They are sterilized just as carefully and completely as a surgeon's instruments. Towels are sterilized. The leather head-rest on each chair is equipped with a long roll of paper which turns after each patron has been attended to, presenting a fresh surface for each.

EMPLOYS THIRTY-FIVE MEN

Herndon employs twenty-three barbers, and a total force of some thirty-five men. Among them are men who have been with him for the past twenty years. They are known from Richmond all the way to Mobile as the best barbers in the south.

The barber shop occupies all of the first floor, while the baths are located in an equally spacious basement. The general architectural scheme of the main floor is carried out below. The floors are all tile and marble; the ceiling steel; everything white enamel. There are sixteen large individual bath rooms, also with marble floors and walls, with tubs of the finest enamel, and heavily nickeled plumbing of the most modern type.

LUXURIOUS BATHS IN BASEMENT

You can bathe luxuriously and at your ease in the Herndon bath rooms. The tubs are roomy; they are wide and deep and full six feet in length. You can lie down in them and splash around. The heavy white enameled porcelain is a veritable ideal of cleanliness, and the bath mat you jump out on after you have finished your ablutions lies on a marble tile floor.

If you prefer a shower bath to a tub, you can get the same kind of shower you enjoy at your club. And you have a marble-lined room all to yourself.

While these baths are as elegant as you would find in the finest club or home, there are no fancy prices or charges. Twenty-five cents, which includes soap and towels, has been the price charged at Herndon's shop for years past, and it will be the price for years to come.

HE STICKS TO OLD PRICES

In preserving with all his splendid modern equipment the best traditions of old-time service, there is another thing that Herndon has succeeded in preserving—and that is the old-time scale of barber shop prices. Twenty years ago our fathers, even the most well-to-do and open-handed among them, would have opened their eyes in sheer amazement if they had been asked to pay more than 25 cents for a haircut or more than 5 cents for a shine. Literally the same way ten years ago. Twenty-five cents was the regular price for a haircut, just as 5 cents in this country is the universal price for riding on the street car. But today Herndon is one of the few strictly highclass barber shops in the country that has stuck to the old prices. Practically all the rest charge 35 cents for a haircut and many of them charge 10 cents for a shine; but Herndon has not changed, and with all his magnificent new equipment he is not going to change.

HAS MANY DISTINGUISHED PATRONS

Like the Florentine barber in "Romola," Herndon has counted among his patrons many of the most notable men of this city and state, for practically a generation past.

There are supreme court and superior court judges, prominent lawyers, state house officers and ex-state house officers, politicians, ministers, planters from every city and community in Georgia, who have been making it their regular custom for fully twenty years to visit the Herndon shop when they are in Atlanta.

They knew Herndon first when he came to Atlanta as a journeyman barber, and got employment in the old Dougherty Hutchens shop that operated for years on the corner where the Empire building now stands. Herndon was efficient, respectful, thrifty. Customers soon began to prefer his chair. At the end of six months he bought a half interest in the business, and it was there he got his start. Herndon's barber shop eventually became a permanent fixture, a landmark in Atlanta. In the course of years it was moved from one location to another, but never more than a stone's throw in one direction or another from Five Points, and the old Herndon clientele has never changed. The patrons who used to go to Herndon's way back in the 80's are still going there.

IS A HEAVY TAXPAYER

The result is that Herndon is today a comparatively rich man. He pays considerably more taxes than any other colored man in Atlanta. He is the only colored man who is the proprietor of a business on central Peachtree. But he is the same "Lon" Herndon who came here from Jonesboro twenty years ago. Prosperity hasn't spoiled him.

It was at the request of some of Herndon's oldest patrons that he decided to invite the ladies of Atlanta to see his shop, at the formal opening Monday afternoon and evening. Any institution that is the finest of its kind in the world is intrinsically interesting, but there is still another reason: Herndon's shop is especially fitted to take care of the children—the youngsters whose hair needs cutting just as often as fathers but who do not exactly fit into the high-backed barber chair that is built to fit their dads. The handsome, white enameled chairs are especially fitted with detachable settees, upholstered in green leather, on which the youngster can perch with perfect comfort while his curly locks are shorn. This will surely interest mothers.

DAZZINGLY BEAUTIFUL AT NIGHT

Elegant in appearance in the daytime, the new shop is positively dazzling at night. The bronze electric chandeliers suspended at intervals from the ceiling are elaborately hung with crystals which glisten like diamonds when the lights are turned on. Wall fixture lights are also of bronze and crystal. Practically the whole walls, on both sides, for a double length of more than 100 feet, are an uninterrupted series of high plate glass mirrors, set in polish Georgia marble.

The roominess of the shop is one of its most attractive features. With a very high ceiling, and high glass doors opening on the streets in both directions, the place has a "feeling" of spaciousness about it that is delightfully pleasant as compared with the crowded "basement" shops with which all are familiar.

Although there are twenty-three chairs, they are set further apart, with more "elbow room" for the public and for the barbers, than in most shops which only have a half dozen.

Herndon, by the way, has on duty regularly as many barbers as he has chairs, and while his patronage is large and steady, this great number of barbers always on duty means that it is a rare thing for anybody to have to wait for "next." Even at the most crowded and busy times a wait of only three or four minutes is usually sufficient to obtain a seat. There is none of the long, dreary delay that you happen to strike sometimes in smaller shops where there are only half a dozen barbers, and it so happens that every man ahead of you wants a haircut, shave and shampoo.

PERFECT SANITARY EQUIPMENT

Sanitary equipment in the shop is perfect and complete, but Herndon looks on antiseptic sterilizers, absolute cleanliness, plenty of light and pure air, all as simply the "sine qui non" of the modern barber shop. He doesn't push them forward as his chief claim to patronage. However, when the shop is offered for the inspection of the public tomorrow afternoon and evening, visitors are specially invited to note the antiseptic and sterilizing equipment, which is 100 per cent efficient.

Each barber is furnished with an air-tight plate glass sterilizer in which all his implements are kept. In these sterilizers is a solution of formaldehyde. No surgeon's instruments could be more carefully sterilized after each operation. It is the same with all brushes, combs, etc.

It is a significant fact that Herndon counts among his patrons many of the leading physicians and surgeons of Atlanta.

THE FINEST IN THE WORLD

The statement that the Herndon establishment is the finest barber shop in the world is not an idle or presumptuous claim. Neither is it a glittering generality. Here are facts to substantiate it.

To build the [illegible] modelling work has cost a cool $20,000.

Twenty thousand dollars is the largest sum that has ever been spent in fitting up a barber shop.

The main floor of the shop is 102 feet from door to door, running through the block and opening on both Peachtree and Broad streets.

The floor measurement is 102 by 24 feet, giving a floor space on the main floor of over 24,000 square feet.

This gives the largest floor space of any barber shop in the world. In addition to this the basement, where the baths are located are equally spacious and fitted up in an equally luxurious manner.

The barbers' chairs are the finest and most expensive that can be bought, and there are more of them than in any other single shop in the world.

The marble and plate glass fixtures and decorations are the most perfect that money can buy.

The shop force consists of thirty-five men, of whom twenty-three are barbers—the largest force employed in any one shop in the world.

COME AND SEE IT TOMORROW

The finishing touches have just been put on the remodeled shop, and it is with a just pride that Herndon respectfully invites all his old patrons at the hours of 2 p. m. and 10 p. m. to see what has been accomplished.

During those hours, as stated, all work in the shop will be suspended.

MANY CADETS AT G. M. A. ARE GIVEN DIPLOMAS

1913 Graduating Class Held Exercises Friday Night in Academy

On Friday evening the Georgia Military Academy held their commencement exercises in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium of the academy. The program consisted of declamations by representatives of the four classes, by members of the senior class, and an address by Mr. William Cole Jones, of Atlanta.

Thomas Evans Brooks was speaker from the freshman, Lee DeLacy Jessup from the sophomore, Bartolo Rodrigues from the junior and Albert Steiner Selig, George Thomas Town, Lester Martin Sewell from the senior class. Leonard Council Parker delivered the valedictory.

Particularly pleasing was the address of Mr. Jones, who delivered a masterful speech on "The New Renaissance."

Following the addresses of the evening came the delivery of warrants and diplomas. Twenty-four cadets were presented with diplomas and twelve were awarded certificates.

The general merit medal offered by P. M. Blount was won by Cadet Captain Leonard C. Parker. The marksmanship medal was won by Cadet Major Lester M. Savell. The oratorical medal was won by Cadet Lieutenant Adjutant Albert Selig. Individual competitive drill was won by W. E. Burch, cadet sergeant, Company B, and the Remington typewriter medal went to Oscar Solano. Service medals with honor were presented to Cadets S. Schency, J. Schenck, G. Hall, Beckman Sifford, T. J. Smith, Jr., and A. P. Smith, Jr.

PHILHARMONIC TO GIVE CONCERTS NEXT YEAR

300 Atlantians Agree to Give Ten Dollars Each to Continue Concerts

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, president of the Atlanta Musical association, and Mrs. John Lamar Meek, vice president, have secured the names of 300 citizens of Atlanta who agree to raise the sum of $100 for the support of the Atlanta Philharmonic orchestra during the coming season of 1914. The same number of people have agreed to support the orchestra during 1914.

The 300 subscribers pay $10 apiece for a year's membership, for which they get also two tickets to each concert. It is hoped to increase this number to 500 at least by next fall. The orchestra is composed of forty-eight men, who are paid regular union prices for their services in rehearsal and concert. Mortimer Wilson has been retained as conductor of the orchestra.

One more concert will be given this season. The date will be announced later. From six to ten concerts will be given next year.

The following are the present members of the association who contribute $500:

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, president; T. S. Florence, treasurer; Mr. Harold Sidney Holmes, for Cleveland-Manning company; the Constitution, per Clark Howell; The Journal, per James R. NO MORE BALD HEADS?

Baltimore Specialist Says Baldness Is Unnecessary, and Proves It.

BALTIMORE, May 24.—The intense interest in the wonderful work that is being accomplished in Baltimore and many other cities by William Chas. Keene, president of the Lorrimer Institue, continues unabated. Many cases of baldness and faded hair of years' standing have been remedied by the remarkable preparation being distributed from Mr. Keen's laboratory. Its fame is spreading far and wide and thousands of persons are using this remarkable hair food with gratifying results.

What makes this treatment more popular is the fact that free trial outfits are sent by mail prepaid. Those who wish to try it are strongly advised to write to Mr. Keene at the Lorrimer Institute, Branch 968, Baltimore, Md. They will receive the full trial outfit free of charge and much useful information about the hair which will put them on the road to a rapid and certain improvement.

TECH'S QUARTER-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION WILL ENLIVEN COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM

Biggest Affair in History of Twenty-Five-Year-Old State Institution in Atlanta Will Start June 2 With Quarter-Centennial Address by William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, Great Burlesque Pageant a Feature of the Week

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Georgia School of Technology will be celebrated June 2 to June 11, in connection with the regular commencement exercises.

The celebration will be the most notable of its kind ever held by a southern institution. It will bring to Atlanta some of the most famous speakers in America, including Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan, United States Commissioner of Education P. P. Claxton, Dr. Thomas E. Green, of Chicago; C. Alphonso Smith, of the University of Virginia, and Dr. Herbert S. Bigelow, of Cincinnati.

For this quarter-centennial celebration, former students and alumni of Tech will return to their alma mater from every corner of the union, and the gathering of out of town people will be by far the largest Atlanta ever has had at commencement time.

Friends and partisans of the Georgia Tech, and the general public will be invited cordially to hear all the addresses and attend the celebration. The people of Georgia, who have built and maintained the Georgia Tech and whose institution it really is, will have such an opportunity as they never have had before to learn just what Tech has accomplished in the twenty-five years of its existence and what it stands for today.

As President K. G. Matheson, aptly puts it, "A young giant has grown up in our midst, and even here in Atlanta, we are only beginning to realize what the growth of this institution is meaning in the development of the souh."

THE PROGRAM.

The celebration will open Monday evening, June 2, at the gGrand Opera house, with the quarter-centennial address by Hon. William Jennings Bryan. The formal program for the week has been completed, and is announced here for the first time:

MONDAY, JUNE 2.

8:15 p. m.—Grand Opera house, quarter-centennial address, Hon. William Jennings Bryan, United States secretary of state.

FRIDAY, JUNE 6.

SATURDAY, JUNE 7.

8:15 p. m.—Tech Y. M. C. A. auditorium, Freshman oratorical contest.

SUNDAY, JUNE 8.

MONDAY, JUNE 9.

10 a. m.—Meeting of the board of trustees.

3:30 p. m.—Tech Y. M. C. A. auditorium, literary address—Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education.

5 to 7 p. m.—president's reception.

FOUNDERS' DAY.

TUESDAY, JUNE 10.

9 a. m.—Tech Y. M. C. A. auditorium, meeting of the alumni.

10:30 a. m.—Tech Y. M. C. A. auditorium, Founders' Day exercises.

3:30 p. m.—Founders' Day oration Grand opera house, by C. Alphonso Smith, Ph.D., LL.D., Edgar Allen Poe professor of English, University of Virginia.

9:30 p. m.—Reception by Governor and Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, at the mansion.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11.

8:30 to 10 a. m.—Shop exhibit.

10:30 a. m. — Graduating exercises, Grand opera house, Commencement oration, Dr. Herbert S. Bigelow, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Subject, "Old Institutions and New Ideas."

Commencement Committee: Dr. S. S. Wallace, chairman; Professor E. W. G. Boogher, Dr. J. B. Crenshaw, Professor A. B. Morton, Professor W. V. Skiles, ... A. Turner.

A spectacular and unique feature of the quarter centennial will be the immense burlesque pageant, participated in by all of the students and alumni. This amateur parade will be formed on the Tech campus on the afternoon of June 10, and will march through Atlanta to be reviewed by Governor Brown. It is believed that nearly 2,000 people will take part in this parade, including all the Tech students and more than 1,000 alumni. Each man will follow his own fancy and impersonate whatever comic, mythologic or historic character he pleases. In the parade will be many former graduates who have attained positions of high honor and distinction, and who still maintain their old time college spirit toward their alma mater.

The usual banquets and dances will take place, including the "Bulldog" dance, the cotillion, the Pan-Helenic dance and others.

The graduating class is the largest in the history of the institution. It is composed of 78 young men, as follows:

GIRL AT WHEEL HURT AS CAR RUNS MAN DOWN

H. G. Hucks Knocked Down on Boulevard Terrace—Miss June Rooney Injured

T. G. Hucks, of 58 Boulevard Terrace, was injured painfully Saturday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock when he was knocked down by an automobile, driven by Miss June Rooney, of 254 West Moreland avenue. She was painfully cut in the face and on the head by flying glass as she was hurled over the windshield of the car. It crashed into *a telegraph pole when she made an ef*fort to dodge the man in the street.

Miss Rooney was found to be suffering more than the man who was hit, and both were made as comfortable as possible until ambulances could be summoned from town. In the meantime a passing automobile was pressed into service and the young lady was taken to the Davis-Fisher sanitarium on Linden street, where her injuries were dressed. Mr. Hucks, who lives nearby, as the accident happened almost at the corner of Boulevard Terrace and North Boulevard, was taken to his home in the Grady auto-ambulance. He was suffering from bruises over his entire body, but it is not believed his injuries are serious.

Mr. Hucks had just stepped off a Forrest avenue trolley car, and was on his way home. Miss Rooney was driving to the city, and had just left her home. She did not see Mr. Hucks until it was too late to avoid striking him. She did her best to run the auto into the sidewalk, but the fender struck the man in the street and knocked him down. Then the automobile crashed into the pole on the sidewalk.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SERMON AT WESLEY MEMORIAL

Rev. L. Wilkie Collins Will Preach on "The Badly Married Young Man"

A special sermon for young people will be delivered at Wesley Memorial church tonight by the assistant pastor, Rev. L. Wilkie Collins.

His subject is appropriate to the season of romance and weddings, being "The Badly Married Young Man." The sermon promises to be interesting both to young men and young women.

At the morning service Mr. Collins will preach on the subject, "The Kingdom of God on Earth; or, Sociology's Contribution to the Christian Church of Today."

Mr. Collins next week will assist in a series of evangelistic services at the East Atlanta Methodist church. He has had years of experience in this line of work, and his meetings in all parts of the country and Canada have been uniformly successful.

FINE SOCIAL ENJOYED AT FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The young ladies who are members of the "Gleaners" class of the First Christian Sunday school, enjoyed a fine social yesterday afternoon at the church between the hours of 2 and 6 o'clock. Mrs. W. C. Stanley, their teacher, was there, as were also some fifty members. Numerous delightful games were played, and a buffet lunch was served.

Today is "Flower day" at the First Christian. Everyone has been invited to bring all available flowers to the church, for distribution through it among the prisons, hospitals and other institutions.

DUNN GOES FROM RETAIL CLERK TO STORE MANAGER

Mitchell Street Store of Jacobs' Chain Under His Direction

CHARLES W. DUNN.

Intelligent work, courteous and polite treatment to customers, while a retail clerk in the main store, were the stones upon which Charles W. Dunn erected his successful career and crowned his own efforts with the managership of the branch store at 70 West Mitchell street, one of the largest of the Jacobs' chain of drug stores.

Mr. Dunn began as clerk with Jacobs in 1902. He devoted himself to the work and displayed marked interest in the business. The management and owners soon recognized his good business judgment and when the first vacancy of management of a branch store occurred he was put in the place, it was in 1909 that he was made manager of the Mitchell street branch. His strong personality, backed by courteous treatment to all employes and patrons, soon won in public favor, which has resulted in a rapidly increased trade for the store.

The store is splendidly located, being on the edge of the plaza at the Terminal station. The store is accorded a large patronage by out-of-town people, who have been attracted to the place because of the courteous treatment given each customer.

Mr. Dunn has been with Jacobs' for eleven years and is regarded by the owners of the big chain of splendid drug stores as one of the most successful and best liked employes of their large working force.—(Advt.)

Summer Skin Humours Now Quickly Banished

Eczema, Tetter, Lupus, Pimples, Rash, Boils and All Blood Troubles That Attack the Skin Completely Disappear.

Can't Find a Blemish After Using S. S. S.

Now is the time of year to get quick action on any skin disease. The pores are more open during these early days of summer, and this condition should be taken advantage of. The best remedy is S. S. S., the famous blood purifier.

Its influence in the blood is more healthful, more penetrating, more stimulating, and more productive of noticeable results than anything else ever discovered for the promotion of pure blood.

The skin is but a net work of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health make its first appearance in the skin. There are certain medicinal properties that follow the course of the blood stream, and the influence of these properties is that of an antidote. This is why S. S. S. has such a positive action on the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration. Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily, and why they do not return.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue, and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless.

It is surprising the amount of real blood purification that is accomplished by a single dose of S. S. S.

This famous remedy has an action unknown to any other. It is made entirely of botanical materials, not drug extracts, but from the native roots, hence contains elements which cannot be obtained in prescriptions or combined in other remedies.

It is not a laxative, does not affect the bowels, and since it is relatively just as essential to well-established health as the elements of meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food, it is absorbed at once into the blood vessels and thus promotes a very rapid cleansing influence.

Dr. Westmoreland states that S. S. S. contains one ingredient that serves the active purpose of stimulating the cells of the tissues to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment.

S. S. S., unlike most remedies and prescriptions, contains no "dope," no crude drugs, no mineral drugs. Don't accept something offered you as "just as good." There is only one reason for any one not selling S. S. S., and that is because with crude drugs something else can be made cheaply to sell at a great profit.

S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

TEETH OF CHILDREN SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Third Dental Examination in Two Public Schools Show Remarkable Results

The remarkable improvement about in the condition of the teeth of the pupils in the Crew and Bell street schools was shown by the third dental examination made by a committee from the Atlanta chamber of commerce the past week. The comittee is composed of the follwing gentlemen: Dr. S. W. Fater, chairman; Dr. C. M. Barnwell, Jr., Dr. De Los L. Hill, Dr. M. D. Huff.

Out of an enrollment of 418 pupils at Crew street school, 403 were examined October 12, 1912. On a re-examination May 20 of this year an improvement of 19 1-3 per cent was shown.

Out of an enrollment of 199 at the Bell street school, 186 were examined October 24, 1912, and a report from a re-examination made on the 20th of May of this year showed an improvement of 70 1-2 per cent.

In Crew street school 735 out of 1,000 teeth that neede fillings had been corrected. At Bell street school only 386 teeth were found that needed permanent fillings, and 300 were corrected before the re-examination this month.

There were twelve children at the Bell street school who were found with irregular teeth, and three o fthis number are now undergoing treatment. At Crew street school twenty-seven of the pupils had irregular teeth, and seven of this number are now receiving treatment.

Although Crew street school had much the larger enrollment, there were only eleven permanent teeth among the pupil sthat needed extraction, and eight of these have been pulled. At the Bell street school fourteen permanent teeth were found which needed extraction, and of this number twelve have been extracted.

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT KISSED STENOGRAPHER

(By Associated Press.)

PITTSBURG, May 24.—Mrs. Arthur H. Wessels, who was Alice Lang, a stenographer in the office of Superintendent of Schools Sylvanus L. Heeter, today on the witness stand before the committee of citizens named to probe rumors reflecting on Heeter, told her story of the educator's alleged misconduct.

She said the superintendent had begun his attentions by patting her on the shoulder and playfully kicking her feet beneath her desk, and later had forcibly kissed her. She said she did not resign at once because her salary was needed at home and she feared if she complained to the board of education her story would be contradicted.

A week after the kiss she said she revolted against working at night and the superintendent discharged her. Superintendent Heeter and his counsel sat through the recital and Mrs. Wessels was subjected to cross-examination during which she became confused as to dates.

Arthur H. Wessels, husband of Mrs. Wessels, and Dr. J. Chris Lange, an uncle by marriage, testified to the effect that they had heard the story of Superintendent Heeter's alleged familiarity shortly after Mrs. Wessels had left her position in Heeter's office.

The investigation has been adjourned until Saturday afternoon, when counsel for Heeter will present the superintendent's defense. The final report of the committee is expected to be presented to the board of education by Tuesday of next week.

COUNTIES IN NEW YORK MUST PAY MILITIA

(By Associated Press.)

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 24.—The state courts here today handed down a decision ordering the county to pay members of the National Guard called out for duty during the recent strike of the street car men. The sum amounts to $20,000.

Payment of the bill was refused by the county on the ground that the section of the military law under which the troops were called out by a justice of the state supreme court was unconstitutional in that it gave a civil officer powers that were derogatory to the powers of the governor conferred by the state constitution.

Justice Marcus, in his decision, holds that "the suppression of riots is distinctly a judicial function under the code of criminal procedure.

Bet They Could Put Billiard Balls in Their Mouths; One Stuck

Just to prove which one had the biggest mouth two Decatur stret "shines" wedged a couple of billiard balls in their faces the other day with the result that one lost three of his front teeth and a piece of his tongue before he could get the "10" ball outdoors again.

So runs the police station's latest freak story of Atlanta's darktown citizenry. It is told by an officer who happened to be an eyewitness of the scene whereby Black Sambo, the Carver, won a bet of a new razor staked against a pair of red bones, from Yaller Jim.

The officer says that Sambo and James were having a heated argument the other night the while they decorated the scenery in front of a combination refreshment parlor and pool room.

The respective sizes of their two mouths was the question at issue. Each claimed to have the largest food receptacle.

"Why, look heah, nigger," finally declared the Carver. "Ah'll jest natchally betchu dat Ah ken put a billiard ball in mah mouf and yo' caint."

James, the saffron-hued, was agreeable, and each procured a ball from the pool table, while a crowd of dusky admirers cheered lustily.

Sambo made a three-cushion shot with the "2" rock and packed it between his right molar and the left side of his jaw. Jim followed with a billiard against the roof of his mouth which pocketed the "10" close to his palate.

It was not two minutes before Sambo succeeded in putting enough English on the "2" with his tongue to get it out. Not so, James. The "10" ball had evidently decided to stay awhile and after several fruitless combinations and banks Jim made it plain to his audience by a series of grunts that he was stuck on the proposition.

It was thirty-five minutes before judicious use of soap, vaseline, and a ball of cord extracted the "10" from the mouth of the losing bettor. When it finally came out it swept away one side of Jim's jaw and a quarter section of his tongue.

At least, so says the officer.

Boy of Seventeen Girl of Fifteen Are United in Marriage

When L. C. Warren, aged seventeen years, escorted Miss Sadie Neal, aged fifteen years, down the steps of her home at 18 Wood street Saturday night, the parents of the young lady supposed that the boy and girl were bound for the theater.

Hardly an hour later they returned, and with not a few giggles and blushes the girl stated to her father, F. M. Neal, that she and young Warren had just been married at the residence of Rev. A. V. Pickern, 189 Cameron street.

The girl bride up until a year ago was a pupil at Grant Park school. She and young Warren had been friends for years. He is employed at the Shannon refrigerating works. In some manner he obtained the license for their marriage the other day, and taking with them two friends, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Fenn, they called on Dr. Pickern at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night and the knot was tied.

Mr. Warren claims the marriage has met with the approval of both families. The newly-weds will make their home hereafter at 14 Loomis avenue.

FOOD

You'll promptly discover the reason why tens of thousands now eat a regular morning dish of Grape-Nuts and cream as the cereal part of breakfast.

White bread and many of the prepared breakfast foods are made of grains from which three-fourths of the most valuable brain-building and health-sustaining elements has been removed.

Grape-Nuts food is made of whole wheat and malted barley, milled under scientific supervision and made into crisp, golden granules, rich in well-balanced nourishment.

At this time of year a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream, as the cereal part of a meal, is especially valuable in meeting the requirements of body and brains.

The Originals of These Letters in Our Window Today

THE ETOWAH Georgia's Most Famous Shop

Atlanta, 5, 21, 1913.

Gentlemen:

The 16 chairs we have installed in our shop are giving perfect service, as we have found it to be the simplest and easiest chair for the barber to work on; and, at the same time, its handsome appearance, durability and absense of upkeep expense makes it the best investment for the shop owner.

ALLEN M. PIERCE "The Boy's Friend"

Atlanta, Ga., May 21, 1913.

Gentlemen:—The six chairs I have show absolutely no effects of the hard service they have given during the past year, and I certainly recommend them as the one best buy for the Shop Owner. They combine a handsome appearance with great durability and absolute cleanliness, and besides, it is by far the most convenient chair for the barber and enables him to do more and better work in a given time than he can on any other chair.

Signed,
ALLEN M. PIERCE.

From SUNNY CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles, Cal., 9, 22, 11.

Gentlemen:

The eight latest Berninghaus White Enamel Hercules Barber Chairs which you installed in connection with the remodeling of our shop are, in our opinion, the best on the market; grand in appearance, durable, and equipped with the best mechanism.

EXCLUSIVE FEATURES THAT MAKE THE BERNINGHAUS "THE WORLD'S BEST"

Which will be cheerfully demonstrated in our show room and are also fully explained in our catalogue

The Simplest, Strongest and most Practical Hydraulic Machinery ever placed in a barber chair. Entirely out of the way of the operator.

Operated by a solid cold rolled steel lever, on which a 200 pound man can stand without damaging it.

Chair can be raised 2½ inches higher than any other, due to it being constructed on absolutely scientific mechanical principles.

Pedestal is in one solid piece, and the base is self-cleaning, as hair or dirt does not find ready lodgment on it.

The Automatic Safety Air Check prevents the heavy foot rest coming down with a slam.

Adjustable Head Rest does not have to be removed to cut hair, a twist of the wrist and it's out of the way; and put back again as quickly.

The Foot and Leg Rest the strongest and best, and does not interfere with the customer getting in and out of the chair.

FLORIDA TO ISSUE $6,000,000 BONDS TO DRAIN SWAMPS

Governor Urges Law That Will See Completion of Immense Project to Clear Up Everglades of State

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 24.—There is great difference of opinion as to what the requirements in a financial way are going to be to complete the drainage of the Everglades, and this divergence is going to be threshed out in the house when the bill comes up as the special order Monday.

It is the history of all great projects that serious differences arise and operate to defeat their main purposes, as witness the matter of sea level or lock canal across the isthmus. It required some time before that question was settled in such a way that the work could be continued, and now the world is on the verge of witnessing the completion of that giant undertaking.

It is not surprising that the friends of the drainage project, which may be considered one of the great enterprises of the day, there being no drainage work under progress that compares to it in magnitude, should honestly differ over the best methods to be employed for its completion.

PLANS $6,000,000 BONDS.

Governor Park Trammell is trying to get through a bill authorizing a bond issue for six million dollars, which he thinks is ample to insure the completion of the main system of canals. Governor Trammell takes the position that the state is under obligations to cut enough canals to lower the level of Lake Okeechobee four feet, and that the arterial system already laid out will do that. He does not think that expert knowledge is necessary to realize and appreciate the situation to this degree.

The state has spent about two million dollars, and the work is about half done. The First-Clark contract is more than half completed, which calls for the opening of 185 miles of main canals. One of the canals has been cut through to the lake, and others are pretty well on the way, so that it will not be long if the work can go along unhindered to carrying out the state's obligation to lower the lake.

There are others who assert, however, that the act of congress which created the drainage commission known as the trustees of the internal improvement fund, saddled upon the trustees the obligation to "drain and reclaim."

They think that the trustees have not complied with the conditions of their trust when they have only cut a system of main canals and have lowered the waters of the lake four feet.

It does not look as if the governor's plan would be approved, though the debate on the subject may bring out such conclusive matter as will influence its passage.

MAY HAVE OPPOSITION.

Representative Bussey, who introduced the governor's bill, is one of the strongest debaters in the house, and he will stand as chief sponsor for the measure. Speaker Farris, on the other hand, who stands close to the governor, and Representative Brown, of Polk, another one of the administration men, are not inclined to accept the chief executive's view, and Judge Worley, of Dade county, is outspokenly against it.

The latter claims that when the state sets out to comply with its obligations that there is much more land to be drained than that which is laid out in the drainage district of something more than 4,000,000 acres.

There is a vast territory, he says, which it would be difficult to define, which comes under that obligation as seemed under the act granting swamp and overflowed lands to the state upon the condition that they be drained and reclaimed. How much he would not attempt to say with certainty, but in the neighborhood of 18,000,000 acres.

Dorner Trio Jumps from Vienna to Atlanta

ONE OF THE DORNER TRIO.

One of the longest jumps ever made by a vaudeville act was probably ended this week, when the Dorner Trio, a high-class team of Tyrolese singers, jumped from Vienna, Austria, to Atlanta, Ga., to fill an engagement at the Montgomery theater.

The team was en route exactly twenty-three days, their route being from Vienna to Bremen, and thence to Baltimore and down the coast to Savannah, thence to Atlanta.

This team was brought south for an extended engagement.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

EDUCATIONAL FEATURES AT MONTGOMERY THEATER

The Montgomery theater has won much favorable comment on their educational features, included in the Friday program of each week.

This particular part of the high-class entertainment attracts large crowds at each performance, and program always elicits the most commendable praise for the management from the patrons.

The Montgomery maintains a very high standard of motion picture shows and the "movie" patrons, when looking for the best exclusive attractions, always go to Montgomery's, where they have never yet been disappointed.

The Friday programs appeal strongly to the public, not merely from the highly entertaining feature, but for their instructive and educational merit.

The Alcazar.

Miss Helen Renstrom, known as "The Swedish Nightingale," and given out by the management of the Alcazar last week as the classiest singer that ever appeared in a moving picture show in Atlanta, proved her right to that title beyond all doubt this week by her wonderful success before one of the most critical audiences in the city. If there is a house that refuses to give you the hand unless it's absolutely coming to you, it's the Alcazar, and you've simply got to be some artist to make them take notice. Miss Renstrom did the trick, and did it easily, for the smallest number of encores she has taken during the entire week has been two, and from that to six.

Miss Renstrom is, without doubt, as the management announced, the most talented singer that ever appeared in a moving picture theater in Atlanta. Her renditions of the popular classics and lighter operatic airs are a pure delight. The length of Miss Renstrom's engagement has not been announced, but it is understood that it will extend over a period of several weeks.

PROBST, WETZER & CO. BACKED R. S. RYAN

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—"Friends" of Probst, Wetzer & Co., a New York banking firm now out of business, and the firm itself backed Richard S. Ryan financially in promoting the Controller bay project and the proposed railroad from the bay to the Bering coal fields, according to testimony today before the senate territories committee by A. J. Schuerrer, who was a member of the firm.

Mr. Schuerrer declined to give the names of "the friends," but said to the best of his knowledge and belief neither the friends nor his firm had any connection with the enterprises of "the Guggenheims or Morgans," and that the Guggenheim-Morgan syndicate had no interest in the Controller bay project.

He is in a serious condition, little hope being entertained for his recovery. Otwell is in jail without bond.

SIMS ENTERS RACE AGAINST REMBERT FOR BLEASE'S JOB

Grandson of Famous Author Will Be Candidate for Governor in 1914—Claims to Be Blease's Friend

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 24.—Charles Carroll Sims, grandson of the famous author, William Gilmore Sims, and himself one of the best known public men in South Carolina, will be a candidate for governor in 1914 to succeed Governor Cole L. Blease and will dispute with George R. Rembert, of Columbia, the claim to the political following of the present chief executive. For Mr. Sims is a Blease man, and is high in the councils of the advisers of the present state administration. Besides he is a warm personal friend of the governor.

Mr. Sims has not formally announced his candidacy but it is known that he contemplates making the race. He lives at Barnwell county in the southwestern section of the state, is a lawyer by profession and comes from a family that has long been prominent in South Carolina. Although a warm personal and political friend of the present governor, Mr. Sims is not obnoxious to the foes of the present administration and would command followers from among the men who voted for Judge Ira B. Jones last summer.

CANDIDATES ARE BUSY.

Although this is, strictly speaking, an "off" year in politics, the candidates for governor are stirring around among the people, making school closing addresses, and being in every place where there is an opportunity to get acquainted and meet the people. Of the candidates who have so far announced Richard I. Manning, of Sumter, has once before made a race for governor.

In 1906 he went into the second primary and was defeated by M. F. Ansel, although Senator Tillman endorsed him. In that same year the present governor, Cole L. Blease, was badly defeated for governor, he running on the old state dispensary platform. Mr. Manning has served Sumter county in the state senate, has long been a member of the state Democratic executive committee. He is a lawyer by profession.

John G. Richards, Jr., a member of the state railroad commission, is another candidate for governor. He was defeated for this office in 1910, the year that Mr. Blease was elected. Mr. Richards has seen service in the house of representatives, on the state Democratic executive committee, and in the state militia. He is a farmer by profession and a warm personal and political friend of United States Senator B. R. Tillman. His home is in Kershaw county.

Mendel L. Smith, of Camden, the present speaker of the house, is also in the race for governor. He has several terms been speaker of the lower house and long a member from Kershaw county. He is a lawyer by profession.

Charles A. Smith, of Timmonsville, in Florence county, is serving his second term as lieutenant governor and in 1914 will seek elevation to the seat of Governor Blease. He formerly served in the house and is a lawyer by profession. He was re-elected to his present office last summer without opposition.

John G. Clinckscales, of Spartanburg, is a professor in Woofford college and is seeking the once of governor largely on a platform of compulsory education. He is new to politics but is well known throughout the state and comes from the banner voting county in South Carolina.

George R. Rembert, of Columbia, is serving his second term in the lower house from Richland county, and by virtue of being the titular leader of the administration forces in that body expects to fall heir to the large part of the Blease vote. He is a lawyer by profession and has never before made a race for a state office.

R. A. Cooper, of Laurens, is serving his second term as solicitor for that circuit and will offer for governor next year. He too saw service in the state legislature and is well known throughout the heavy voting up country.

SCIENCE HAS FOUND A WAY TO AVOID TAKING CALOMEL

The Science of Medicine Is Working a Way to Avoid Taking Calomel, Salts and All Harmful Drugs That Injure the Organs of Elimination.

Calomel (Mercury) is a powdered metal that is never eliminated from the system, the more of it you take, the more you cripple yourself. Mercury has just reaped its toll by killing a very prominent man in Georgia.

Mercury is dangerous in any form, when it falls to kill it is bound to leave the system weaker than it was before. Salts do not touch the liver, it flushes the bowels, removes water and irritates the stomach and bowels. There is no place in modern medicine for salts.

Skilled physicians have been working on this subject for a long time and they have at last succeeded in making a purely vegetable and positively harmless medicine that acts on the liver and bowels at the same time.

You can get this medicine at any drug store now under the trade name of Dr. Vernier's Liver Ease, for 50c per bottle. Your druggist guarantees it to you. If you are not more than satisfied, ask for your money back and it will be refunded immediately.

There is no standard by which you can judge Dr. Vernier's Liver Ease. There is nothing like it. Thousands who used it say it is the best all around medicine in the world. Try a bottle on our guarantee. One dose will time will do the work. The taste is fine. Look for the pink package.—(Advt.)

CALIFORNIA LABOR CALLS FOR VOTE ON JAP LAW

Webb Bill Not "Strong" Enough and Initiative and Referendum Is Asked

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.—Resolutions published today by two powerful San Francisco labor organizations made two things certain with reference to California's anti-alien land laws.

First, that organized labor will seek a substitute measure by invoking the initiative on the ground that the so-called Webb bill is not strong enough. Reference to the initiative will not delay the present act from going into effect on August 10. Sufficient signatures to call for an election are said to be available without going outside of San Francisco.

Second, that another section of organized labor will seek not only to invoke the initiative, but will circulate petitions for a referendum election, which, if called, will prevent the Webb bill from going into effect until the election is decided, which could not be until November, 1914.

Favoring the application of referendum as well as the initiative are the Asiatic Exclusion league, Olaf Tveitmoe, president, and the San Francisco Building Trades council, which last Thursday night adopted resolutions ap*proving the stand of the Asiatic Exclu*sion league.

Both agree that the present law is a "defective piece of legislation," because it permits "three-year leases, indefinitely, of land in California by aliens."

In opposition to this resolution, the San Francisco labor council, with 200 delegates from the building trades council in attendance, unanimously adopted last night resolutions that the initiative be invoked for a substitute, but the referendum be not included.

Jacobs' Liver Salt On Arising and You'll Enjoy Your Breakfast

No appetite in the morning? Bilious? Headache? Best thing in the world for you is Jacobs' Liver Salt.

Bad breath, biliousness, constipation, dayime drowsiness, wakefulness at night, mean FOOD-POISONING. Undigested food, fermented, is doling out poison to the system.

Jacobs' Liver Salt instantly flushes the alimentary tract with water, sending a cleansing stream through it from all parts of the system. Packed, clogging matter is loosened and with the fermentation washed away, pressure is removed, liver and kidneys resume their natural cleansing processes of elimination. No forced action as with calomel and severe purgatives; never a griping pain or nausea.

Take Jacobs' Liver Salt on arising. It is effervescent and stimulating. You feel better at once, good appetite for breakfast and good digestion; that dull heaviness vanishes and your brain is clear and quick. Keeps one up to the top notch.

MAY FESTIVAL HELD AT "SNAP-BEAN FARM"

Children of Public Schools Play Part in Brilliant Spectacle on Saturday

A wonderful picture was presented by the hundreds of school children and the many "grown-ups," too, who gath-ered Saturday afternoon at the famous "Snap Bean Farm" to witness a brill-iant May festival given under the aus-pices of the Uncle Remus Memorial as-sociation.

The drills, dances and ceremonies had been practiced for many days by the performers and the earnestness of their work was shown in Saturday's spectacle. One of the many interest-ing feature of the ceelbration was singing by children of the seventh and eighth grades of the Atlanta public schools of a number of songs taught them for the occasion by the musical director, Miss Harrafson.

Pretty Miss Catherine Vickers was crowned "Queen o fthe May" after the maypole dance, and the children march-ed before her strewing beautiful flow-ers and paying homage. After the ex-ercises delightful refreshments were served to all, who had attended, and souvenirs of the occasion were gener-ously distributed.

The success of the festival is due to the ladies of West End, who pro-moted the enterprise. Among the com-mittee chairmen were: Mrs. Barnard Montgomery, Mrs. J. S. Nicols, Mrs. W. M. Jenkins, Mrs. H. L. Crumley, Mrs. J. E. Collier, Mrs. F. P. Helfner, Mrs. J. S. Purser, Mrs. George Sharpe and Miss Leila Culberson.

MUSIC ARRANGED FOR BIRTH OF COMPOSER

Centenary of Wagner's Birth-day Will Be Celebrated at Auditorium

The centenary of the birth of Rich-ard Wagner will be celebrated in At-lanta this afternoon by a free concert at the auditorium-armory under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival association.

This is one of the regular series of free organ concerts, with the differ-ence that Wagnerian music will pre-ponderate on the program. The pro-gram is as follows:

Wagner—Overture to Rienzi.
Wagner—Aria "The Evening Star," from Tannhauser.
Wagner—Grand march from Tann-hauser.
Starnes—Grand Chocur Triumphale.

As this program shows, it will be concluded by one of Dr. Starnes' own compositions, a "Grand Chorus," which is said by friends who have heard it to show talent of the very highest rank. It also displays in a remarkable way the wonderful powers of the great or-gan.

This concert begins promptly at 3:30 o'clock. The doors will be open an hour beforehand, and all persons are urgently requested to be in their seats by the time the music commences.

MOVEMENT IS ON TO ESTABLISH NEW COUNTY

Residents of Southwest Georgia Getting Ready to Make Candler County

Although it has been very little heard from, report has it that the movement to establish the new county of Candler in southeast Georgia is about one of the liveliest and most strenuous efforts in the direction of new county establishment that has been made in Georgia in the last de-cade.

F. H. Sills, editor of the Metter Ad-verliser, who is secretary of the new county committee, was in Atlanta yes-terday, and when asked about what had been done in the campaign for the establishment of Candler county, re-plied:

"We are just working along quietly. Our committee has its eyes open, and at the proper time we feel that we will be able to make a satisfactory and effective showing to the legislature."

When pressed, Mr. Sills admitted that some pretty strenuous work has been done in a quiet way in behalf of the Candler county movement, and he seemed well satisfied with the progress which has been made. The other mem-bers of the committee are Dr. R. D. Jones, chairman; A. J. Bird, treasurer, and J. R. Dixon, assistant secretary. The organization is not a large one, but it is said to be one of the best working bodies yet organized with this object in view.

Mr. Sills said that 99 per cent of the people in the territory purposed to be included in the new county, which seeks to take in parts of Emanuel, Tattnall and Bulloch, are strongly in favor of the movement, and that it will have practically no opposition what-ever from within.

The territory sought to be incorpor-ated in the new county is an extremely rich one, but largely undeveloped. Its lack of development has been due to the fact that the territory involved is in rather remote sections of the coun-ties from which it is sought to be taken, and they have not given it the attention it merits.

Home for Blind Girl Is Provided Through The Journal's Story

Through the publication of a story in The Journal last Tuesday about the little blind girl, who, deserted by parents and friends, was in charge of the associated charities until a home could be provided for her, the necessary funds have been raised to send her to an institution in Jersey City.

Through the assistance of Father Jackson, of St. Anthony's church, West End, arrangements have been made with the School for the Blind there in charge of the sisters, to take the little girl in charge.

Enough money has been secured al-ready to defray the expenses of her trip and buy her sufficient clothing, while a prominent Atlanta man and his wife, who are going to New York, have agreed to take care of her on the journey.

Father and Daughter Are Drowned Together

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark., May 24.—A father, his daughter of nineteen and two young women school teachers, members of a camping party from Rus-sellville, were drowned near here late today while bathing in the Illinois river. The dead:

W. A. CRAWFORD.
MISS FRANCES CRAWOFRD.
MISS RUTH VAN LANDINGHAM.
MISS VERA MEADE.

The Crawford family and a number of young women school teachers ar-rived at the river today for an outing. All went bathing. Miss Crawford got beyond her depth, and her father, Miss Van Landingham and Miss Meade went to her rescue. After struggling in the current for a moment, all four appar-ently stepped from a sand bar into deep water and sank from sight. The bodies were recovered.

Mr. Crawford was principal of the public schools at Russellville, secretary of the Arkansas Athletic association and one of the most widely known educators of the state. Miss Van Landingham was one of his assistants and Miss Meade was principal of the high school at Ola, Ark. She was the daughter of U. G. Meade, a Russell-ville attorney.

Everyone Likes Music

NEARLY everyone would like to play. And they could, if they had a CAROLA INNER-PLAYER. It is not enough that our Player with its eighty-eight fingers strikes accurately every note. Many other instruments do as much, but, the is the only one which has a Miniature Keyboard. It is this device which takes the stiffness out of the stroke. It enables you, or the child in your home, to play with a musicianly touch. Many other ex-clusive features assist in giving you perfect control of the expression.

To Prove It—Make this Test

Let us play your favorite composition. You will be unable to tell, unless you are looking on, whether it is being played by hand, or with the Player mechanism, so perfectly equipped is the CAROLA INNER-PLAYER with every device that controls expression.

If, heretofore, you have thought all Players mechanical, we can prove to your satisfaction that there is at least one which produces music as you like to hear it played.

The New and Handsome Funeral Home of Harry G. Poole, 96 S. Pryor Street

A Modern Establishment Where Every Home-Like Convenience Is Afforded.

The friends of Harry G. Poole, the well known funeral director, are congratulating him upon the splendid suc-cess he has achieved since, a few years ago, he began his present line of work.

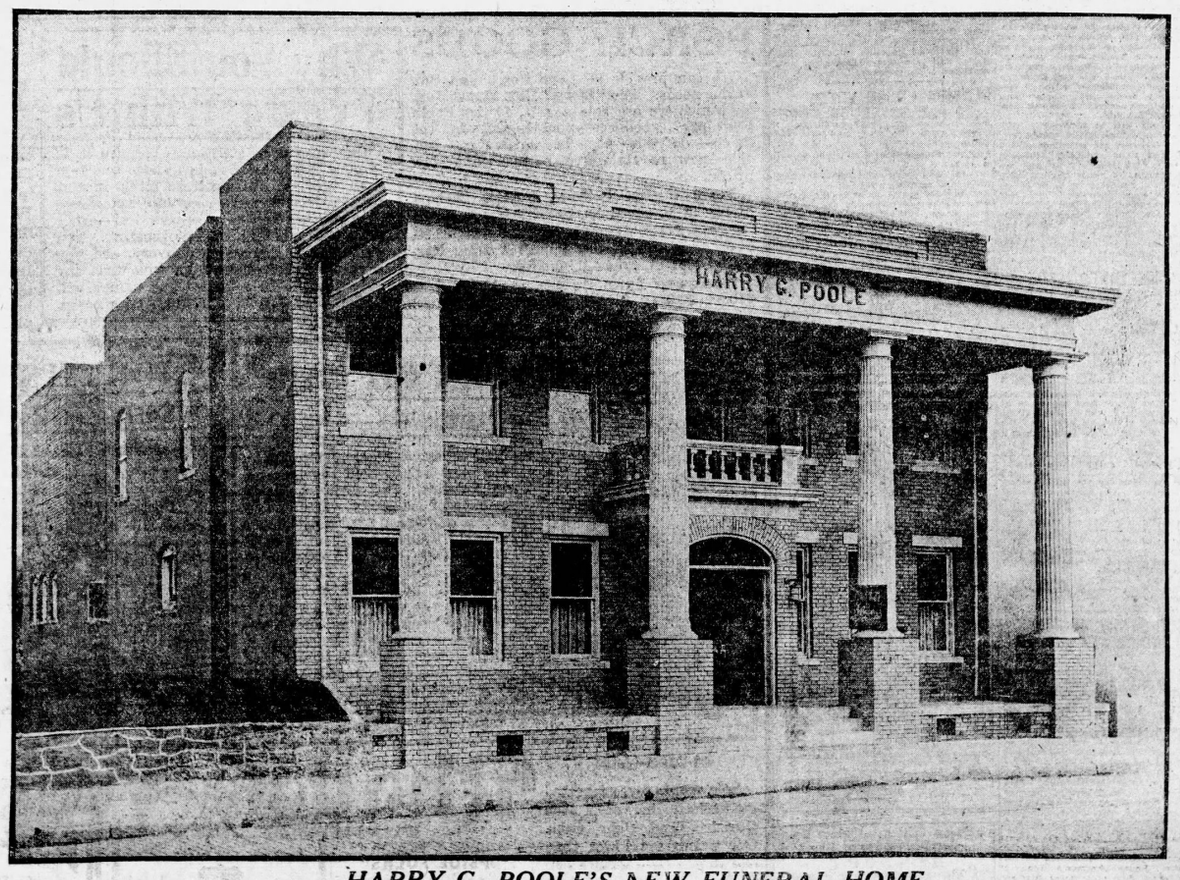
Mr. Poole has just moved into his own building at 96 South Pryor street. In convenience and beauty of arrangement for its purpose it is, perhaps, the most modern in the entire South.

Mr. Poole designates it as his Funeral Home—and rightly so. Bright, airy—built upon the lines of a modern private home—and furnished with elegant, cheery fittings, its interior presents at once an appearance which helps to dispel the gloom so naturally attendant upon those who have occasion to visit an establishment of this kind. There is no suggestion of the gloomy, melancholy air which so frequently encircles the business house of the undertaker.

In the place of what is commonly termed as the "chapel" in most under-taking establishments, Mr. Poole has pro-vided two large, airy parlors, which are home-like in their appointments. These are so arranged that two funeral services can be held at the same time, should oc-casion arise, without conflict of any kind. Every convenience is provided, and a funeral conducted in one of these par-lors is similar in every detail to a home service.

In addition, a new, and what will doubtless prove a most desirable feature, is the furnishing of special bedrooms on the second floor, where strangers passing through the city with the bodies of loved ones can spend the night in quiet, free of charge, of course, and be near their deceased members.

In fact, the new Funeral Home of Mr. Poole is homelike in its every appearance, and his friends are invited to drop in and inspect for themselves his model, new and handsome business house.



HARRY G. POOLE'S NEW FUNERAL HOME

INDIAN COMMISSIONER TELLS OF SEMINOLES

Dean Spencer, of Florida, Tells of Peculiar Customs of Indians

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 24.—Dean Spencer, of Orlando, recently appointed through the work of Senator Fletcher as commissioner to the Indians for the state of Florida, talks interestingly concerning the work which he is to take up after it is seen what the state will do toward taking care of its aboriginal inhabitants.

"It is rather startling when we realize that within 200 miles of the city of Tampa there is a race, savage or at least semi-barbarous, with a distinct language and utterly different in manners, dress and customs from other people in the world," says the commissioner.

"The Seminole is distinct in type from any other Indian. Usually he is a magnificent specimen of manhood, handsome to look upon, but very uncommunicative, because he hates the white man with a bitterness that time seems to have intensified.

"In appearance he is very striking, having a clear, reddish brown skin, perfectly formed limbs, jet black hair, the piercing eye of an eagle, aquiline nose and prominent cheek bones. They stand very erect and when speaking look you squarely in the eye, impressing you with the fact that their every statement is truth and they expect your answers to be the same.

"Their camps are in the most inaccessible places and consist of palmetto thatched buildings, the immense roof being supported on posts, the building having no side walls. Their home life is happy and no friction is ever seen between the different members of the family, each member, even the small children, having clearly defined duties which they never shirk.

"Their genealogy is always traced through the female line, and when a brave marries he must live in his wife's clan. Their names are rythmic and beautiful and are bestowed in a romantic manner, being the first thing that impresses the mother. An example, Asse-ho-lar (Osceola), the Rising Sun. Etaulehatcho, the Little Owl; Hatulcahatsee, the May Wind.

"The dress of the male consists of a blouse with a kilt skirt falling to the knees. The costume of the women consists of but two garments, one a short jumper with sleeves and the other a skirt reaching to the ankles which is fastened low at the waist with a draw string, leaving quite a space between the two which is entirely naked. The wearing of beads is extraordinary and excessive. One string weighed thirty pounds and measured eighty yards. No gold jewelry is worn, but silver ornaments are common.

PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT.

"The physical condition of the Seminole is of the highest type. This is due to the fact that they are extremely clean in morals, person and home life. Washing is a part of their religion.

"They are absolutely honest—lying is unknown, adultery is punished by death and the offspring, if any, is destroyed.

"In religion they are as unlike as in other matters. Their chief deity is Hesuketamesee, which means the Great Spirit and fire. Lightning and the sun are manifestations of this God and are worshipped accordingly. They will not use fire wood from a tree that has been killed by lightning. They since a piece of meat in the blaze when preparing meals. The sun is greeted each morning by a nod and when an Indian lights his pipe the first mouthful of smoke is blown toward the sun as an oblation.

"Agriculture is followed in a very crude way, each camp having a small patch of sweet potatoes, cane and corn. The Indian will search out a fertile tract of land and expend great effort in clearing it of semi-tropical growths, plant three crops and then move to a new location. The soil is very light and as they know nothing of scientific fertilization, a move every three years is necessary on account of the soil having become depleted.

"The work will be necessarily very discouraging because it will take a long time to overthrow the traditions of 300 years. But it is gradually becoming more easy to approach them and the future outlook is much brighter than ever before. Interest in them is increasing in every part of the state and the national government has now started a permanent work among them, and it is confidently expected that a few years of patient effort will show a distinct advance in the civilization of this most interesting race."

CARNEGIE TAKES ISSUE WITH DR. LYMAN ABBOTT

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 24.—Before sailing for Europe today Andrew Carnegie gave out a statement in which he took issue with Dr. Lyman Abbott on the subject of peace. He refers to Dr. Abbott as "our lamented ally who has recently wandered astray," and characterizes as an astounding solution his recent declaration that "there are two ways of promoting peace, one by making out nation so weak it cannot fight, and the other by making it so strong that it need not fight."

This "panacea" can only succeed, Mr. Carnegie says, "by convincing nations emerging from war that they had reached one class or the other—either weak or strong. The history of Europe he declares, shows that "the defeated nation is incited by defeat to revenge as a patriotic duty, and the strong ever strengthen their powers to repel probable attacks."

The true panacea for ending war lays in the growing belief of brotherhood affection, he continued.

He will be gone until October, spending much of his time at Skibo castle, Scotland.

WILSON SENDS MESSAGE TO INDIANS OF AMERICA

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—President Wilson sat in his study today and sent a message by phonegraph to the American Indians. It will be translated into the various tribal dialects and taken on a 22,000-mile tour of Indian reservations of the country by Dr. Joseph K. Dixon, of Philadelphia, of the Rodman-Wanamaker expedition. Secretary Lane and Acting Commissioner Abbott also made records.

"I rejoice to foresee the day," said the president in part, quoting Thomas Jefferson, "when the red men become truly one people with us, enjoying all the rights and privileges we do and living in peace and plenty."

AMBASSADOR PAGE SHY OF NEWSPAPER MEN

American Publisher Guards Against Interviews on Reaching Liverpool, England

(By Associated Press.)

LIVERPOOL, May 24.—That's what I call a generous welcome," was the comment of Walter Hines Page, American ambassador at London, when he landed here today from the liner Baltic. He referred to the sunny day, which he thoroughly enjoyed after the chill which had prevailed outside the bar and on the Mersey.

The ambassador was met by Irwin B. Laughlin, secretary of the American embassy, and Horace Lee Washington, American consul at Liverpool, and was cheered by a considerable crowd.

The Stars and Stripes and Union Jacks were seen in all directions.

"I am glad to see you," Ambassador Page said to the reporters, "but I have nothing to say."

Mr. Page then glanced at newspaper reports of interviews from him before he left New York and at Queenstown. He repudiated a report crediting him with saying that, because he was not rich, he had no intention of entering largely into society functions. He warded off political questions.

Mexican Constitutionalists Meet at Piedras Negras to Form Congress

(By Associated Press.)

EAGLE PASS, May 24.—Several members of the Mexican chamber of deputies who supported the late President Madero arrived in Piedras Negras today to form the nucleus of a constitutional congress. Pending the outcome of the present revolution, they will first organize as a council to Governor Carranza.

Governor Felipe Riveras, of Sinaloa, and Governor Alberto Fuentes, of Aguas Calientes, arrived last night and conferred with Carranza.

FLORIDA HOUSE VOTES TO PAY GOVERNOR MORE

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 24.—The house this morning passed a bill increasing the governor's salary to $6,000 a year.

Local bills were considered in the house and senate.

A baseball game between the members of the two houses is the feature planned for this afternoon. Governor Trammell and Attorney General West will umpire.

That Corn Is a Sure "Goner" Now

"GETS-IT," the New-Plan Corn Cure, Gets Any Corn Surely, Quickly.

You'll say, "It does beat all how quick 'GETS-IT' got rid of that corn. It's almost magic!" "GETS-IT" gets every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about 2 seconds to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callus and bunion you've got.

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

Atlantic Squadron "Sinks" Under Fire Of U. S. Submarines

(By Associated Press.)

NEWPORT, R. I., May 24.—Eleven of the biggest battleships in the navy, constituting the Atlantic squadron, were sunk, theoretically, today in an encounter with five submarines off Block Island sound. The attack took place three hours after dawn and under a dull sky and streaks of fog.

The battleship fleet expected the attack and all hands had been mustered to quarters when the gray back of an underwater craft arose out of the sea off the bow of the flagship Wyoming. Before the guns of the flagship could be trained on the "enemy," a "dummy" torpedo struck the Wyoming well below the water line.

The 26,000 ton warship, which cost several million dollars to build, foundered, carrying down most of her 800 men, according to the umpires.

One by one the other battleships were torpedoed and sent to the bottom, then the beet returned to Narrayansett Bay with the victorious submarines.

EVIDENCE IS GIVEN AGAINST BURTON GIBSON

(By Associated Press.)

NEWBURGH, N. Y., May 24.—Taking of testimony in the case of Burton W. Gibson, charged with the murder of Mrs. Rosa Szabo at Greenwood lake, last July, was begun here today.

Deforest Chauncey, clerk of the hotel at Greenwood Lake, told of the arrival of Gibson and Mrs. Szabo, the death of the woman and the recovery of the body.

Alexander McDowell, a boatman, testified that on the day of the drowning he rented to the couple the light rowboat which figured in the fatality.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL CLOSES AT DOUGLAS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DOUGLAS, Ga., May 24.—The Eleventh district agricultural school brings to a close its fifth annual session with the following exercises:

The graduating class for 1913 is composed of nine young men and young women, as follows.

Mr. G. M. Yarbrough, Jeff Davis county; Mr. Otis Woodard, Laurens county; Miss Allie Fales and Mr. Emmett Welchel, from Douglas, Coffee county; Mr. R. B. Wilson, from New York state; Mr. J. P. Joiner, from Brooks county; Mr. G. P. Crews, from Charlton county; Mr. K. F. Baldwin, from Clinch county, and Mr. R. G. Jennings, from Savannah, Chatham county.

BLEASE SAYS REUNION HAS TOO MUCH RED TAPE

Consequently South Carolina Governor Won't Make Trip to Gettysburg

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 24.—Governor Blease had planned to attend the Gettysburg reunion and to take his entire staff, or as many of them as could attend with him. The governor stated this morning, however, that he had received so many invitations to deliver addresses in this state during the summer, and particularly on the Fourth of July, that he feels that his first duty is to his own state, and that he should not be out of South Carolina on this national holiday.

There is another reason for Governor Blease's change of attitude in regard to attending the Gettysburg reunion. The governor is of the opinion that there is entirely too much red tape connected with this affair. He says that he had thought that it was to be a genuine reunion of the blue and the gray. However, he has had some correspondence with the secretary in charge, and he has received this morning a letter from the secretary asking for certain credentials, etc. In view of all the correspondence the governor has reached the conclusion that only those with certain specified credentials will be looked after, and, while this would not affect the governor and his staff, the governor says that he does not care to attend an occasion of this kind in which special privileges will be extended to any one, even to the governor. The governor this morning wrote Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, the secretary, as follows:

"Your letter of May 20 received. There seems to be so much red tape connected with securing quarters for the Gettysburg reunion that, in view of this fact, and in further view of the correspondence I have heretofore had with you, and your seeming lack of interest, I have decided not to attend with my staff, as I had planned. I trust that a good number of veterans from this state will be able to attend."

The governor said that in view of all the circumstances he believed the best place for the old soldiers of South Carolina on this occasion would be at home, but that he wanted to leave to each individual veteran the matter of whether or not he would attend, and that the only interest he now had was that he hoped that each veteran who might decide to attend would have the time of his life.

RETURNED FOR EXECUTION, BUT GIVEN FREEDOM

(By Associated Press.)

CARCASSONNE, France, May 24.—Miquel Vallespi, who recently returned here from the Argentine Republic and gave himself up to the police, declaring that he wished to go to the guillotine for the murder of a woman fifteen years ago, was given his freedom today.

Vallespi related his story in the assize court before a jury and told of his struggles with his conscience, which finally led to his spiritual conversion and irresistibly impelled him to give up a prosperous position in Argentina to expiate his crime in France to satisfy the law. The jury, without leaving the box, acquitted him amid applause.

The crime caused a great sensation in France at the time, and Vallespi, who was suspected of killing the woman for her money, disappeared. He was adjudged guilty by default and condemned to the guillotine.

TRUSTEE'S SALE, June 10th

The Alexander Lumber Plant, Mules, Wagons, Harness and Stock on Hand on June 7th, 1913

This splendid plant, situated on South Pryor street, at its junction with the right of way of the Southern railway, is in excellent repair, and is running at full capacity. The plant, consisting of 1 boiler, 2 engines, 1 saw, door and blind machinery, and planing mill, together with mules, wagons, harness and all stock on hand on June 7, 1913, will be sold to the highest bidder.

Sealed bids will be received at the office of the referee, and will be opened at 11 o'clock on June 10, 1913. Separate bids to be made on plant, mules and wagons, lumber and material.

Where Will I Go On My VACATION

As the hot summer sun shines down upon the tired business, professional, and workingman, the society woman and the housewife, the mind naturally turns to rest and recreation.

Some Suggestions

TRY—The Easy, Breezy trip to New York, Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia via Savannah and ship, where joy reigns and cares and troubles are forgotten in the delightful change.

TRY—Tybee, where ocean breezes blow, where rest and pleasure combine to make one forget dull care and regain youth and strength.

TRY—Atlantic Beach, a place of beauty and a joy forever, nature's crowning gift to humanity in rebuilding the nerves and tissues worn threadbare by toil and care.

Here's Where Trades Which Please Buyer and Seller Start

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

A Great Shipping Center

POSSIBLY the greatest shipping center in the state of Georgia is at Gainesville. This town for many years has been known as one that probably ships more poultry and eggs than any other in the state, and it is surprising to see the large number of shipments that are received daily by the express company at this point.

There are several reasons for this. One is, in this particular mountainous section the principal farm crops are grain and grass. The result is the people have something to feed their poultry on, and as the surrounding section is well drained, high and dry, poultry of every description will thrive and do well located at such a place, and especially where there is an abundance of feed. Nearly every farmer, even the croppers and tenants and mountaineers pay a lot of attention to their poultry, and a large per cent of the income that supports this section is derived from the poultry industry. There are a number of buyers of fresh poultry and eggs at Gainesville. They make a regular business of this and anyone can find a ready market for their products and exchange them for the cash every day in the year. The result is nearly every trip that is made to town by the different people from the country is accompanied with either a lot of chickens or eggs which are exchanged for cash, and this continual income of poultry every day to the different buyers of poultry and eggs, butter, honey and vegetables by the people in the surrounding country. It not only furnishes a good business for those that are engaged in it at Gainesville but it keeps in circulation a lot of money that helps to supply hundreds of families that would not be had if it was not for the interest taken in their fowls.

As it have said before, the poultry supplies of the United States are largely supplied by the small growers, but little of it by any large concerns. Thoroughbred fowls have been extensively used during the past ten years by many of the farmers around Gainsville, and the quality of chickens that are being shipped now are far superior to those that were shipped years ago, most of them showing a dash of thoroughbred blood, mostly Plymouth Rocks, Reds and Leghorns. While this poultry business looks like a little insignificant thing it brings thousands of dollars to Gainesville every year from the outside world, and this money is distributed to a large number of people and does the community a world of good. If this line of work can be so successfully done at Gainesville there is no reason why it should not be a success in other towns in Georgia. Probably Carrollton is the next largest shipping center in the state, unless it is Dalton. There are at present many fowls and eggs shipped from Dalton and most of the north Georgia towns ship a large quantity of poultry and eggs each season.

If the people could ever once be interested and get in the habit of producing more poultry and eggs it would at the end of a year amount to many thousands of dollars of practically speaking picked-up extra money that would be a great help to a multitude of people, and if there could possibly be some way by which the people could be interested in this work and pay more attention to it it would be a great help to the dollars and cents to the citizens of Georgia. Our sister state, Tennessee, has left nothing undone to make poultry raising and poultry culture in her state a leading feature among the farming class of people. The result is Tennessee's income from outside states each year amounts to something like $20,000,000. Suppose Georgia or that the farmers and citizens of this state had an income of $20,000,000 in addition to our cotton crop and other sources that Georgia has to draw from. Not only to the people who produce these poultry and eggs but it would as well help the merchants, manufacturers, banks and in fact nearly every one would feel more or less the influence of this extra surplus money that we could so easily have distributed among the people of this state. The demand is increasing every year and at such enormous prices, so much more than has ever been known before is gradually making more people take interest in the production of poultry, but not one-hundredth part are as much interested as should be. If there was some way by which the people could be more interested in this work it would not only mean a lot of additional easy money but would be a great help to this state in more ways than one.

POULTRY FEED POULTRY FEED

As a baby chick if fed on scratch grain, you eat too much, go to roost with your craw full and your little machinery being delicate you can't digest it, and if it does not produce white diarrhea it at least aggravates the disease.

If fed on Aunt Patsy, you are eating practically a predigested food, have no trouble, hence grow and thrive rapidly.

As a hen, if fed on scratch grain you do not get a sufficient amount of the necessary ingredients required to produce eggs, hence do not lay to the best advantage and become a loss to your owner. If fed on Aunt Patsy you are taking into your craw every ingredient of which an egg is made, and naturally produce more eggs on this character of feed and become a source of profit to your owner.

As a rooster, if fed on scratch grain you become over fattened, lazy and inactive and not able to wait on the hens as you should. If fed on Aunt Patsy you are kept in a thrifty, healthy condition, thus enabled to show your full gallantry in taking care of those hens as a well bred rooster should, and becomes the possessor of a strong voice, better able to crow and explain to your hens the value of Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, the Egg Producer.

Feed Your Flock the Best—Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed.
H. G. HASTINGS & CO., Atlanta, Ga.

If you are a Baby Chick Eat Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed.
If you are a Rooster—Well! Be gallant and tell the hen she should Eat Aunt Patsy.

A. C. WOOLLEY & CO., Atlanta, Ga.

FEED FEED

HOW'S THIS FOR HIGH?

MR. WILLIAM FEHREN, of Sayler Park, Ohio, had 45 hens during January 1912. He secured 286 eggs. Fed good, sound grain and mash of various makes. In January, 1913, he had 45 hens. Secured 512 eggs. A GAIN of 226 eggs or over 788 per cent increase.

WHAT DID HE FEED IN 1913?

Equal Parts of Scratch and Ce-re-a-lia Eggmash

MR. FEHREN keeps approximately 45 hens each year. His record for month of January for six years prior to 1913 is:

MYRTLE STREET BUNGALOW—$8,000

HERE IS ONE of the most modern and complete homes in the city. On this fashionable North Side street we are offering a beautiful 7-room bungalow at a great sacrifice. Is practically new. Has servants' room, furnace heat and every modern convenience. You can assume a loan on this of $2,500, at 6 per cent, make a reasonable cash payment and give monthly or yearly notes for the balance.

ANOTHER ARTISTIC BUNGALOW—CLOSE IN.

THIS IS UNDOUBTEDLY A BARGAIN, and we have the price for a short time only. It is on one of the very best North Side streets, has 6 rooms, with every improvement—i. e., tile sidewalks, lovely combination fixtures, furnace heat, servants' room; storage room in basement. Price now only $8500. Terms can be arranged to suit purchaser.

DRUID HILLS

IN THIS EXCLUSIVE residential section on a magnificent lot, with eastern exposure, we are offering a genuine bargain in a 2-story, 8-room residence, with every modern improvement. Built of A-1 material, double floored, storm-sheathed, lovely finishing. A perfect home in every detail. Piped for furnace, and has garage, has nice servants' house, chicken house, garden and plenty of fruit trees. Is bound to please you. Price $6,750, $750 cash will handle.

A REASONABLE OFFER ON THIS WILL BE CAREFULLY CONSIDERED

WE HAVE just had listed with us a strictly modern, "jam- -," Inman Park bungalow, in select neighborhood. There is no loan on the property, and owner will sell for a reasonable price on terms of only $500 cash and the balance in easy monthly payments. See us immediately and make us an offer.

WE HAVE THE EXCLUSIVE SALE ON THESE TWO INVESTMENT PROPERTIES

GO OUT and take a look at 161 Bellwood avenue and make us an offer on same. It is a neat, 5-room cottage, with all city improvements, near school. Must be seen to be appreciated. Will sell on easy terms. $1,500 might buy it.

ALSO TAKE a walk down Walton street and see the 20x73 foot lot 90 feet east from the corner of Bartow. Owner needs money, and will take considerably less than prices on other property around this. Act "quick" if you want a bargain. $100 a foot less than adjoining property.

LOTS

A WISE PURCHASE buys where all improvements have been, or are certain to be made. Our "Woodland Park" lots (don't get this property confounded with that of a similar name which does not have conveniences) have sewer, water, electric lights; also sidewalk from the property to the street car line.

THIS SUBDIVISION is in East Point, 3 1-2 blocks from the car line, in a beautiful wooded grove. The prices of these lots range from $350 to $900. As there isn't a good vacant house in East Point, investors and builders should sit up and take notice. These lots are bargains. There are no lots to be had between this subdivision and the street car line for less than $1,500. This will give you an idea of the bargain you are getting. While Atlanta increased in population 70 per cent in ten years, East Point increased over 300 per cent.

"BROWNWOOD PARK"—If you haven't been out on South Moreland avenue, you should go and look at our beautiful Brownwood lots, which range in price from $7 to $16 per front foot, and in size from 50 to 70 feet frontage, and all are of good depth. These lots all have a front and side building line, so that every owner of a home in Brownwood Park will know that neighbors cannot build so as to cut out light or extend out in front of one another. If you want a pretty home, we can arrange to have one built in this subdivision, which is directly on the car line, with sewer, water and electric lights, and within the city limits. The house will be built to suit you, and on easy terms. This is one of the most beautiful tracts about Atlanta. We will be glad to have you come in and talk with us about this property. The terms are very easy, being 10 per cent cash, balance monthly. This property belongs to the Joseph E. Brown company and you can rest assured of getting value received.

THOSE interested in property on the north side should look at our "GRAND VIEW" lots along Bonaventure and North avenue. These lots are high above Ponce de Leon avenue and have a very commanding view. The price on these lots is extremely low, considering the location and conveniences. Look them over and talk with us about them.

IF YOU are an investor, you should buy at least one lot in each of these splendid subdivisions, for they are sure to make you money. If you are seeking a home building site and cannot find something in one of these locations, you might as well give it up, for you can't be suited.

ACREAGE

106 ACRES between Decatur and Stone Mountain, on new street car line. This tract fronts the highway for a distance of 1,050 feet, and the land lies very nicely. Price $150 per acre. Here is a good subdivision for you.

226 1-2 ACRES south of Decatur, at $75 per acre. City property will be taken in exchange. This is a beautiful tract, with large lake.

HOMES

WE HAVE just as desirable homes for sale as can be found in or about Atlanta. In fact, we think we have the choicest. We do not annoy or run after prospective buyers. If you will tell us what you are looking for, we will submit what we have and leave it to your good judgment to make your own selection. It doesn't make any difference how humble or how grand a home you want—a cottage or a palace—we will be pleased to confer with you.

IF YOU have property to sell, we will be glad to handle it, if it is good, salable property, and your price is right.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Tenth Ward Auction Brings Total of $27,560—Oakhurst and Other Sales Reported—Delegation in Territory Around West Tenth Street Wants Better Street Car Service—Comparison of Transfers Recorded Shows an Increase

J. W. Mason, of the Atlanta Title Guarantee company, said yesterday in response to a question about the condition of real estate business, that 500 more real estate papers had gone to record thus far in 1913 than the corresponding period last year.

He said, however, that he kept no record as to the considerations involved in the various transfers and did not note the percentages of new and old transactions.

Agents report a better inquiry the past week than for some time. There are some important lease transactions in the preliminary stage, including the on Whitehall street, and one or two on Ivy street.

The latter thoroughfare will soon be ready for repaving, and the fill has revolutionized the appearance of it. There is bound to be a lot of travel on Ivy street. This will justify business houses, and a good deal of building and lease activity will be seen there from now on.

In fact, within the past few months, values in semi-central territory which have been jacked up by he speculators pretty rapidly for the past few years have been justified by buildings containing tenants who hold leases for a term of years. All of which goes to show that the speculator foresees the actual needs of the ultimate consumer.

Traders are feeling encouraged over the prospect of a good cotton crop, and more than that the most economically planted crop in years. Effects of the crop will begin to be felt about the first of September, a little over three months off, when old debts will be paid off and new money will be put in circulation.

A man who is not an agent, but owns and controls a good deal of close-in property, said yesterday that he was interested in sales already signed up and almost ready to be closed, whose considerations aggregated $1,000,000.

AUCTION BRINGS $27,560.

W. E. Treawdlel & Co. and Foster & Robson on yesterday sold seven bungalows and sixteen lots for I. N. Hagsdale, in the Tenth ward. Some of the bungalows sold too cheap, but the sale on the whole was a success. It brought a total of $27,560. J. W. Ferguson & Son were the auctioneers.

Following are the purchasers.

Byron Bettis, bungalow	$2,810
J. H. Davis, bungalow	2,750
I. M. Blair, lot 4	635
W. A. Johnson, lot 5	715

REAL ESTATE SALES.

While there were no sensational sales the past week, there were a good many medium sized transactions reported from day to day, and a good assortment of bonds for title went to record.

Mr. Mayfield, of Harris G. White's agency, has sold for E. Davis to M. F. Huggins a large parcel in Oakhurst, adjoining Congressman Howard's property on College avenue, for an aggregate consideration of $12,000.

The property has a frontage of 265 feet and a depth of 445 feet. On it there is a nine-room two-story house.

Mr. Scott, of the Waldo & Redding agency, has sold for the Peters Land company to Mrs. E. B. Izey, of Athens, the northwest corner of Penn and Fourth street, a vacant lot 50x150, for $2,500, and for Mrs. B. C. Miller to an investor Nos. 405-7 Martin street, and 414-16 Terry street, renting property, for $1,500 cash.

ASK CAR LINE.

A larg delegation will appear before President Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway and Power company, on June 3, to ask for an extension of a car line across West Tenth street.

The delegation will be headed by Superintendent of Schools W. M. Slaton and several teachers who are affected by the present lack of car service, especially as the Home Park school is in that section as well as the site of the new Eighth ward school.

The petitioners will suggest the extension of the West Peachtree line to Tenth street, thence to State and to Sixteenth, as well as the extension of the Orme street line to intersect with the other at Tenth street.

It is pointed out that the school teachers have to walk a long distance under the present system, as well as the pupils and the general public.

ATLANTA GETS NEXT BIG MEETING OF THE BEAVERS

This City Selected for 1914 Meeting of Supreme Dam of Order of Beavers

The delegates from Atlanta Dam No. 2, Independent Order of Beavers, returned Saturday from the meeting of the Supreme Dam of the order which was held at Birmingham on May 22, 23 and 24. Delegates from all the leading southern cities were present.

It was the best meeting ever held in the nine years of the existence of the order. Te reports of the officers showed the Beavers to be in a flourishing condition.

Atlanta, captured the next meeting of the Supreme Dam to be held in May, 1914, as well as two of the supreme officers.

The following officers were elected:

Judge John Plaza, of Vicksburg, supreme president; Sam E. Jones, of Chattanooga, supreme vice-president; Richard B. Howard, of Vicksburg, supreme secretary; H. W. Saxon, of Memphis, supreme treasurer; W. C. Munday, of Atlanta, supreme counsel; J. R. McMichael, of Atlanta, supreme trustee.

Birmingham Dam entertained the members of the various delegations in true old southern style, which included theater parties, automobile rides and an elaborate banquet at its leading hotel.

Two Explanations Make Mystery of A Trail of Blood

Policemen Born and Jones Sunday morning after 1 o'clock followed a trail of blood for nearly two blocks and found a mystery.

They received a telephone call from people, who did not give their names, but who said that police were needed on Alexander street between the two Peachtrees.

Arriving at the junction of Peachtree and West Peachtree hte two officers found a trail of blood, which led them directly up the steps and on to the porch at 28 East Alexander street.

In answer to their knock a lady giving her name as Mrs. R. J. Baughn came to the door. The officers saw spots of blood on her shirtwaist and in answer to their questions she said her husband had been in a fight and received a knife wound. The officers insisted on seeing Baughn, who was not seriously hurt, but who told a different story, saying according to the policemen, that he had fallen on the street and cut himself on a bit of glass.

After making certain that Baughn had not been seriously hurt the officers decided that no arrest was necessary.

Knight of Thistle

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 24—The appointment by the king of Lord Haldane as a Knight of the Thistle in succession to the late earl of Crawford, is an honor without precedent for lord chancellor of England, at least in modern times. The last instance of the conferring of a high order on a member of the cabinet was in February, 1912, when Sir Edward Grey was created a Knight of the Garter. The Order of the Thistle ranks next to the Garter and before the Order of St. Patrick. Lord Haldane had not before received any order of knighthood. Of his predecessors Lord Loreburn has the G. C. M. G. and the late Lord Herschell the G. C. B., but Lord Halsbury has no such decoration. Lord Haldane was created Viscount Haldane of Cloan in March, 1911. He became lord chancellor next year, after being secretary of state for war since 1905. "The most ancient and most noble Order of the Thistle," as it is styled, consists of the sovereign and sixteen knights—irrespective of other members of the royal family. The order, which is said to have been founded by King Achaius and was revived by James II in 1687 and re-established by Queen Anne in 1703, is the chief Scottish order, and its motto is "Nemo me impune lacessit." Lord Haldane's appointment will entail an installation at the Thistle chapel.

Duke of Connaught

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 24.—The Coldstream Guards' band this year did not serenade the duke of Connaught as they usually do when his royal highness celebrates his May-day birthday in town. This was, of course, due to the fact of the regrettable illness of the duchess. The great tragedy of the duke's career is that he is a fine soldier who has never been allowed to go to war in real earnest. The only exception was when he had a command in the expedition in Egypt against Arabi. He moved heaven and earth in his endeavor to get to South Africa, but Queen Victoria would not hear of it. Instead was sent General Buller, the man he had completely outwitted previously in maneuvers in Wiltshire. In what was once the garden of the Ranger's lodge at the old Royal park of Greenwich is still a fifty-year-old military relic of the duke. It is a miniature field redoubt, solidly built by the duke when he was a cadet at the Woolwich academy. His royal highness is colonel-in-chief of the Ziethen Hussars, and on his birthday the colonel and adjutant of the regiment handed him an autograph letter from the kaiser congratulating him on having been associated with the regiment for twenty-five years. The other officer sent him a beautiful silver statuette representing a soldier of the regiment.

RIDICULE HEAPED ON REPUBLICAN'S CONFAB

"Get Together" Conference at Washington Branded As Worse Than Farce

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24.—The Republican "get-together" conference here today, through the agency of the executive committee of the Republican national committee, failed of its purpose, as was indicated tonight, by the ridicule heaped upon it by the leading Progressives in congress. They say it was worse than a farce—that it was a cut and dried scheme of the old stand-pat element of the party to perpetuate their machine.

The stand-patters resent the imputation of the Progressives, and some of the executive committeemen, while publicly professing a desire of harmony, privately claim that the conference was called in the interest of two or three would-be presidential candidates, notably former Governor Herbert E. Hadley, Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, and Senator A. B. Cummins, of Iowa.

The most notable feature of the conference was the absence of representative or friend of either Theodore Roosevelt or Senator LaFollette.

Former Senator Newell Saunders, of Tennessee, an executive committeeman, gave it as his opinion that the meeting was called in the interest of certain Republican senators whose defeat for election lecertain unless the party breaches are healed.

The so-called progressive end of the party, at its conference in Chicago, a few days ago, unanimously asked the executive committee to call a meeting of the Republican committee "in the near future" to act upon the wide demand for a national convention "during the present year" to consider the question of reorganization of the Republican party. A few days ahead a picked coterie of the old guard stand-patters met without noise in Newark, N. J., to take a look at the situation created by the Chicago conference. This meeting, which was secret and sought no publicity, decided that the Republican national convention should be called together "in the near future" and that no Republican national convention should be held in 1913.

"Today's action by the executive committee, conclusively shows that it accepted the guidance of the secret meeting and not that of the widely exploited Chicago conference," declared a Progressive tonight.

The "near progressives" believed that they could get a national convention called for "the present year" the great probability was that a large majority of the delegates would be of a mind to entertain a motion for the reorganization of the Republican party from the bottom."

JUSTICE HEARS CHARGE OF EXTORTION ON SENATOR

NEW YORK, May 24.—A supreme court justice heard in detail today the story of how State Senator Stephen J. Stilwell is alleged to have solicited money to advance legislation to the senate from the codes committee, of which he was chairman.

The state's chief witness, George H. Kendall, president of the New York Bank Note company, reiterated statements he made before the senate investigating committee against Stilwell, now on trial charged with bribery. The senate expelled Stilwell last month.

Kendall testified Stilwell sought to extort $3,500 in return for promised influence to have reported out a bill aimed to prohibit the New York stock exchange from alleged discrimination against securities not printed b designated bank note companies. He told of conversations which he declared he had with Stilwell over the telephone between this city and Albany. Two persons listening on the wire, he said, overheard him tell the senator that if the bill was not reported out of committee at once he would telegraph to Governor Sulzer that Stilwell had demanded money to expedite legislation.

The bill was reported out in the senate the next day, but not in the assembly and subsequently Kendall telegraphed Governor Sulzer, telling of Stilwell's alleged demand for money.

Ethel C. Allen, a stenographer in Kendall's office and one of the persons Kendall declared overheard his telephone conversations with Stilwell, testified she made a long distance call to Albany for Kendall, but under cross-examination said she had not been allowed to listen to the conversation.

George ... Field, vice president of Kendall's company, the other person declared by Kendall to have overheard his talks with Stilwell, testified he heard Kendall threaten Stilwell. Also he said in subsequent conversations in which Stilwell reported progress of the bill. Under cross-examination Field admitted he did not at any time hear Stilwell ask Kendall for money.

POSSE SEARCHES FOR UNKNOWN ASSAILANT

ROME, Ga., May 24.—Possees with bloodhounds are tonight searching the Etowah river swamps for an unknown white man who attempted to assault a prominent white woman of this place at her home in the heart of the residence section today. The woman was alone in the house when the negro entered and described by her as well dressed, entered and asked for something to eat. As she turned to the sideboard the man tried to choke her with a towel. Fighting off her assailant she escaped and gave the alarm. The man fled toward the nearby swamps, and escaped. He had not been captured at a late hour.

LABOR LEADERS ASK FOR REVIEW OF SENTENCES

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Attorneys for Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison applied to the supreme court today for a review of their sentences for violating a court injunction in the Bucks Stove and Range case. The court is in recess.

Negro Festival July 3-4

The fourth annual music festival of the Atlanta Colored Music Festival association will be held at the auditorium July 3 and 4. The festival will be in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the emancipation of the colored race. The first night will be devoted to a pageant of the progress made by the race since the emancipation. The various scenes in the progress of the race will be illustrated in picture and song.

The festival will be known as "the Grand Jubilee Music Festival." A chorus of two hundred voices will render negro folk songs and classical selections. The new Fisk Jubilee singers, a mixed quartet, will be heard both nights. Patti Brown, the soprano singer, of Chicago, who has been heard in every one of the music festivals, has been secured again. Roland W. Hayes, of Boston, the leading tenor of the race, will sing at the grand concert on the closing night of the festival.

STATE AGENCIES TO CO-OPERATE FOR AGRICULTURAL PROTECTION

Such Is the Belief Expressed in the Annual Report of State Entomologist E. Lee Worsham, to Be Presented Legislature

That the best service which can be rendered the farmers of Georgia will come from the active and efficient cooperation of all state institutions and agencies, working along agricultural lines, is the belief of State Entomologist E. Lee Worsham, as presented in his annual report which will go to the legislature through the commissioner of agriculture.

Mr. Worsham's department naturally engages in many fields of activity, all important and of value to the farmer, the farmer, the fruit grower and the horticulturist. But there is no field in which it has rendered more important service to Georgia than in planning to meet the invasion of the Mexican cotton boll weevil and at the same time developing strains of cotton that will successfully resist the attack of "black root" or the "wilt" disease, which has been destroying more than $1,000,000 worth of cotton in south Georgia a year.

The department was confronted by a very difficult problem in this state, be*cause the requirements in meeting these* two destructive agencies are almost exactly opposites. For instance, it has been found that the best means of meeting the boll weevil invasion is to use early maturing varieties, while it was known that these varieties were the most susceptible to the destructive "black root" disease.

SOLUTION FOUND

Notwithstanding this difficulty, a practical solution has already been found by the department, and it will begin next year, according to Mr. Worsham's report, distributing to the farmers of Georgia a cotton seed that are "wilt resisting and matures early enough to avoid the boll weevil in a large measure." There has been no more important development in Georgia than this within recent years.

Incident to this work has been the development of a hybrid cotton of the long staple variety, which can be successfully grown throughout south Georgia, and it can be used in the course of time to take the place of Sea Island cotton. At last accounts prices, this staple would be worth from 18 to 20 cents a pound.

Widespread interest has been aroused in cotton breeding, and cotton breeders' clubs have been organized in 25 South Georgia counties.

The department has made no claim to having successfully overcome the impending attackk of the boll weevil, out it has, unquestionably, developed a strain of cotton that will in a large measure meet this attack through early maturing, and at the same time resist the destructive "wilt" disease.

The department's motto is to render the greatest possible service to the greatest number, with the funds which are available. It has succeeded in doing this inconnection with the cotton situation, *as well as in many other im*portant fields of activity.

4,233,300 TREES INSPECTED.

During the year the department inspected 4,233,300 trees and plants in Georgia nurseries, of which 1,027,600 were peach trees. It is now practically impossible, under the department's watchful care, for a diseased tree or plant to come into the state.

As the result of directions given the farmers, hundreds of thousands of dollars were saved during the summer in meeting the attacks of the army worm and cotton caterpillar.

Farmers' meetings were held in various sections of the state and special lectures were given by Mr. Worsham on cotton insects at the cotton schools held at the State College of Agriculture in January. The department has sought to cooperate actively at every possible point with other agencies working along agricultural lines, with the result of material benefit to the farmer. One instance noted was the procuring for South Georgia farmers of arsenate of lead at actual cost during the outbreak of army worm and cotton caterpillar.

When it is known that insect pests and plant diseases cost the farmers and fruit growers of the state $20,000,000 *in 1912, the importance of experimenta*tion in destroying these pests will be better understood. Experimental stations are maintained where the experiments can be conducted under the best conditions. Experiments on insects and diseases that attack the apple and peach are conducted in Habersham county, near Cornelia. Experiments on the mole cricket are conducted on St. Simon's Island, near Brunswick. Experiments on insects and diseases of the pecan tree are conducted at DeWitt in the pecan growing section.

Results of this experimentation have been the discovery and development of many valuable remedies for keeping down and in some instances the eradication of these pests.

The department issues from time to time many valuable bulletins dealing with plant and tree insects and diseases and their treatment, which it distributes to the farmers free of cost.

BURLESON ASKED TO SEGREGATE THE RACES

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The race question has been put squarely up to Postmaster General Burleson, in a petition signed by more than 6,000 railway mail clerks, urging the segregation of white and negro employes in the service.

It was presented by Robert A. Prather, of Little Rock, Ark. The petitioners asked that the postmaster general issue an order putting the segregation into effect at once.

Leaping Forward

LONDON, May 24.—The Scottish home rule movement has taken a sudden leap forward. It has had many ob*stacles in its path. One of those ob*stacles has undoubtedly been the Irish movement. The wild feelings of opposition roused by the Irish bills of Gladstone had a prejudicial effect upon Scot-

EMPEROR YOSHIHITO IS CONSIDERED PRACTICALLY OUT OF DANGER NOW.

(By Associated Press.)

TOKIO, May 25.—Emperor Yoshihito is considered practically out of danger, according to a statement issued by Count Watanabe, the imperial master of ceremonies, this morning.

The emperor passed another favorable night. It is believed only careful attention is needed to restore his majesty to health.

The empress still refuses to leave the bedside and acts as nurse.

Last night the emperor said: "I feel much better. Tomorrow being Sunday, I hope that you will all take a rest."

GEORGIA TO BECOME ONE OF GREAT APPLE STATES

Dr. G. T. Powell, of New York, an Authority, Addresses Luncheon Guests

Dr. George T. Powell, of New York, president of the Agricultural Experts association, and one of the foremost authorities on horticulture and agriculture in this country, was entertained Friday at the Capital City club at an elaborate luncheon at which nearly 100 prominent Atlanta business men were guests. The host of the occasion was Louis B. Magid, president of the Apalachian Apple orchards, interested in developing commercial apple orchards in Habersham county.

Dr. Powell told of his personal investigations upon several occasions in northeast Georgia regarding the adaptability of that soil and climate to apple raising. He stated that it is his firm conviction that Georgia bids fair to become one of the greatest apple states in the union, as the rainfall, elevation and climate particularly of northeast Georgia, are adapted wonderfully well to apple culture.

The guests at the luncheon were: A. S. Adas, Ivan E. Allen, Jumdge Spencer R. Atkinson, J. Frank Beck, J. Pope Brown, R. H. Brown, Frank W. Burr, Judge John S. Candler, S. C. Dobbs, Thomas B. Felder, C. J. Haden, W. T. Halstead, H. G. Hastings, L. D. Hicks, Dr. DeLos Hill, J. T. Hollean, Freim H. Houser, Clark Howell, W. L. Hunnicutt, Jack H. Lewis, Prof. K. C. Matheson, F. J. Merriam, C. W. McClure, Haynes. McFadden, Edgar A. Neely, John S. Owens, A. J. Orme, Wm. E. Parkhurst, W. L. Peel, Paul P. Reese, J. B. Simmons, Alex. W. Smith, W. O. Stamps, H. E. Stockbridge, W. C. Wardlaw, Edgar Watkins, George Westmoreland, Rev. C. B. Willmer, Hon. James G. Woodward, Dr. Geo. T. Powell, Prof. Wm. J. Hart, Prof. H. P. Stuckey, Prof. L. A. Niven, E. E. Dougherty, Geo. M. Kohn, Dr. Hugh H. Lokey, W. Carroll Lastinger, Rev. L. A. Stevens.

Dr. Powell is the president of the Agricultural Experts association, an organization which gives advice on agricultural problems. His report and opinions, therefore, regarding Georgia's apple lands, will carry weight and importance.

Mr. Powell was sthe first director of farmer's institutes in New York state, more than twenty years ago. For several years he was treasurer of the New York State Dairymen's association, and introduced special educational work along lines of cattle breeding and improved dairy methods. He was appointed special representative of the United States department of agriculture to meet with agricultural organizations in the west and south, to aid in building better agricultural conditions in those sections.

He introduced the teaching of agricultural subjects into the schools of New York state, and has given agricultural lectures at various times at Columbia University.

GOVERNMENT GOES AFTER COTTON CORNER OF 1909

Re-indictment of Hayne, Brown, Scales and Thompson Sought

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 24.—The department of Justice has decided to seek the reindictment of Frank Hayne and William P. Brown, of New Orleans; Eugene Scales, of Texas and Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of New York, on the charge that they conspired to corner the cotton crop of 1909.

This was learned today when subpenas were issued by United States District Attorney Marshall for the appearance next week before the federal grand jury of the witnesses upon whose testimony the indictment now standing against them was found.

The document contains flaws, it is understood, which the government fears might stand in the way of conviction. It charged that, with James A. Patten, of Chicago, the defendants conspired to create a bull pool with the intention of artificially raising the price of cotton in order to obtain a profit of $10,000,000.

Patten pleaded guilty last February to the sixth count of the indictment, known as the "contract count," which alleged that the defendants entered into contracts to buy up all the raw cotton porduced in 1909 and to hold it out of the market until November, 1910. He was fined $4,000, and under an agreement between his counsel and the department of justice the other counts in the indictment were nolled.

Patten announced in entering his plea that he was "not conscious of any moral turpitude."

Messrs. Hayne, Brown and Scales professed to be indignant at his action and said that they would fight the case to the end. Colonel Thompson recently sailed for Europe.

All five defendants originally pleaded not guilty and, with the exception of Colonel Thompson, demurred to the indictment. The demurrer was defeated in the United States supreme court.

OFFICERS ARE NAMED FOR STATE DEAF SCHOOL

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., May 24.—A general inspection of the State School for the Deaf at Cave Spring took place yesterday by members of the board of visitors appointed by Governor Joseph M. Brown. Those present at the inspection were Colonel John Awtrey, of Cedartown, chairman; Dr. J. H. Bennett, of Commerce; Dr. E. H. Richardson, of Cedartown; R. O. Ross, of Winder. The report of the visiting board will be submitted directly to the governor, and while the contents can not be divulged in advance it is understood that the report will be highly commendatory.

At the same time the board of trustees held its annual meeting. Mr. W. J. Griffin, of Rome, was re-elected chairman of the board, and D. W. Simmons, of Rome, secretary and treasurer. The executive committee will be composed of Chairman Griffin, Dr. William Bradford, of Cedartown, and Wilson M. Hardy, of Rome. The teachers for the coming year were chosen, including all the present corps who were applicants for re-election: Prof. W. O. Connor, the principal, is serving a two-year term, which expries in June of 1904. Miss Nellie McDaniel was re-elected assistant principal, and other members of the teaching corps are S. M. Freeman, Connor Wright, Mrs. Harriet Stevens, Misses A. M. Alcorn, Lavilla Ward, Grace Kinsley, Maude Carter, Almira Hammond, A. W. Allen, M. C. Smith, May Clark and Vivian Tilley. The new members are Mrs. Nell Gibbons, Miss Alice Parlaman and Miss Jennie Ward.

SENATE NOT TO DEBATE TARIFF BEFORE JUNE 10

Democratic Leaders Have No Hopes of an Early Consideration by Senate

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Democratic leaders now have no hopes of getting the tariff bill into the senate for debate before June 10 or probably later. The real work of getting schedules in shape for presentation to the caucus has not progressed as rapidly as leaders expected.

Some changes in the rates on manufactures of wool may be recommended by Senator Stone's subcommittee. It was said the changes would make reductions. Some changes, it became known, are to be increased.

Wool and sugar continued subjects of considerable discussion, but the best information seemed to bear out declarations of administration leaders that no changes on the wool or sugar would be made by the party unless in the Democratic caucus.

Jarwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance company, will have a hearing Monday before the subcommittee composed of Senators Williams, Shively and Gore, on provisions of the income tax section which relate to insurance companies. To accommodate President Kingsley the subcommittee will reopen the hearings it had planned to close today.

First Lieutenant John M. Craig, Twentieth infantry, is detailed duty as potter of infantry team and will proceed Fort Niagara, N. Y.

Following named officers of ordnance assigned to regiment specified after their names: Captain Gilbert H. Stewart, Tenth infantry; Captain Rolland W. Case, Eighteenth infantry; Captain Charles S. Donavin, Twenty-third infantry; Captain Arthur D. Minick, Eleventh infantry; First Lieutenant Fred H. Coleman, Second cavalry.

Leaves of absence: First Lieutenant Leopold Mitchell one month and fifteen days; Captain James L. Vevans, two months.

Submarines in War

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 24.—It would need an exceedingly far-sighted person to describe the changes and developments in the material of naval war which may be expected within the next ten years, for we are on the verge of revolutions beside which the substitution of steam for sails and of iron for wood were insignificant. Since the beginning of the sailing era and the development of the *ared galley the essentials of naval war*fare have not latered. Steam-made ships more or less independent of the weather, and substituted coal—or oil—for fresh water as the limit of cruising capacity; while the effect of the introduction of armor was to bring into existence the breech-loading gun and thereby to increase the range of naval actions from 100 to 10,000 yards.

The changes with which we are faced today are of an altogether different character. For untold centuries those who have fought *sea have had to con*sider only two dimensions—length and breadth—for the super-dreadnought is no more capable of any other movement than were the war galleys of the Phoenicians. But the commander of a fleet today is faced with a far more difficult problem. He has to consider not only movement to and fro and backwards and forwards on the surface of the sea; he has to allow for vessels that can operate fifty feet below and thousnds of feet above.

Kaiser as Antiquary

BERLIN, May 24.—The kaiser has recently been making frequent visits to Salsburg, where there are Roman remains of considerable interest. The other day his imperial majesty, acting as cicerone, showed the directors and pupils of a military school the entrenchments and earthworks that he had had reconstructed from plans, and gave them quite an interesting little lecture on the methods of warfare in ancient times. The entrenchments and the Roman road, which the kaiser is also having reconstructed, will henceforth be preserved with the greatest care. However, his majesty's subjects are nowadays becoming very critical of all the imperial sayings and doings, and some of the German newspapers are asking what use these precious earthworks are to the nation. They point out that the work of reconstruction, which is expensive, is being paid for out of public funds, and that the kaiser might find some cheaper form of amusement. Some people are never satisfied.

Big Sabbath School

CEDARTOWN, Ga., May 24.—Because of its greater population Atlanta may exceed Cedartown in Sunday school attendance, but the First Methodist church of this city had to build a frame annex to its church to accommodate the overuow of Sunday school pupils until a permanent addition can be built to the church.

Rumors of Settlement of Harriman Plan of Segregation Caused Rise

The Upturn in the Pacifics Imparted Strength to the Market, and Gains of 1 to 2 Points Were Made by Other Issues

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 24.—Official declarations that a settlement had at last been reached in the negotiations for segregation of the Harriman system in compliance with the supreme court's mandate stimulated the stock market strongly today. Gossip on the exchange was to the fact that the segregation plan provided for cancellation of the $126,000,000 Southern Pacific stock held by the Union Pacific and to which Union Pacific would receive control of Central Pacific with cash and bonds having an additional value of $20,000,000. The stock exchange house through which the largest buyers of Union Pacific made the statement that "the full plan of segregation will be issued next Tuesday."

No authoritative confirmation of these reports was to be had. The statement was made by a representative of the banking interests which have acted as fiscal agents for the Harriman roads that he knew of no settlement in the matter. The response of the stock market, however, was emphatic. Union Pacific for the first time in several weeks rose above 155, gaining 3 points. Southern Pacific advanced 2 points. The upturn in these stocks imparted strength to the market as a whole and gains of 1 to 2 points were made by many of the representative issues.

There was some further selling of stocks which have been under pressure recently. Pennsylvania touched a new low figure at 109½, and Canadian Pacific sought new points on renewed selling for foreign account. Both of these stocks, however, rallied when the list went up.

While the banks gained cash on the week, the increase of $2,150,000 was less sweeping usually than was indicated by known movements of currency. Another small addition was made to excess reserves.

Bonds were firm. St. Louis and San Francisco general 5s rallied sharply after an early period of weakness. Total sales, par value, $1,250,000. United States 2s coupon declined ½, and the Panama 3s coupon advanced ¼.

AUSTIN & RAIT MARKET LETTER

NEW YORK, May 24.—Cotton: The fact that "the market often makes the news," was aptly illustrated this week. Following a general and simultaneous advance in all stocks, bonds, cotton, cottonseed oil, wheat, corn, oats, etc. When any such unison method is reported in our cotton or grain crops, stocks usually sell off in discounting the forecasted short crop condition, but with the general advance this week in both securities and commodities we are forced to attribute the effect of "news" that has been well understood for weeks past, yet needed some incentive to awake to more interest in the general belief that the country is yet flourishing and in need of all the beautiful crops it can produce. Many times all that is needed is just such a start as this other things come along of their own accord or any other news, to bring out such latent realization and we should now be prepared to learn of many cheerful things that have not heretofore been given due consideration in the past several months of "hard times" and that "something was going to happen." This new spirit being, for instance, created that the tariff question would eventually be a boon to the great net number and not a drawback to a few as we might learn that political agitation at home is not the only cause of business depression and lack of confidence, we might learn that European compilations are at last settled and bounded gold to the extent of considerable amounts to be released to find its way in these underemployed and there are doubtless many more of equal importance that could play their part in restoring confidence and make for resumed business activity.

Again, as in many weeks past, cotton contracts receded their low point on Monday and with this is of course but a coincidence, yet it has occurred regularly during many weeks past, but the proper deduction is that some bona fondlence has come in on these low prices, too many short sellers, so that more optimistic reports relative to the crop, favorable reports from the central belt which was then visited by relieving showers this week and which will with more sunshine, gave rather pessimistic reports from the eastern belt as a whole, which is still in need of rain in order to germinate the seed. While we realize the advantage of dry weather in May, yet we must expect to hear many complaints of grass and lice on the immediate surface of the soil level, which will add further to the already high cost of production this year, which in fact is bound to be estimated at a large per cent. Of course we are in hopes of a bountiful crop, believing that the world will be short in a fair price, which would be better to all concerned than a large crop at a low price, a small crop at a high price, but we believe present prices will prove a short time basis for such sales, as current prices discount a large crop, which as still some months to mature, we are now assured of the present supplies are sufficient to allow a liberal carryover into the new crop and we hold that there would do well to market whatever they have to sell, which possibly may be well considered, especially of good grades. We also believe that the opinion that new crop will prove the more satisfactory in placing commitments as any damage to the crop will have been done by the middle of June between new and old crops in favor of the new. We continue to refer you to the "Journal" publication on the market until we have more certainty of a liberal yield although we think sales should be made on sharp bulges caused by shorts covering or on reports of rains, as we believe that purchase made on the little set backs will afford satisfactory profits.

Cottonseed oil: Crop report shows reported estimation with a general clearing up of the situation regarding the crop and the general friendliness of the packers to all land product which attracted to this market in the past week. Refiners appear as buyers on all concessions, especially of near options, and there is a certain coterie who have been exceptionally successful in the past short interest to be long again, having liquidated profits into their old holdings, and we look for renewed activity and strength.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW

Bradstreet's review says:

It is refreshing to find a keynote that will at once characterize trade trends the country over but broadly and largely speaking they are favorable, the western situation in this respect being almost satisfactory to the extent of overcoming the set. Presumably the west is buoyed by sanguine wheat crop prospects and in this event, the effect of the latter does not appear to be much apprehension as regards agricultural implement sales, except in isolated cases.

In any event, the west, northwest, southwest, and far west are doing well as regards jobbing trade, and while some reaction in the middle west is looked for in the event of aeration, there is an obvious disposition to make commitments future rather than for nearby requirements, a reasonably satisfactory way, and the cessation of spleen is that business is moderately well ahead of last year.

Money is quite active for commercial and speculative uses, and while crop and general collections do not improve much, and all in all, they do not appear to be any worse.

Stock market operations remain as for weeks, but as a whole the speculative side of the New York city bond issue does not impair the filling, we imagine that was anticipated. Business failures for the week ending May 22, were 227, as against 205 for the week before and 218 in the like week of 1912.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending May 22, aggregate 6,471,046 bushels, against 5,809,612 bushels in the previous week.

R. G. DUN & CO.'S REVIEW

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review says:

The volume of business is nearly all branches of trade and industry is rarely so great, but yet it is mostly to meet immediate needs. The situation is sustained by the prospect of big crops, but manufacturers and merchants still display a conservative policy pending the termination of tariff uncertainty and much depressing trade as exists is chiefly to the absence of new orders for future delivery.

Mercantile and industrial conditions are encouraged by the absence of speculative excesses, the financial situation is made more secure by the absence of excessive speculation. While old weather has seemed to retard planting in some sections, crop conditions for both spring and fall sown are fine. In the cotton belt, also, and cotton shows improvement. This proves to make business sentiment in the west and south very cheerful.

The iron and steel mills continue fully occupied in filling old orders, but there has been a sharp falling off in the volume of new business.

Commercial failures this week in the United States are 205, against 247 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number 32, against 19 last year.

INDUSTRIAL EARNINGS IN EXCESS OF REQUIREMENTS

The General Policy at Present Is Not to Increase the Fixed Dividend Rates

Wall street Journal says:

International Agricultural Corporation, according to present plans, will pass the preferred dividend at the next dividend meeting of its board. Earnings are estimated for the current year at more than the preferred requirements, but this estimate was made on a very conservative basis. Even if the preferred should be omitted, however, there is little likelihood of its being paid as the management has decided upon the policy of building up the company's working capital.

The American Agricultural Chemical Co. is earning and should continue to pay 4 per cent on its common stock. On account of the invasion of the Canadian field by the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. and the impending increase in intensity of the fertilizer war, it does not seem likely that the company will increase the common rate.

If the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. could earn and pay 3 per cent on the common last year it should be able to do as well this year under the better fertilizer trade conditions which prevail in the south. The company, however, has a trade war with the American Agricultural Co. on its hands and the directors may decide to conserve the assets. Action of the dividend committee will be governed largely by the general outlook for the trade and there is little likelihood of its being paid as the management expect and the copper market does not naturally decline, the early part of 1914 ought to see the company in a position to make a distribution to its shareholders.

California Petroleum is stirring it seemingly for the benefit of the present stock. There is little likelihood of an increase in the rate at the present time. There is much to be done in the way of economies in operation which should increase the profits, and, in fact, so the prospects are that the excess earnings will be put back into the property and the proper amounts written off for depletion and small earnings and surplus are such as to warrant a dividend increase at present.

Union Copper directors meet for dividend action on the 26th inst. The present month and will probably establish a $3 or $4 dividend. The price of the stock naturally declines, the contingent upon the company's cash receipts between now and the end of the month and also upon the conditions existing in the copper market. Union Oil has a million in cash on hand to liquidate its floating debt after that it may finance its unsold copper without borrowing money against it.

General Motors: One of the largest profit earners of the past month and will probably establish a $3 or $4 dividend rate in the near future. The increase is

Unfavorable Prospects in Kansas Carried Wheat Market Upward

Report That Southwest Kansas Was in a Critical Condition, With Each Day Enlarging the Damage, Caused Heavy Buying and Covering

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 24.—Increasingly unfavorable prospects in southern and western Kansas carried the wheat market today upgrade. Closing prices were firm at an advance of 1c to 1¾c over the finish of last week. Corn finished unchanged to 1c higher, oats varying from a shade off to ¼c to ¾c and provisions strong out from 15c decline to an average of 5c.

Increased dry weather and a forecast of more started wheat shorts to buying. New investors also took a hand, making a liberal volume of business much larger than that which did work and enthusiasm. Bulls were especially impressed by statements that 3,000,000 acres in southwest Kansas were in a critical condition with early rains emerging the damage and making the drop serious.

Signs of a substantial falling off in the United States visible supply total discouraged the bears and helped the bulls, who did word that exporters had disposed of a little new winter. Reports of estimates from Oklahoma and pros promising yield from Missouri were also influential, so that the market at no time saw important reaction.

Export clearances of wheat and flour equalled 881,000 bushels. Primary receipts and wheat were 180,000 bushels a year ago 200,000 bushels.

In the end all sections of the market had assurances of heavier country offerings offset the bullish influence of crop news.

Weather conditions favored planting. Profit taking by local cashgrain operators.

Business in trade was only local. The one noticeable was an entire dip of the in May pork.

AUSTIN & RAIT'S GRAIN LETTER

NEW YORK, May 24.—Wheat—An agreeable change in favor of holders occurred this week and while we look for a natural turn in the course of so much bearishness. The crop development was so favorable that an altogether too optimistic estimate had been placed in the trade and while this is now checked by with reports of a serious deterioration in Kansas, Oklahoma and the southwest in general. Broomhall est mates European requirements of 45,000,000 bushels weekly of our wheat for the next nine weeks, and this little upturn is apt to stir up a latent demand. On the other hand, the "scare" might be overworked and develop a weak technical situation, and our opinion would be to realize profits on these sales and buy back carefully on fair set backs, as present prices suggest break buying opportunities.

Corn and Oats—Rains in the corn belt have bought in reports of much delay to planting, and with light stocks the small receipts have brought about a considerable degree of strength. Farmers are not allowing their stock to be handicapped with shipments at inopo prices and some further upturn likely, but we would guard against buying on bulges, as receipts should grow soon. Oats have shown wonderful strength and we look for a further advance as present prices are the result of an enormous crop last year, but reports on the new crop prospects are favorable and are apt to have cause for general alarm unless improvement over the present conditions. Advices state that their reports show a considerable falling off in acreage and a big drop in condition and prospect for the acreage harvested, with higher prices, especially September.

Provisions—With shorts covering in all May options the general list has been run up rather abruptly at times with a subsequent falling back, but receipts of hogs have been rather moderate and general strength is apparent. Outside speculation is considerably curtailed, and we believe the market is in a healthy condition, with support apparent from the packers at all times and they seem to intimate enough make knowledge that heavy receipts of hogs are yet far removed, and we continue fleadily a buying September options on all concessions.—M. F. Austin.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Times-Democrat says:—Bears made the most of the favorable weather, poor market reports from Italy, and a relative increase as contrasted with last year, in the world's visible supply of all kinds of cotton, and a price decline of between 5 and 9 points was the result of the day's trading in contrast to the American holiday. Encouraged, the bearish operators began talk of 10 cents for the new crop, then 9 cents, and as nobody would argue the future of the staff with them, 8 cents was finally mentioned. The close of the market robbed the price prophets of an audience, otherwise, 7 and 6 cents might have been suggested. As matters stand, the new crop outlook presents the central fact in the technical position should have been affected by the number of contracts covering during the week. Save for the local crop scare, conservative bulls are inclined to believe that the market has now discounted the materially higher prices. Speculators are short and the bulls look for the new crop positions, current spinners' takings are running on a very full scale, and the into-sight movement is small, in spite of reports of increased farm enthusiasm to some extent in the event good weather should rule.

Map shows cloudy Atlantics, fair rest of the belt, with scattered showers over cooler eastern states. General rains in Georgia and South Carolina and over Tennessee some obscurers. Beneficial cloudy west Texas; fair, warmer in east Texas and central states; showers, cooler over Oklahoma and Kansas.

Dallas wires: "Texas clear, pleasant. Oklahoma, Arkansas clear, pleasant."

STOCK GOSSIP

Dow-Jones summary: London dispatch says Chinese legation has arranged with bankers to borrow $500,000,000 there to build ten thousand mile railway. Boston and Albany grant to New York to use $4,000,000 there for refunding bonds. Paris cable to the World says M. H. Poincare, President of France, Miss and Bryan, declaring that policy is to act against financial interests and that no politics to make administration solid with the populace. St. Louis banker says that city will have no trouble in the future to raise $2,250,000 to meet maturing notes. June 1st. Washington says that Senator Root, Bryan Rapid Transit directors expected to declare—dividend on common, 100 chs to 60 cents per share.

Rumor has it in Wall street that Minnesota case would be decided Monday.

Hear that Union Pacific will fare very well in the dissolution and that insiders are principal buyers. I am bullish on Union Pacific.

GRAIN GOSSIP

CHICAGO, May 24.—Inter Ocean says: It was the general belief of most traders last night that unless there is more serious crop damage than there has been as yet, a decrease in the buying power, not only wheat but in corn and oats, prices will recede moderately. The wheat market has been more evened up by the recent advance than at any time in months. Traders who bought largely and had good profits on all grain have taken them. Some have, however, who would cut, accentuated their lines on yesterday's bulge, thinking that the buying would continue heavy and that they are not in a position to stand such loss.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: Map shows light rains in northwest and generally fair over rest of the belt. Look for narrow market as traders will take no big chances on either side of market over Sunday.

Corn—Strength continues to show a very strong undertone.

Oats—We believe the long side of market on sharp reactions will prove safest.

Provisions—Look for prices to be higher.

Des Moines says: We cannot realize how much crops have suffered in other localities and states, but so far as Iowa is concerned, we feel that the oats acreage is about as large as last year, and that the soil is in good condition and growth of small grain is very remarkable for this time of the year. Should the season be only reasonable and pleasant weather, farmers will finish corn planting by June 10th, and from now on look for movement of corn and oats that will surprise you.

Some commission house buying of September wheat. Armour grain company buying July grain. Cudahy people working the May side for a turn.

W. Snow wires from Sedalia, Mo.: Central Missouri counties have had scattered, but insufficient rains. Past week wheat has lost 10c extra prairie that characterized it early in the season, but with seasonable conditions hereafter will improve more than average crop. Crop is heading in the river counties, but will not harvest until last week in June. Oats are generally fairly good, melleow thin, considerable may be classed as practically a failure, but early sown is promising, average 25 reduced. Corn: still being planted and some plowing yet to do. Stand good and hard to work. The early planted is in good shape and is up with a good stand.

John Inglis says from Arkansas city: Southwestern Missouri and southwestern Kansas crop report improved; promises largest yield of wheat in many years. Oats good, heading. Rain would benefit oats in this section, but nothing suffering.

NAVAL STORES MARKET ACTIVE DURING WEEK

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 24.—There has not been very active trading in naval stores this week. The buyers have been holding off a little and while prices have remained about stationary there has not been any strong undertone to them. The rosin market has been even less active than the spirits market. There is still a marked determination on the part of the factors who organized a few weeks ago to hold for higher prices and they are having a stiff fight to do it. The market has unquestionably been boosted a little higher than it would be without this organization and the factors are doing all they can to show that they are in control.

ESTABLISHMENT OF GIRLS' HOME IS BEING PLANNED

Bill to This Effect Will Be Introduced in the Legislature

A bill to establish a Georgia State Industrial home for wayward girls will be introduced at the coming session of the legislature.

It will be endorsed by leading legislators, by the prison association of Georgia officially, by practically all of the women's clubs of Georgia, by superior court judges, and by others who have come in direct contact with the problem.

The industrial home or reformatory at Milledgeville was originally designed by act of the legislature creating it to care for both boys and girls, but the lack of necessary facilities and finances have made it impossible to carry out the whole provision of the measure, and the Milledgeville reformatory is able to take care only of wayward boys.

The need for such an institution is strikingly pointed out in a statement of Judge John T. Pendleton, of the Fulton superior court, who also presides over the children's court.

"I think a reformatory for girls is very much needed in Georgia," he said. "The children's court has on several occasions had to send girls to Cincinnati for the lack of a reformatory in Georgia."

The bill providing for the establishment of this industrial home and school for girls has already been tentatively drafted. It carries an appropriation of approximately $75,000. The bill provides for the appointment by the governor of a board of managers of five members, not less than two of whom shall be women. This board shall be empowered with the appointment of the superintendent of the home.

IMPRESSIVE SCENES AS CLOSE TO ROYAL WEDDING

Empress and Bride Are Almost in Tears at Conclusion of Ceremony

BERLIN, May 24.—Prince Ernest August, of Cumberland, and Princess Victoria Luise, of Prussia, only daughter of the German emperor, whose wedding occurred today with all the pomp and brilliancy of the most ceremonial court of Europe, will ascend the throne of the duchy of Brunswick at an early date. The direct line of rulers of the duchy became extinct in 1884.

It was the will of the German emperor that the dethroned house of Hanover and the house of Hohenzollern should be reconciled, and the emperor made this announcement in a toast at the state banquet this evening in which he exhorted the prince and princess to devote their lives to the service of their future subjects and confirmed the general belief that the marriage was a love match.

Emperor William spoke to an audience purely of royal blood, diplomatic representatives, ministers and other guests dining in other rooms. The stately "torch" dance formed a fitting conclusion to a series of brilliant pictures. This came after the historic ceremonial, except that the candles borne before the bride were carried by twelve pages, instead of by the ministers, who were no longer willing to figure in such a role.

Escorted by the candle bearers and a guard with drawn swords, the bride was conducted by her father and father-in-law around the hall in court polonaises, the groom following with the empress and his brother.

At the end of the wedding ceremony the empress and the bride were almost in tears and the emperor showed a father's deep emotion. The two elder sons of the crown prince, in sailor suits, proudly assisted Princess Victoria with the Bible which the chaplain, Dr. Dryander, presented to the bride during the ceremony.

The emperor accompanied the prince and princess in an open car through cheering crowds to the station, from which they proceeded by special train to the emperor's hunting lodge at Ebertusstock, where they will pass part of their honeymoon.

At 10:30 o'clock tonight Emperor Nicholas left for St. Petersburg. King George and Queen Mary, it is expected, will remain in Berlin for several days.

SHORTER COLLEGE WILL RENDER FINE PROGRAM

Many Interesting Features Are Planned for Annual Commencement

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., May 24.—Commencement exercises, which were the most successful ever held by Shorter college, are now in progress, attended by scores of visitors from all over the state. The first event of the commencement program is the presentation on Friday afternoon of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" in the open air, with the beautiful wooded spot near the college as the background.

On Saturday afternoon, from 3 to 5 o'clock, the departments of art and domestic science will give their annual exhibitions. The concert of the department of music will be held Saturday night.

Dr. W. A. Hogan, of Agnes, Ga., will preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning, and will deliver the annual sermon to the Young Woman's Christian association on Sunday evening. An alumnae reunion will be held Monday morning, followed by the senior class reception at Manlehurst, the home of President A. W. Van Hoose.

On Monday evening the annual debate will take place in the college chapel, representatives of the two literary societies discussing the proposed six-year presidential term. The baccalaureate address will be delivered Tuesday morning by Dr. Edwin M. Poteat, of Furman university, and the alumnae banquet Tuesday evening will bring a brilliant week to a close.

N. Y. STATE SENATOR CONVICTED OF BRIBERY

Stephen J. Stilwell May Be Sentenced to Ten Years in Prison

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 24.—Stephen J. Stilwell, state senator from the Bronx, recently exonerated by the New York state senate of charges of bribery, was found guilty of bribery this afternoon by a jury. The maximum penalty for the crime is ten years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine. He will be sentenced Wednesday.

SOUTHERN FIRE COS. TO GET SHARE OF POLICIES

Association of Southern Companies Is Assured There Will Be No Discrimination

Charles A. Bickerstaff, secretary and treasurer o fthe association of southenr fire companies, has received the absolute assurance that southern companies will not be discriminated against by the eastern corporations which loan large sums of money for building and other purposes.

Life insurance companies and some financial organizations which make large building loans customarily have the right to specify wheer the fire insurance on the buildings shall be placed.

After writing to some three score of the big live insurance companies, Mr. Bickerstaff has received the assurance that southern fire insurance companies are to be considered on exactly the same basis as the eastern ones. The only qualifications required of a company is that it shall be a joint stock company, solvent and in a prosperous condition.

Writing to Mr. Bickerstaff, the heads of the big life insurance companies said, "We wish you to place us on record in the most unqualified manner as being willing to accept the policies of your companies composing the association."

This means, of course, that southern fire insurance companies have won exactly the same high standing in the financial world as the old eastern companies. It means that when a million dollar sky scraper is put up in Atlanta, or in any other southern city, the fire insurance can be carried with a southern company, no matter how much of the money to build the structure has been borrowed from the north.

VICTOR BERGER CHANGES VIEW ON LABOR TROUBLE

Former Socialist Congressman Visits Mines in West Virginia

(By Associated Press.)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 24.—Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader, former Congressman Victor Berger and Adolph Germer, of Illinois, accompanied John Moore, a labor leader representing Governor Hatfield and Paul J. Paulson, member of the International board of the United Mine Workers, into the Paint and Cabin creek coal fields today.

Mr. Berger in a statement said:

"I have an entirely different impression to the one I previously had toward the West Virginia executive and his attitude tow rd the working man."

Mr. Berger told the governor, "You have been placed in a false light. I have said some harsh things of you in print but now I will correct them."

Much data and information was laid before the leaders by the government.

King of Sweden

STOCKHOLM, May 17.—His majesty, King Gustav V. of Sweden has been spending a long holiday on the Riveria, and has just returned to Stockholm. His majesty, who traveled strictly incognito, accompanied only by the grand marshal of the court, spent a few days in Paris, where, of course, he visited, and was visited by, the French president, and did the usual decorus round of sightseeing and receptions. King Gustave is the most unobtrusive of monarchs; he is intensely bored by all state ceremonies and science constitutes his only real interest in life.

MRS KEENEY DROPS DEAD IN SACRED HEART CHURCH

Well-Known Atlanta Woman Had Been Praying When Seized by Indigestion

On her way out from the altar of the Sacred Heart church, where she had been praying for nearly half an hour, Mrs. Florence Keeney, of 95 Angier avenue, dropped dead in the vestibule of the church at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Evidently Mrs. Keeney grew ill while on her knees in the front part of the church, for two ladies who met her in the vestibule say she s:: ggered slightly as she came up the long aisle. One of them is Miss Annie Connolly, housekeeper of the Sacred Heart church.

She and a companion were just entering the church as Mrs. Keeney came into the vestibule.

"I'm feeling sick," Mrs. Keeney is reported to have said to them. "Will you get me a glass of water with a little soda in it? I'm afraid I have acute indigestion."

Miss Connolly ran to the priests' house in the rear of the church. When she got back with the water Mrs. Keeney had fallen from a chair to the floor and was dead.

Surviving Mrs. Keeney are her husband, Mr. Hugh G. Keeney, two boys, Charles and Phillip Keeney, and one daughter, Pauline Keeney. She leaves also a sister, Mrs. G. W. Brown, and three brothers, V. E., John and Peter Lambert.

Mrs. Keeney was 50 years of age. She has scores of friends to whom she was very dear and who will grieve greatly to hear of her sudden death.

The funeral will take place at 10 o'clock Monday morning from the Sacred Heart church and interment will be at Oakland cemetery. The following gentlemen will act as pallbearers and will meet at F. J. Bloomfield's chapel at 8:45 o'clock: Owen Vanley, James Gillespie, H. T. Haynes, James J. Condon, John D. Brady, H. C. O'Donnell, Ben Hughie and Dennis O'Donnell.

ATLANTA MAN TRIES TO KILL SELF IN NASHVILLE

Thomas A. Latham Shoots Self in Crowded Cafe—Will Recover, Physicians Say

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 24.—After announcing to a friend who accompanied him that he intended to commit suicide, Thomas A. Latham, thirty years old, this afternoon ate a hearty meal at a downtown cafe and then drew a revolver and fired three shots at himself. Two bullets went wild and diners in the cafe had narrow escapes. The other bullet struck Latham just under the heart, but physicians at the city hospital state the wound is only superficial.

Latham had been employed in the auditor's office of the N. C. and St. L. railway, but resigned last night and stated that he would return to his home at Atlanta today.

Despondency is given as the cause of his attempt at self-destruction.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

ONLY one week before the June ushers in the summer bride, the sweet girl graduate and sees the departure of numbers of Atlantians for their out-of-town places, different resorts and Europe.

For the stay-at-homes June holds a promise of delightful afternoons at the country clubs.

At the Driving club the music which added so much to the afternoon tea hour last year has been resumed between the hours of half past 5 and half past 7, the tea drinkers leaving their tables to follow the music on the ball room floor.

The acquisition of the Brookhaven club by the Capital City club will give the members of the town club a country home where all summer sports can be enjoyed. The golf links, new as they are, afford an opportunity for an interesting game which carries the golfer up and down hill over the greens, which are cut through a grove of tall pines, while are the picturesque setting for the club.

The tennis courts are in splendid condition, and the joys of water sports are added by the lake, which lies between the two ridges of the club grounds.

The club, as a delightful break to a long motor ride, has its porches filled each afternoon by automobile parties, who enjoy a refreshing drink while watching the more athletic members at their various pastimes.

THE younger set have two interesting events to look forward to this week the May festival at Soar Bean Farm, the home of Uncle Remus on Friday afternoon, when the May queen will be crowned mid great pomp and ceremony, and the Mother Goose pageant Saturday afternoon on the lawn of Mr. Clyde King's home in Druid Hills, under the direction of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R.

The May festival was postponed from Saturday on account of the uncertain weather, but will be given this week and with the pageant will make the week-end one of particular interest for the young people.

Mrs. Dargan to Give Luncheon in Honor Mrs. Wood

Mrs. Milton Dargan will entertain at luncheon Tuesday at the Driving club in honor of Mrs. Charles A. Wood, who will leave that evening for Toxaway.

Twelve guests have been invited to meet Mrs. Wood.

Miss Morgan's Matinee Tea to Visitors

Miss Elizabeth Morgan will entertain at a box party at the Atlanta theater Monday afternoon in compliment to a number of visiting girls, and after the matinee the guests will be entertained at tea at the Piedmont Driving club.

Miss Morgan's guests will include Miss Margaret McPheeters, of Raleigh, N. C., Miss Elizabeth Boyd, of Clearwater, Fla., Miss Marion Hodgson, of Athens, Miss Carolyn King and Miss Laura Cowles.

DeSaussure-Davis Wedding Plans

The wedding of Miss Ida de Saussure and Mr. William Alfred Davis, of Savannah, will take place on the evening of Monday, June the 7, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orris Ferry Randall, in Copenhill.

Mrs. T. E. Screven, a sister of the bride elect, will be matron of honor, and Mr. John de Saussure will be best man. Dr. C. B. Wilmer, will officiate.

The bride-to-be is of French Huguenot extraction and is a representative of distinguished families, and the groom is a grand nephew of Jefferson Davis.

To Miss Downer

Mrs. John Means Daniel will entertain at tea on Wednesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Louise Downes, of Hopkinsville, Ky., the guest of Miss Aline Parks.

Mrs. Gray to Entertain

Mrs. L. W. Gray will entertain a box party Wednesday at the Atlanta theater in compliment to Miss Grace Pruett, of Clayton, Ala., who will be the guest of Miss Mary Andrews.

Mrs. Wylie's Tea to Visitors

An event of Monday afternoon will be the 5 o'clock tea at which Mrs. Bun Wylie will entertain at her home on Spring street in compliment to Mrs. Paul Seyel, of New York, Mrs. Straughn Barrett, of Kentucky, who is the guest of Mrs. Virgil Perryman, and to Mrs. John Addy, of Boston, who is visiting Mrs. A. H. Wheeler.

The occasion will be a very informal one, Mrs. Wylie's guests to include fifteen friends.

Miss Gay's Bowling Party

Miss Eloise Gay will entertain at a bowling party Tuesday afternoon at the East Lake Country club, the guests of the occasion to include Miss Louise Wilson and Miss Evelyn Booth, of Lynchburg, Va., Miss Sarah Hansell, of Thomasville, and the members of the "Bull Dog" club of Agnes Scott college.

To Mrs. Barrett

Mrs. William Owens will entertain informally at tea Tuesday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving club, in compliment to Mrs. Straughn Barrett, of Hendersonville, Ky., who is the guest of Mrs. Virgil Perryman.

Mrs. Owens' guests will include six friends.

Miss Vandiver's Guests

Miss Gwendolyn Barnes, of Uniontown, Pa., will be the guest of honor at the bridge party at which Miss Alice Vandiver will be hostess Tuesday afternoon.

Among the invited guests are Miss Annie Lee McKenzie, Miss Sarah Rawson, Miss Helen Dargan, Miss Helen Hobbs, Miss Marie Pappenheimer, Miss Harriet Cole, Miss Helen Hawkins, Miss Marian Goldsmith, Miss Ruth Stallings, Miss Mary Helen Moody, Miss Isabel Kuhrt, Miss Emma Kate Amoreux, Miss Gladys Le Vin, Miss Laura Ansley, Miss Nina Gentry, Miss Charles Owens, Miss Frances Connally, Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., Mrs. F. E. Knelp, Mrs. Wickliffe Goldsmith, Mrs. Clarence Haverty, Mrs. Charles Remsen, Mrs. Roy Collier, Mrs. William R. Schrader, Mrs. Hughes Spalding and Mrs. Charles T. Hopkins, Jr.

To Mrs. Morris

Mrs. J. G. Addy entertained at a delightful reception Friday afternoon from 4 to 6 at her home in Decatur in honor of her attractive guest, Mrs. Robert Hugh Morris, of Philadelphia.

About fifty were invited to meet Mrs. Morris.

A LOVELY VISITOR

Diamond Values Dependant on Selection

The value of diamonds is entirely dependant upon color, perfection and cutting.

Before our Diamonds are mounted they are subjected to the closest possible examination, and on each an honest, competent opinion is recorded in plain figures; absolutely nothing is hidden; if the stone is not perfect, the shape or cutting not correct, it is so marked.

Our mountings, which are next in importance, are selected with the same care and attention; with but three thoughts in mind—durability, insuring against loss of the stones; beauty of construction, insuring the greatest value of the gems as ornaments; and price, which must be as low as possible, consistent with the best.

Players' Club Play to Be June Event

Owing to a change in dates for the Blanch Walsh pictures at the Grand, the presentation by the Atlanta Players' club of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being in Earnest," has been changed from Friday, May 30, to the following Tuesday evening, the 3rd of June. The Blanch Walsh films were originally planned to be shown at the Grand during the early part of this coming week, but it has been decided to offer them the last three days of the week, which includes the date first set for the performance of the Players' club.

The members of the club are devoting time to their rehearsals in a manner that indicates the intense interest, not only of the members of the cast, but of every member of the club, in giving the best performance of which they are capable, and considering their experience and the time that they have spent on it, there is no doubt that the rendition is going to be the best that this very capable club has been responsible for.

The play, it will be interesting to know, is one that has been recently presented by the Savannah club. The lines are as clever as anything which has ever come from the pen of that master of cleverness, Oscar Wilde, and it does not depend for its humor on anything which is broad; there is absolutely no horse play, and the characters are those of refined English people in the best of circumstances.

The blase and synical Algernon Monc[rie]f is presented by Mr. Lamar Hill capably and as acceptably as could be rendered by any professional. If Mr. Wilde had known Mr. Hill himself, he could not have written a part to fit him better. Mr. Marsh Adair gives an interpretation of John Worthing which is surprising in its consistency. The rehearsals, which have been held nightly at the Grand theater, have been in full form, and no chances are taken on a slip of any kind. And the ladies are particularly attractive. Miss Hildreth Burton Smith, Mrs John M. Slaton, Mrs. William Owens and Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott form a quartet, each one of which fits into the whole most acceptably. Mr. Hamilton Douglas, Jr. will cause many a laugh by his mannerisms as the Rev. Chasuble; and Mr. Taylor, in the part of Lane, is simply killing.

The first three rows of the orchestra will be filled by members of the Players' club and their guests. The boxes can be had by those who wish to give small parties.

Parties to Brides-Elect

A series of parties have been planned for attractive brides-elect.

Mrs. H. B. Odell will be hostess at luncheon Tuesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Courtenay Harrison.

Miss Marion Woodward will entertain the members of her study club at an informal bridge party Tuesday afternoon at which Miss Harrison and Miss Muriel Hall will share honors.

Mr. Charles Porter's dinner will be an event of Wednesday evening in compliment to Miss Harrison and Miss Frances Harris.—It will entertain at a buffet luncheon Saturday at the "Homestead" in her honor.

FORSYTH

FORSYTH.—A wedding which came as a delightful surprise to their many friends was that of Mr. Will Sneed, of Forsyth, and Miss Estelle Shackleford, of Atlanta, which took place in Montgomery, Ala., on the evening of Sunday, May 18, at the Dexter avenue church. The wedding was performed by Dr. Oliham in the presence of a few friends.

The announcement of their wedding will be interesting news to many people in Georgia, where both Mr. and Mrs. Sneed are well known. For the present they will make their home in Forsyth.

An affair that was attractive in its every detail was the reception given by Miss Ruth Ponder at her home on Railroad avenue to the senior class of Bessie Tift college, of which class she is a member. Only the class of 1913 was invited, the class colors, purple and white, being carried out in all the details of the decorations.

Miss Suzanne Grantland, of Griffin, is the guest of Miss Louise Wallace Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Hugh Jackson has returned from a visit to Dr. and Mrs. Roger Swint in Milledgeville.

Misses Annie Kate and Clare Fletcher spent the week-end in Barnesville.

Miss Kate Whidden, of Arcadia, Fla., spent several days of this week with Miss Halli, Lancaster.

Mr. Lee Napier spent Friday in Macon.

Mr. O. H. B. Bloodworth and Miss Lelia Jackson spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Atlanta.

Miss Juliette Rutherford and Mr. Samuel Rutherford were in Atlanta Wednesday.

Mrs. Elbert Banks has returned from Culloden, where she has been delightfully entertained for the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cater were the week-end guests of Dr. and Mrs. William T. Jones in Atlanta.

Mrs. H. M. Putnam, who has been the guest of Mrs. J. M. McDowell for some time, has gone to Atlanta for several days. From there she goes to Knoxville for the summer.

Mrs. Evelyn Ponder spent Monday in Macon.

Mr. R. M. Worsham spent Monday in Thomaston.

Mr. Dudley Shannon came down from Gordon Institute to spend Sunday in Forsyth.

Mr. Henry Hunter, of Columbus, spent several days of the past week with friends in Forsyth.

Miss Louise Wallace and Messrs. Hugh Hardin and Ogden Persons were the guests Monday of Miss Suzanne Grantland in Griffin.

Mr. Frank Willingham spent Monday in Macon.

Miss Maryben Hixon, of Americus, was the attractive guest of Miss Louise Rogers for the week-end.

Mr. G. Stacer Devereaux spent the week-end at Devereaux.

Mr. Joe Hunt, of Macon, spent Sunday and Monday in Forsyth.

Miss Irma Knapheide and Miss Edna Woods Gwynne leave Saturday for their homes.

Mr. W. P. Clements, Jr., of Macon, spent Sunday in Forsyth with Mr. Charles Hardin, Jr.

Mrs. John T. Stephens leaves the early part of the week for a month's visit to her mother, Mrs. J. M. Sumerford, at Leslie.

Mr. Thomas Nesbit, of Cordele, was in town Sunday.

Mr. J. F. Lancaster was in Macon Friday.

Mrs. A. M. Outlaw has returned from a delightful visit to Mrs. Charles E. Sanders in Macon.

Miss Mary Lou Newton is spending the week in Macon.

Miss Josephine Jordan has returned home, after a visit of several weeks to her brother in Columbia, S. C.

Mrs. J. Q. Smith and little son, of Cairo, have returned to their home, after spending several days with Judge R. M. Hathorn.

Mrs. R. W. Lawton and Miss Helen Lawton, of Oviedo, Fla., are the guests of Mrs. J. J. Cater.

Mrs. William Rutherford has returned to Culloden, after spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rutherford.

Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Woofter, of Athens, are the guests of Mr. Willingham.

Prof. W. A. Worsham, of Athens, spent Saturday and Sunday in Forsyth.

Mr. Louis Zellner spent Saturday and Sunday in Atlanta.

Mr. P. R. Chapman was in Atlanta the early part of the week.

Mr. Ed Snyder spent Sunday in Atlanta.

FOR Teething Babies

mothers have for many years used

TEETHINA

with happiest results, in taking their babies safely thru the trying, dangerous teething period.

Teethina is a prescription for many years used regularly by Dr. C. J. Moffett, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in his long and successful practice. He considered it the best known remedy for Cholera-Infantum, dysentery, diarrhea, Worms, colic, and worms—the dread diseases that cause most of the deaths of children. Successfully used 40 years.

Teethina soothes and eases the child and makes teething easy. Saves many long, anxious, sleepless nights for the mother.

Sale of Makers' Surplus Stocks

New Arrivals in Summer's Approved Fashions at Notably Low Prices

Last week the buyer returned from his New York trip. His return signalized an inflow of new suits and dresses by almost every express. All week we've been busily unpacking them; now we're ready to sell.

$10 to $12.50 Lingerie Dresses at $5.85

White embroidered voile and lingerie flouncings have been developed into very stylish dresses. Other white dresses are trimmed in laces, adorned with crystal buttons, crushed silk girdles, etc. In the same lot are "composed" one-piece dresses—the skirt of white linen; the coat of colored linene.

$5.95 to $8.50 Summer Dresses $3.85

The little price wouldn't pay for the materials. Made of soft white lingeries and voiles, prettily developed in laces and embroideries.

$18.75 to $27.50 Ratine Dresses $11.95

It's a pleasant surprise to get the popular ratine dresses so much under price. Some are trimmed in Bulgarian colors, some are in the "coatee" one-piece styles, some are lace or embroidery trimmed. White and colors.

$15 Ratine Suits $7.85

Smartly tailored ratine suits that will give service the entire summer at seashore, mountain or in city streets. White, pink or grey.

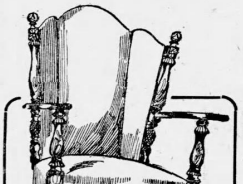
$6.50 Coats $4.95

These short Norfolk coats are just the garment for cool nights or mornings. Made of soft English flannel in bright red or Copenhagen blue. All sizes to 36.

$25 to $35 Wool Suits Only $12.85

It's a little price to pay for suits of such superior quality. One particularly striking style is of Bedford cord, tailored in cutaway fashion, lined throughout with messaline silk. Tans, blues or greys.

Other suits include white Bedford cords with black or colored stripes, solid blue or black serges, neat whipcords, ratines, etc. An unrivaled assortment. Of our old suits none formerly sold for less than $23.50; the new arrivals are worth from $27.50 to $35. Choice $12.85.



Solid Mahogany Rockers $20

A roomy, comfortable solid mahogany rocker. Just as pictured, save that it has plain posts instead of carved. Denim upholstered. $20 is our regular price—typical of the values that rule throughout the stock.

P. S.—Customers wishing more than the usual 30 days' credit can arrange terms to suit through our office.

EATONTON

EATONTON. — The commencement exercises and barbecue at Cosby Wright academy on Friday last was altogether a delightful occasion not only for the pupils and patrons of the school, but for a large number of Eatontonians who found it convenient to accept the very hearty and generous invitations. This youngest of Putnam's educational institutions, named for one of Georgia's greatest and best loved educators, a former officer of the Georgia State Teachers' association, continues to grow in the interest and hearts of the people. Since last year's barbecue one of the neatest and most conveniently arranged school houses in Georgia has been built, its walls ornamented with pictures, and the school has become in every sense the social center of the community, presided over by Miss Frances Pressley, formerly of Brenau conservatory and the Girls' Normal and Industrial college, at Milledgeville. After an excellent program, a royal Georgia barbecue was served, along with such a royal spread of good things to eat that it verily seemed that the proverbial horn of plenty had emptied for the occasion and bad seasons and hard times were forgotten in the genuine enjoyment of the day.

Misses Lillie and Fannie Wice spent the past week-end with relatives in Madison.

Dr. Frank E. Hearn is attending the Knights of Pythias convention this week at Waycross.

Mr. and Mrs. Brevard Nisbet have returned home from Savannah.

Many friends here and elsewhere will be interested in Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Montgomery's announcement of the birth of a son who will bear the name of his father and uncle, Colonel Robert Jenkins. Mrs. Montgomery was Miss Georgia Jenkins.

Varying the rule somewhat this year, the junior class will entertain the graduates of the Eatonton public school, class '13, at the home of Mrs. W. F. Jenkins on Tuesday evening of commencement week. Invitations have already been issued and the affair will be an all important event of the coming week.

Mrs. Fred Hatcher, of Harlem, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Ingram.

Miss Petrona Humber was a recent guest of Miss Sarah Hearn.

Rev. J. H. Barber has returned to his home at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Mrs. Pet Hargrove Adams is spending several weeks in Atlanta.

Another very interesting event of the week past was the graduating exercises at Phoenix academy on Friday evening, the program having an added pleasure in being given out of doors, where historic sentiment seems to linger around one of Putnam's oldest and best known schools, the former tramping ground of Joel Chandler Harris and "the l'il boy" of Uncle Remus fame, and William H. Seward, who as a runaway boy from New York state, taught in the little red school house before reaching his majority and stepping higher into Lincoln's cabinet during the most stormy period of our nation's history. An excellent program was prepared for the Phoenix commencement of 1913, with music, songs and essays and unalloyed social pleasure. The graduates this year were Miss Sarah Paschal, Miss Johnnie Haley, Miss Louise Hudson, Miss Sophie Schell, Miss Ellen McWhorter. Mrs. Alice Leverett Collins, principal of the school, was presented with a lovely gold pin by the graduating class, and the class was each one presented with a beautiful fan by the principal. County School Superintendent W. C. Wright presented the diplomas in his usual happy manner and the entire evening was one of pleasure and enjoyment.

Mr. and Mrs. Vesre Childs, of Wayside, announce the birth of a daughter, Mrs. Childs was formerly Miss Florence Greene, of Eatonton.

Bradley Slaughter, of Atlanta, was a recent Eatonton visitor.

Colonel and Mrs. W. F. Jenkins, Jr., and George Thomas were week-end visitors at Oconee Spring.

Mrs. Sarah Jones has returned from Concord, and is with Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Beck.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Hunt attended the Bankers' convention in Macon this week.

The Young People's Missionary society held an enjoyable meeting with Miss Bessie Lawrence on last Thursday evening at her home on Washington street. An interesting program of music and papers specially prepared for the occasion made the meeting a thoroughly enjoyable and profitable one.

Mrs. Emma Weaver is spending some time with Mrs. Eliza Morton.

Mrs. Amanda Hearn has been quite sick this week.

Little Miss Dorothy Dozier is registered permanently at The Putnam.

Mrs. W. B. Wingfield has returned home from Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingram Phillips and son are visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Philips.

Mrs. Susan Cobb Butler is spending some time with relatives in Macon.

Success depends largely upon Good Health

In your race for success don't loose sight of the fact that only through good health can you attain success.

The tension you must necessarily place upon your nerves, and the sacrifice of proper exercise you have to make at times must be balanced in some way.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

is the balancing power—a vitalizing power. It acts on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, thus purifying the blood and giving strength to the nerves, indirectly aiding the liver to perform its very important work. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been successful for a generation as a tonic and body builder. Sold by medicine dealers in liquid or tablet form—trial box of "Tablets" mailed on receipt of 50 one-cent stamps.

DR. PIERCE'S GREAT FAMILY DOCTOR BOOK, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—newly revised up-to-date edition—of 1008 pages, answers hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know. Sent FREE in cloth binding to any address on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of wrapping and mailing only.

If in failing health write Dr. R. V. Pierce's faculty at Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, New York.

The Difference Between COMFORT and DISCOMFORT

Just as a hair may divide the false from the true, so may a spring prove the difference between comfort and discomfort. And comfort is a very desirable condition.

It is restlessness at night and loss of sleep which produce nervousness; which undermine health. In too many instances the real cause is not thought of. Are you laboring under discomfort which robs you of a night's good rest? Perhaps your bed is not equipped with the proper spring. Perhaps the spring is too weak in some places and too rigid in others and has an uneven surface.

Mine isn't "The 400" Springbed Mine is is guaranteed the best made. It is manufactured of highly tempered Premier wire which gently conforms to the body lines. Each of the 88 oil tempered coils is carefully tested. The frame work and connecting wires are stiff and rigid to hold the spring in shape. The whole is heavily coated with durable black enamel which makes the spring noiseless and rustless and germ proof. The surface is smooth and even with no rough ends to tear mattress tick. Insure your comfort.

Sold under 5-year guarantee. If your dealer can't supply you write us.

Planning for Summer Comfort

It was not so long ago that homes were stripped of half their furnishings in Spring and kept bare until Autumn

They were times when people wore good clothes only on Sundays and special occasions.

But nowadays people of taste pay as much attention to the furnishings of their Summer homes as their Winter residences; spend much less on them and get results that are not possible in the sterner season.

Artistic Draperies and Floor Coverings May be Quite Inexpensive.

With many people the thought (maybe held subconsciously) is that a thing can't be good unless it is high priced. A mistake!

Take summer furnishings in curtains and draperies, for example. There are thousands of Atlanta homes that cannot afford a costly outlay—yet the owners appreciate the beautiful and the artistic in home surroundings, and would have it if they thought they could afford it. They can!

There is a beauty and dignity in well devised simplicity, and it is part of the vocation of this Drapery Store to demonstrate that fact. Time and time again it has proven that money is not the chief requisite for making a home harmonious and comfortable in its furnishings.

Rather Than Court a Nervous Breakdown

most people nowadays prefer to surround themselves with restful things of this kind to make summer home life a joy.

All Summer Home Makers who turn bright faces to these coming brighter days will be glad to know that now ready is this—

Showing of Rugs and Draperies

We want you to see the new hangings and draperies of all kinds.

Let your fingers feel the crispness of the new scrim and madras curtains, fitting into every color scheme for decoration. Let your eyes delight in the wonderful cretonnes—pretty and artistic beyond a doubt. Some of them copies of old hand-blocked prints, toile de Jouys, and reproductions of old, old, French and English patterns.

Have your sash curtains cut from any one of a hundred kinds of muslins, scrims, bordered, plain.

Select from the beautiful light hangings with deep borders, the kind you want to go up in place of the velour portieres, which you were just thinking over your coffee this morning, must come down.

Look among the bed sets, the utility boxes, the cedar chests, materials for pillow covers, the table covers, curtains and shades.

Pick out your awnings while you are here. Our men will go out to measure and estimate costs.

Crex Rugs for Summer

One of the dominant notes in the home harmony evolved in these latter days is the Summer Rug—or, more explicitly, the grass Crex Rug.

Artistic, Sanitary, Economical, Popular Floor Coverings

Crex Rugs are soft and pliable—they can be used the year round for every room in the house, but for summer they are the most practical and desirable floor covering for cottages and porches.

The new Crex Rugs in all sizes, being shown in our Rug and Drapery Section, are of greatest interest, if there are Rugs of any kind to buy.

Note the reasonableness of pricing:

First Aids to Snugness

Sweet Cedar Chests to Pack Winter Clothes In

Perhaps the reason why cedar chests are still the most popular means of keeping moths out of winter clothes is that they are so ornamental. These are really delightful pieces of furniture, and please everyone, except a moth.

Airtight Chests of genuine red cedar; some are brass bound. Priced at $7.50, $8.50, $10, $12.50—up to $25.

Matting-Covered Utility Boxes

Various sizes for shirt waists and skirts and the numerous purposes of utility boxes. Priced at $2.00, $3.50, $5, $7, $8.50, $9 and $10.

Window Shades to Order

Window shades are an important feature here. Every order receives the care and attention of an expert maker.

Nothing but the best materials are used. John King's famous Scotch Holland, and the finest hand-made oil opaques.

Our shades are all mounted on improved Hartshorn rollers. They are attractive, serviceable, they fit the windows properly and work with perfect ease—in short, they are satisfactory in every respect.

Let us send out a man to take measurements and make an estimate on any number of shades needed.

Aerolux Porch Shades Convert a Veranda into a Delightful, Private Room

Equip your veranda with Aerolux Shades and it insures solid comfort for the entire summer. Gives you an ideal "out-door-den," or sleeping porch. Perfectly private, delightfully cool and decidedly attractive.

The New Awning Cloths Have Come

Blues, greens, reds and browns—they are the very best made; so are the frames and fittings which we use.

We make Awnings for homes, for offices, for public buildings and every other place calling for them. Our facilities are exceptional.

Telephone our Rug and Drapery Section—if you cannot come—both phones Main 3033—a man will call with samples and make estimates.

Charming One-Piece Dresses

These charming warm weather dresses are made of ratines, crepes, batistes and striped mulls. They come in wonderfully attractive colors and combinations, and in most cases have sufficient body in the material, without being too hot, to allow correct draping. Beautifully trimmed simulation of blouses and tunics, still retaining all of the features of a one-piece gown. Among the popular colors are champagne, tan, ecru, rose, pink, Copenhagen, white and oyster. Blouses are cut with low or high necks, with long or three-quarter sleeves, set into dropped shoulders, under corded seams. Many of them are V necks, partly filled in with folds of white batiste, nets and lace, finished with rolling collars. Skirts are draped with inlaid lace medallions, crushed girdle and sash.

100 Garden and Reception Dresses for Club and Tea

At $25

One-Piece Club Dresses

The materials in these gowns are of imported cotton crepes, nub tufted voiles and meal surface ratines. Also crepe de chines, charmeuse, messalines and nets. Many of them are done in Persian and Bulgarian embroidery, and, contrasting with the plainer materials, will be found many crude reds and blues. Several of these are trimmed with medallions on the belts and between the edges of the front fastenings that form a finish for the tunics. High waisted blouses in most cases and deep crushed girdle and sashes are shown in great variety. Many of the skirts are open effects, several of the styles opening down the side and draped across the front and back. Some have long crushed girdles of black satin, others self girdles knotted below the hips. Many are trimmed in the new contrasting Bulgarian colors. At the price, TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, they have no competition. Remember, all are new and fresh.

What the College Girls Are Doing

At Brenau College.

The decennial reunion of the class of 1903 is being held during this commencement at Brenau. This is the first class to hold a reunion and other classes are already making their plans so that the custom of holding a decennial reunion will become established at Brenau. The members of the class arrived on Friday afternoon and were the guests of Miss Overton at a box party Friday evening when the senior play was presented. Saturday afternoon Dr. H. J. Pearce gave the class an automobile ride over the city and Saturday evening they were the honor guests at the alumnae banquet which was given in Yonah hall. The toast mistress of the evening, Miss Ruth Baker of Owensboro, Ky., and two other speakers, Miss Oscar Davidson, of Athens, Ga., and Mrs. P. W. Stevens, of Fort Logan, Colo., were chosen from this class.

On Wednesday at 1 o'clock a reception will be given this class by the college, those attending being the members of the class present and the teachers who were members of the faculty during the college life of the class. Several other social affairs are being planned for the class whose headquarters have been established in the auditorium building. The members present are:

Miss Ruth Baker, of Owensboro, Ky., Mrs. Oscar Davidson, Athens, Ga.; Miss Bonnie Brook, Jefferson, Ga.; Mrs. H. R. Sherard, Williamston, S. C.; Miss Lucile Canning, Chickasha, Okla.; Miss Florrie Carter, Gainesville, Ga.. Mrs. Aldine Combs, Barnesville, Ga; Mrs. C. T. Stoney, Jefferson, Ga.; Mrs. J. C. Thomas, Adel, Ga.; Miss Julia Bell McLeod, Abbeville, Ga.; Mrs. Gayle Riley, Gainesville, Ga.; Mrs. L. N. Mc-Whorter, Royston, Ga.; Mrs. C. A. Flick, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. P. M. Stevens, Fort Logan, Colo.. Mrs. John Oates, Charlotte, N. C.; Miss Daisy Wilson, St. Augustine, Fla.

Miss Jack Charlton Ward, of Beaumont, Tex., was heard in her senior song recital on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Brenau auditorium with Mr. Elmer Zoller at the piano. Miss Ward was introduced by her instructor, Mrs. Thomas J. Simmons, as a mezzo contralto of richly sympathetic quality and dramatic power with great flexability, a combination which is a rare and valuable endowment. In Lowe's "The Belfry Warden's Daughter," all of these qualities were admirably used and in a long and varied program including specially beautiful selections of old Scotch songs. Miss Ward delighted her audience which was an appreciative and enthusiastic one. Miss Ward graduates from the conservatory with distinction and has won many friends at Brenau by her charming personality and musical accomplishments.

The banquet given by Brenau to the visiting members of the Decemial reunion of the class of 1903 was an elegant and enjoyable affair. A delicious menu was served and many delightful toasts were given and responded to, among which were those of Miss Estelle Nottingham, "To the Presidents," which was responded to by Dr. T. J. Simmons. "To Brenau Colony of Atlanta," given by Miss Nellie Laing, of Dawson, Ga., and responded to by Miss Sadye Andrews, of Atlanta; and "To Our Alma Mater," which was given by Miss Minnie Merritt, was responded to by Dr. H. J. Pearce.

A rare pleasure was given to the music lovers on Monday afternoon when Miss Mabel Kanouse, of Terrell, Tex., was heard in her senior piano recital. Miss Kanouse played with a delicacy and depth of tone. In Schutt's "Reverie" and Chopin's "Sonata in B flat minor" her full power of native insight and technical achievement was expressed with the resultant effect of a rendition most unusual for so young a musician. Miss Kanouse is a pupil of Mr. B. F. Havens. Miss Mary Tennant, of Buffalo, N. Y., assisted Miss Kanouse, and her beautiful contralto voice was an effective contribution to the musical hour.

The senior play given by the school of oratory was presented on Friday evening and the class of 1913 chose Oscar Wilde's comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest." The leading role of John Northing was taken by Miss Emma Jones and playing with her was Miss Malcolm Cohen as the heroine, Gwendolyn Fairfax. Two other important characters were Algemon Moncrief, Miss Lucile Harrell Snow and Cecily Cardew, Miss Mary Blanton.

On Tuesday afternoon Misses Sallie Evans, of Montgomery, Ala., Ruth Elgin, of Meridian, Miss., and Velma Cartwright, of Terrell, Tex., who are pupils of Mr. B. F. Havens, were heard in their junior B piano recital. All of these young ladies did splendid work and Miss Velma Cartwright, who gave her numbers without notes and with excellent pianistic effects and beautiful brilliance of execution, received special commendation from the faculty.

Mrs. Rippard, of Wawcross, Ga., is the guest of the Phi Mu Sorority Chapter house. Mrs. Rippard will remain through commencement. Mrs. Rippard is visiting her daughter, Miss Lucile.

Chancellor David C. Barrow, of the University of Georgia, and Dr. Woofter, professor of education, were the guests of Brenau on Tuesday.

Miss Jennie Douglas, a former student of Brenau, and a pupil of Prof. J. T. Sinnette, is a guest at Brenau for commencement. Miss Douglas, after her graduation, was connected with the faculty of Brenau. She has just returned from a trip to New York, and is a guest of friends at the college.

At Bessie Tift.

The 1913 class-day exercises which took place on May 24, were among the prettiest and most impressive witnessed in many years. The exercises began in the college chapel at 2 o'clock, the program being as follows:

Procession song—Senior class.
History of class—Marian Bishop.
Prophecy of class—Florrie Hollis.
Violin solo—Lucile Maude Roberts.
Will of class—Drawn up by Misses Lucile Jarrett, Ava Shields and Wreathea Rogers. Read by Colonel O. H. B. Bloodworth, Jr.
Class poem—Nancy McBrayer.
Song—"A Great, Grand Class," by little Miss Antionette Bramlett, mascot of the class.

Immediately after the program in chapel, the audience assembled on the campus to witness the Ivy Walk. The juniors and seniors, leaving the main building from main entrance, proceeded across the campus carrying garlands of Ivy. At a place selected, the Ivy was planted with appropriate ceremony.

The succeeding part of the program was one that had widespread interest for the student body, and the audience was given an insight into college student affairs. The exercises centered around the possession of the shepherd's crook, which was presented by the class of 1911 to the succeeding senior class, on condition that its hiding place be discovered. The crook now descends from each senior class to the succeeding one, if it is so fortunate as to find it.

The exercises were held on the banks of the lake in the large park at the rear of the college. They began by a procession from over the hill, led by Misses Pansy Webb and Ava Shields, attendants dressed in violet costumes, who proceded King Arthur, Miss Laurie Maude Roberts, and Queen Guinevere, Miss Pearl Todd. They were followed by two pages, Misses Lucile Jarrett and Nelle Fraser, who carried their trains. The regal costumes of the king and queen and the fairy attendants formed a beautiful scene in the setting of nature. They proceeded to the banks of the lake where they sang in chorus, the sentiment of which was the mystery surrounding the hiding place of the crook.

In the midst of a song the crook appeared suddenly out of the water and was received by the king and queen. After this the barge glided on past the overhanging trees which hid them from view. As they disappeared the fairies danced and sang, scattering flowers on the barge and over the lake.

Dr. and Mrs. Green Entertain

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Green entertained Tuesday evening at cards for their guests, Miss Rosalie Booth, Miss Josephine Ingram and Misses Ethel, Louise and Leila Green.

A delightful box party was given at the Atlanta theater Wednesday by Mrs. C. C. George in honor of Mrs. Thomas E. Green's guests.

To Mr. and Mrs. Barry Wright

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Reynolds entertained last evening in their lovely apartments in the Bon-Air for Mr. and Mrs. Barry Wright.

The living room was very attractively decorated in Richmond roses. The mahogany dining table had as the center decoration a tall silver vase that held Dorothy Perkins roses. The silver candlesticks were topped with exquisite candle shades that gave a soft pink light to the table. The place cards were pink rosebuds, hand-painted. Seven delicious courses were served.

Mrs. Reynolds received her guests most graciously, wearing a handsome gown of white flowered crepe.

Mrs. Wright was attractively gowned in Nell rose chiffon over cream, draped with crystal trimmings.—Rome Tribune-Herald.

To Miss Hartzog

A series of parties have been planned for this week in compliment to Miss Irene Hartzog, a bride-elect.

Mrs. R. T. Jones, will entertain at bridge on Monday afternoon. Mrs. J. H. Watson, will give a bridge luncheon on Wednesday, and Miss Effie Westbrook, will entertain with a bridge party at her home in Fairburn, on Thursday.

Mrs. C. N. Dennis, will give a box party at the Atlanta, on Saturday, followed by tea at the Georgian Terrace.

"QUEEN OF MAY" TO BE CROWNED ON SNAP BEAN FARM LAWN

A beautiful May-pole dance and festival will be held under the auspices of the ladies of the Uncle Remus Memorial association, Friday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, at "The Sign of the Wren's Nest."

Fair childhood will be crowned queen of the May. Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the old home where "Uncle Remus" lived. How it would gladden his heart if he were only here to witness this beautiful gathering of the young friends who loved him almost as his own children did.

The most beautiful festival the children have ever had on Snap Bean Farm will be the gaming Friday of over one hundred of West End children. All the Atlanta people should avail themselves of this opportunity and bring their children and all their neighbors' children to the home where Uncle Remus lived, to see the May queen crowned.

Way back in the meadow, a large stage has been erected, and on it a beautiful white throne made entirely of snowballs. Promptly at 5 o'clock a trumpet will sound, announcing the coming of the queen, Miss Catherine Vickers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shelton O. Vickers. A long avenue has been made from the flower garden of Mrs. Linden Harris' home and from a large bower of crimson ramblers the knights will first appear, immediately after a beautiful reading from Uncle Remus stories by Miss Ethel Thornton. These knights will march two by two along this white avenue leading to the throne. After they have taken their places, Miss Frances Stokes, the queen of last May, will march slowly down this avenue, with Miss Elva Keeton, her maid of honor, ascend the throne and occupy it until she places the crown of rosebuds on her successor's head. Close behind these young girls will follow Clifford Smith, a perfect blonde, arrayed in white and gold, bearing in his hand the scepter to present to his queen upon her arrival.

From a bower of roses the maids appear walking one by one very slowly and each will be met at the turn in the avenue by her knight when the two march to the throne and salute "Queen Frances." All eyes will be delighted next by the arrival of the seven tiny flower maidens, each carying a long-handle basket of roses and her escort, a page, bearing a garland. Close behind these tiny subjects, Master Charles Ward, little son of Dr. and Mrs. Pelham Ward, will appear carrying a large white satin pillow, bearing the queen's crown and leading the way for her. Another trumpet will sound and behold "Queen Cathrine" will make her appearance under a large white canopy, held high above her head by her attendants, Newton McCutchen and Bernard Montgomery. All eyes will be centered upon this graceful young queen in all her splendor, from the first step she makes upon the avenue until she kneels upon the white satin pillow, receives her crown of rosebuds from "Queen Frances" and is given her rightful place upon her throne.

Each maid with her knight goes up and salutes the new queen, the maid placing her shower bouquet at her feet. Our dainty little lady steps down from her royal throne and with sceptor in one hand and bouquet of roses in the other, makes her address of appreciation to her subjects, after which the Maypole children will march around the poles and plait their ribbons. An orchestra, consisting of fourteen pieces from Marist college has kindly consented to furnish music for the occasion.

Miss Harralson, the musical director of the city schools, has kindly consented to teach the children in the higher grammar grades to sing the beautiful May day song, with which to greet the queen upon her arrival. Just before the appears all the children on the grounds will be invited to take part.

Mrs. Brand Montgomery, who has this program in charge, wishes all children to bring flowers to scatter in the queen's path.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

LONDON, May 24.—What their majesties lose in popularity by being unknown to the spa-goers of Germany and France, they make up in the slums and warehouses of England. The king's injunction, "Wake up, England" which some years ago went round the empire like lightning, is still his majesty's motto, and it is the motto of one who has "seen the world," and can appreciate where his own country is waterlogged and sluggish. His majesty (as sovereign) has already been upon two important excursions to the most industrial spots in the country, and has been "getting up" facts about these sweated and unconsidered units of the English population—the crockery makers of Hanley and the potteries. These spots are not holiday-making centers. Nobody goes to Hanley for his health. The scenario was metamorphosed for the visit of their majesties, of course; but even then the Potteries were not succulent. It was a sheer sense of duty that took King George and Queen Mary there. At Crewe the duke of Westminster met the king, in his capacity of Lord Lieutenant of Cheshire, and the signal man who does mayoral duty for Crewe this year received their majesties and the queen was extremely affable to the head of the municipality.

It is rumored that the king and queen were accompanied on their friendly visit to Berlin for the royal wedding, by Sir Edward Grey. It is not surprising if the rumor is true, although the kaiser expressed himself as intending to avail himself of the unusual assemblage of royalties to hold an informal conference on the European situation, and ultra-constitutional opinion of this country would no doubt be shocked at the idea of King George discussing international politics with the other monarchs without a minister at his elbow. Parliament—or, rather, the cabinet—is very jealous of his record over foreign affairs; and, since the arrival of the Hanoverian dynasty, King Edward has been the only sovereign who has traveled on the continent unattended—not without protests in certain quarters.

There is no truth whatever in the persistent rumor emanating in tory circles that Mr. Asquith will before long relinquish the premiership. As for associating Mr. Asquith's name with the impending vacancy in the lord chief justiceship, nothing could be wider of the mark. When he accepted the home secretaryship in the Gladstone government of 1892, Mr. Asquith deliberately chose to follow the political and not the legal path. Sir Charles Russell, who became attorney general, wished him to be solicitor general, which would have effectually barred the way to the lord chancellorship. Again, during the present regime, Mr. Asquith, had he chosen, could, of course, have been the occupant of the woolsack.

In society circles much curiosity is evinced as to why a well known foreign count and his wife—a charming American—should have decided to permanently live in London.

There is a "rate war" in the chaperonage business, and two firms, one of which is run by the son of an impecunious baronet and the other by a clever adventurer, are advertising in an ingenious way the lowering of rates. Last year the charge for a chaperon for a week at Ascot was forty guineas, or twenty guineas for the day. The aristocratic firm this year reduced the fee to thirty guineas and twenty, whereupon the plebeian made it twenty-five and twelve.

It is not generally realized how extensively the business is in chaperons. An invitation to three afternoon receptions in one day, with chaperon, can be got for three to five guineas, according to the status of the lady who arranges the introductions; while a week at Cowes, with the usual visits to the "Squadron" ball, can be got from fifty guineas. One lady, indeed, never charges less than eighty guineas (and often gets more) so she does not do her business through an agency.

Superintendent Quinn, who was in charge of the operative force that raided the suffragette headquarters, has for long been the chief in the secret service work at Scotland Yard. Generally it has fallen to him to look after anarchists and foreign criminals, in which work he is unrivalled. He has a wonderful knack of getting inside information, and the accuracy of his knowledge of the interior of the suffragette headquarters in Kingsway has completely surprised the militants.

Lord Kitchener is expected to return to London about the end of June in order to discuss important matters with the government.

There was a great stir last week behind the scenes at a well-known club in the West End. The cause of the trouble was the disappearance from a safe of a considerable sum of money, which represented a large proportion of the club's receipts for one day. Scotland Yard has been doing its best to discover the thief.

Agnes Scott Girls To Give Luncheon

The members of the Sigma Delta Phi sorority of Agnes Scott will give a luncheon Monday at the Georgian Terrace in honor of Miss Helen Smith, Miss Olivia Bogacki and Miss Kate Clark, their sorority mates and members of this year's graduating class.

The other members of the party are Miss Ruth Blue, Miss Agnelle Blue, Miss Lula White, Miss Henrietta Lambdin, Miss Bert Morgan, Miss Dorothy Austin, Miss Elisabeth Willet, Miss Aline Fischer, Miss Pauline Brunner, Miss Gladys Camp.

Third Ward Club Entertained

The entertainment given recently by the Womans' Third Ward Civic club was of more than usual merit.

The Womans' club building was decorated with ferns, palms and flowers.

Miss Berenice Horton rendered a number of dramatic readings in a brilliant manner. Part of the program was the reading of plantation stories with soft piano accompanyment, by Miss Elizabeth Swaffield.

Miss Edith Couch rendered Mendelsohn's Midsummer Night's Dream, in a charming manner.

Miss Annie Laurie Langford, sang a number of selections, among them the Aria from Madam Butterfly.

The closing number of the evening was a clever impersonation by Miss Horton "How Miss Cecly took the Cake" in costume.

Davidson-McMullen

The marriage is announced of Miss Natalie Virginia McMullen and Mr. J. G. Davidson, the ceremony having taken place at the Methodist parsonage in East Atlanta Tuesday evening, May 20, Rev. C. V. Weathers officiating.

A TRIO OF PRETTY WOMEN

SOCIAL HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

NUMBERS of informal parties, afternoon teas and bridge parties at the clubs, and the usual dances filled the week—the arrival of a number of pretty visiting girls with those already here being the cause of much of the entertaining.

Miss Elizabeth Boyd as the guest of Miss Carolyn King has been delightfully welcomed. Miss Boyd is the only daughter of Mrs. Isaac Boyd, and in spite of several winters spent in Florida and summers in Tennessee, is still regarded as an Atlanta girl.

She is the unusually pretty, with lovely dark hair and brown eyes, and her manner is full of a spirited charm that is very delightful and winning.

The tea at which her hostess entertained Wednesday afternoon, and the bridge tea which Miss Eloise Oliver gave Thursday afternoon were lovely events of the week at which Miss Boyd was the honor guest.

THE return of another Atlanta girl whose coming is looked forward to in the early summer, is Miss Gladys Hanson Snook. After a winter filled with success, and the hard work which goes with it, the big white house on Peachtree avenue and its wealth of old-fashioned shrubs and flowers is a restful contrast to the footlights, and the Gladys Hanson of the stage becomes the simple Gladys whose love of home and home friends has remained unchanged.

In "The Governor's Lady," Miss Snook had one of the most congenial and fitting roles she has yet assumed, the play running until late in New York, with week stands in other cities and Brooklyn. Belasco will open with the same play in the fall preceding the new one in which Miss Hanson will appear under the same management.

SPEAKING of actresses and Atlanta's share of them, the work of Miss Tinsley Harrison is being followed with appreciative interest by her friends and admirers.

As a member of the stock company playing at the Atlanta, Miss Harrison has had a number of roles since her first appearance several weeks ago, the most interesting being that of the past week as one of the leading figures in "The Deep Purple."

Her poise, the reading of her lines and the intelligent interpretation of the part has won her enthusiastic praise from her personal friends and from the newer friends who only know her across the footlights.

On the second of June Miss Harrison will figure in an event which is of special interest, the marriage of her sister, Miss Courtenay Harrison, to Mr. Loring Raoul. The wedding will be a picturesque one, solemnized in the early twilight of the June afternoon on the porch of "Fernbank," the country home of the bride's parents, Colonel and Mrs. Z. D. Harrison.

Mr. Raoul's brother, Mr. Norman Raoul, will be the best man and only other attendant.

Mr. Hendree Harrison, the bride's brother, will be the officiating minister assisted by Dr. C. B. Wilmer, rector of St. Luke's church.

The service will be witnessed by only the two families and relatives.

A NEW club which is interesting a wider circle at every meeting is the Pen and Brush club in which some of the leading spirits are Miss Virginia Woolley, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Oscood, Mr. Alfred Brewerton, Mr. Louis Gregg, Miss Virginia Wood, Miss Louise Melichamp, Miss Haines, Mr. Snodgrass, Mr. Frank L. Stanton, Jr., and others.

The meetings are held at the Carnegie library on Saturday evenings, the time filled with sketching from a costume model followed by helpful criticisms from each other.

Miss Woolley will leave about the middle of June for north Georgia to spend several weeks at White Path with the members of her sketching class which includes a number of Atlanta girls and others from out of town, the time to be spent in the out of doors.

Miss Virginia Wood, a young Georgian, who has won for herself a place in art circles and whose work is well known, is spending some time in Atlanta, and at present is doing a study of the two young sons of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Weyman. Miss Wood's pastel sketches formed one of the interesting exhibits which have been a feature of the spring at Carnegie library and were delightful examples of strong and virile drawing. Both Miss Woolley and Miss Wood have worked with Charles W. Hawthorne, one of America's greatest painters and one whose work created the keenest interest in the spring in a salon in Paris, where he spent the past winter.

OF interest to her friends as well as the readers of the New York Sun, was the story written by Mrs. Walter Howard about Napoleon Achille Murat, his home and life in Tallahassee, Fla., where Mr. Howard spent a part of the winter.

The story of the son of the great Napoleon's brother is one full of interest and romance, and Mrs. Howard's clever pen made of it a very living and vital sketch which was featured by the Sun in its edition of the 18th, illustrated by a series of photographs.

AN event of the week which will be of interest to a wide circle in Atlanta will be the marriage of Mr. Leonard Bullock to Miss Claire Noel Hammond. Mr. Kendall is the eldest son of Mrs. Leonard Kendall, who was Miss Cornelia Bullock, the only daughter of the late oGvernor Rufus Bullock, of Georgia.

Until her marriage she was one of the most popular women of Atlanta, her marriage taking her to England and later to New York.

Miss Hammond is the daughter of Dr. Graeme Monroe Hammond, one of the late Governor Rufus Bullock, of New York, and Mrs. Hammond, the wedding to be followed by a brilliant reception at their home, 60 West Fifty-fifth street, Wednesday afternoon at half-past 4 o'clock.

THE Palm room of the Georgian Terrace was on Friday night, May 23, the scene of a brilliant social event of the Agnes Scott college year.

The junior banquet is an occasion looked forward to by the student from the time she enters as a freshman until the grand gala night when she stands in all the girlish glory of chiffon and spangles and, holding high her glass of "Presbyterian punch," offers a toast to "Agnes Scott" or the revered president, who rules royally under his weight of honors at the other end of the table.

It is a time-honored custom for the junior class, who this year number twenty-five, to entertain the senior class.

Forty-five covers were laid on the long table, as, in addition to the sixteen graduates, seven members of the faculty were included among the guests.

The senior class colors, white and gold, were beautifully emphasized in the candelabra shades and in the banks of daisies that occupied the center of the table.

The souvenirs and place cards were tiny willow baskets filled with daisies, on each one of which was the name of the guest destined for a given seat.

The menu was an artistic folder with a hand-painted cover depicting the college graduate in cap and gown, holding in her hand a diploma which crowned her with the degree of bachelor of arts.

The favors, bestowed on each guest, were silver flower-pins.

The intervention between two courses was enlivened by the passing of a large daisy basket filled with mimic diplomas, tied with golden ribbon, from which dangled a bunch of daisies. The diplomas contained each a golden secret, which was eagerly read by the recipient and which added much to the merriment of the occasion.

Miss Lottie Mae Blair, of Monroe, La., as toast mistress of the evening preside dwith that sprightliness and dignity which characterizes the Agnes Scott student.

Miss Essie Roberts, of Fairburn, Ga., was the toast to the class of 1913 which was responded to by Miss Laura Mae Towers, of Birmingham.

Miss Marguerite Wells' toast to The Daisy was responded to by Miss Alice Candler, of Atlanta.

Miss Charlotte Jackson, of Tuscumbia, president of student tournament for 1914, most fittingly gave the toast to the faculty and Miss Le Gate, no less fittingly responded.

The toast to Dr. Gaines, president of Agnes Scott, was proposed by Miss Ruth Blue, of Union Springs, Ala., and was replied to by the loved president, in his happiest style.

The final toast of the evening was given by Miss Theodosia Cobbs, of Mobile, Ala., chairman of the committee of arrangements for the evening, and newly elected president of the Menemosean society; at the close of the toast the orchestra played "Agnes Scott, My Agnes Scott," words adopted to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland" and the whole assemblage then gave vent to their loyal enthusiasm and devotion to their alma mater in a burst of college songs which made the terrace ring again with notes of girlish gladness.

Miss Grace Lydia Anderson, Decatur, Ga.; Miss Olinia Ruth Bogak, Montgomery, Ala.; Miss Allie Gardner Candler, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Kate Hutchinson Clark, Montgomery, Ala.; Miss Frances Dukes, Quitman, Ga.; Miss Mary Lois Enzor, Troy, Ala.; Miss Elizabeth Frances Joiner, Hawkinsville, Ga.; Miss Janie Wood Mae Gaughey, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Mary Louise Maness, Decatur, Ga.; Miss Emma Pope Moss, Marietta, Ga.; Miss Almira Eleanor Pinkston, Greenville, Ga.; Miss Margaret Roberts, Valdosta, Ga.; Miss Lovalette Kennedy Sloan, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Florence Smith, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Helen Maud Smith, Wauchula, Fla.; Miss Laura Mae Towers, Birmingham, Ala.

A DELIGHTFUL event of the past week for the members of the very small set was heralded by the invitations received from John F. Kiser, Jr., for the party which celebrated his birthday anniversary.

The young people were entertained on the lawn, Master Kiser making an ideal host in his little white linen suit with a touch of blue on the collar and cuffs.

He was assisted in entertaining by his mother and a group or married friends, kindergarten games being a special feature of the occasion.

The "party" which translated from child lore, means ices and cakes and bonbons, was served on the lawn, small tables being arranged and beautifully decorated with flowers, the favors adding to the color as well as the interest to the young people.

The little folk entertained were Palmer Dallis, Mary Goddard, Porter and Martha Morrow, Henry Johnson, iii, Doughty Manly, Jr., George and Sarah Adair, Albert Howell, iii, Idoline Lewman, Phebe Rhett, Mary Eleanor Evins, Abner Calhoun, James Calhoun, Phinizy Calhoun, Carroll Payne Jones, Roby Robinson, Jr., Frances McKenzie, Virginia Harris, Frances and Thomas Arnold, Augustus Longstreet, James T. AN ENGAGEMENT of interest which was announced recently in the Atlanta and Chicago papers was that of Miss Ruth Huffman and Mr. George William Wright, of Anderson, Ind., the wedding to take place on June the 26th, at the home of the bride-elect's aunt, Mrs. Carrie E. Hall, in Chicago.

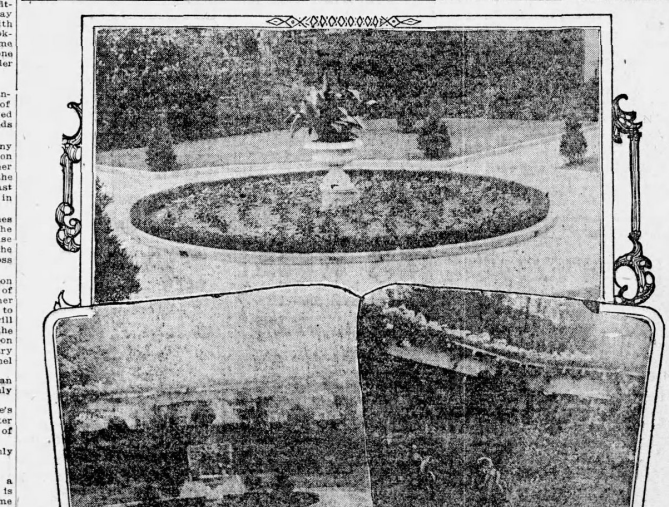
Miss Huffman and her father, the late Mr. Reuben M. Huffman spent the past few winters at their pretty bungalow at Woodbury, which was the scene of many pleasant gatherings and week-end house parties. Miss Huffman has been a frequent visitor in Atlanta as the guest of Miss Elizabeth Hines and her cousin, Mrs. Phillip Hines. Miss Hines will be maid of honor at the wedding and Mr. Richard [illegible] will be best man.

A LOVELY GARDEN



GARDEN OF MR. AND MRS. JOHN D. LITTLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Little's garden forms a delightful part in the entertainment of their friends during the warm weather, and just now is at the height of its beauty. Two sides of the garden are flanked by a pergola overrun with Dorothy Perkins rose vines covered with pink blooms. The high edge on the other side shuts out the view from the street and the wealth of flowering shrubs and other blooming plants make a [illegible] which [illegible] has a [illegible] contrast the green of foliage and vine. There are chairs and little [illegible] for [illegible] after dinner, the pergola border[illegible] lights, which show the brilliant [illegible] flowers and [illegible] gowns of the hostess and the women among the guests entertained.

LINGERE HATS

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

WOMEN have always found good reasons for wearing lingerie hats in winter as well as in summer. This season the reasons are the same, but the hats are definitely different from what they have been.

They were introduced at the early spring open sport events, near the great cities, and although made of muslin they breathe expense at every inch. It is not within the limits of every one's purse to buy such hats, but it shows that lingerie materials will be deftly arranged in connection with feathers and flowers.

It was rumored that lingerie gowns would not be in first fashion this season, and so far the rumor has proved partly true, which is a good thing to say of any rumor; but the first hot weather brought out some elaborate lingerie frocks made of batiste and Irish lace and seam beading. Within these, mind you, women wore straw and silk hats, for that is the way of women, but when the cooler weather arrived they wore coat suits of silk or matellasse with small hats of fine French embroidery shaped with wires and trimmed with nunidi feathers.

Once upon a time lingerie hats were made with wide open work embroidery and stitched net and embroidered tulle, but this season the first place is given to sheer handkerchief linen covered with the finest kind of French embroidery. It has been quite a while since this style of delicate hand work has been used on anything except underwear, and its return is a pleasure because women were wearing any kind of crude, dashing, bold work that passed in the name of embroidery.

The crown of these new hats, usually round, is made of the embroidery, done in a conventional design, and the brim is of straw, sometimes covered on top with the embroidery; round the crown goes a band of the soft spirals which are taken from the Manchurian owl and dyed black. There may be a rose added to this array of waving feathers, but an artistic designer will refrain from putting it on.

Most of the shapes are small when muslin is used as well as when straw is the basis. Here and there one sees a large lingerie hat, but it is not embroidered.

Tulle is used in puffs and short ruffles and the trimming is of ribbon and not feathers. There is a large black tulle hat which is worn with light and white gowns and has proved quite effective and fashionable despite the verdict of the millinery that no woman should wear a hat whose brim allows the light to fall through the design to her face.

When tulle and not lace is used the former is laid over the brim in small flat folds, so that the light is kept above and only a shadow is thrown on the eyes, which artists say is the most becoming kind of a hat for a woman to wear. This question of a brim over the eyes is a mooted one among milliners and artists and the women let them fight it out, although they are sufficiently interested to read whatever is said on the subject.

The discussion is too long to go into here or even take up the salient points as given by those who make fashion and those who criticise it, but one thing most critics agree; that no woman over thirty should wear a hat without a brim that shades the forehead, but the women who have to wear the hats pay not the slightest attention to this verdict. And they never have. The traditional bonnet for all women over forty has disclosed the forehead and the parted hair.

There is no doubt that the woman who has eyes that lose some of their sparkle is at her best with a hat that moderately shades them. The trouble about this is that the wide brim may not be becoming to the shape of the head or to the angle of the chin, and if she knows this she is far wiser to sacrifice her eyes to the general contour of her head.

Again We Trim Hats.

THE observer, of course, is apt to become interested in the change from one idea to another in what is suitable and artistic for women to wear. We boast that the unquiet spirit of fashion has made a trial value of the excessively simple hat with its one cleverly placed bit of trimming and its invisible fastening to the head of the straw. Even when the words are being sounded the idea changes, and women accept hats that are again loaded with trimming.

This is the condition today. The milliners do not ask more or less for their hats, whether or not they are utterly plain or loaded with ornament, so it is merely a question of taste on the part of the women, and possibly a commercial necessity on the part of the milliners. If they did not change ideas as well as shapes, women might get in the habit of wearing their old hats; then how could Suzanne and Georgette and Reboux have their villas near the races?

Well(whatever the reason, trimmed hats are trooping back into style. The numidi feathers are taking the place of the Paradise plume, and rolls of satin and silk are sold by the hundreds, the demand for ribbon has been so excessive that the supply was not equal to it, and in a few cases the mills have taken piece silk, cut it into ribbon width and put on a picot edge in order to help out department stores who are behind with orders.

The Boat-Shaped Hat.

THE definitely popular hat of the day is what is known as boat shaped, long from stem to stern and narrow across the middle. This is made of lingerie as well as the small turban and sometimes carries as its only trimming a crown band of black picot ribbon arranged in loops at the back. Again the brim and part of the crown will be of fine straw the remainder of fine lingerie edged with lace, and the top of the crown to match.

The boat shaped hat is a blessing to the woman who could not wear the round turban and the saucy page's caps that have been fashionable for three years. They had to resort to a large flat hat which was not always fashionable or becoming. Then the new hat with its long slim lines suddenly came into first fashion and the reason one has seen it everywhere is that women found in it just what they needed.

An Economy That Improves Cooking

It pays to use the best when it's a question of flavoring extract. Taste and wholesomeness are the prime things to consider in preparing fancy foods that require flavoring.

Blue Ribbon Vanilla is absolutely pure. As it is manufactured from choice vanilla beans, the flavor possesses a rare tang and smoothness that can never be duplicated in chemical flavors. On account of its purity and strength, one teaspoonful to a quart of material will be adequate to give any dessert a deliciousness that will long be remembered. The twelve distinct Blue Ribbon Flavors are all uniform in strength and purity—the best that can be made. For sale by best grocers.

You Ought to Know More About the Gibson Refrigerators Before You Buy

The ice chamber lifts out; the waste pipe and shelves are removable; and the ice chamber supports are all galvanized iron. On account of this, our refrigerators are very easily kept clean, and at the end of the season all the parts can be aired and put away for the winter. All housekeepers will appreciate a refrigerator of this kind.

In the open ice front refrigerator the ice chamber does not lift out, but the ends of the ice chamber can all be removed, so they can be cleaned behind. All other parts are removable. Price, $8.50 to $75

Aunt Sally's Advice To Beauty Seekers

Lydia says: "I've tried everything for my freckles, but can't lose them. What do you suggest?" See answer to "Stella." The treatment suggested I've never known to fail in any case of freckles or other cutaneous blemish.

P. J. K. asks: "Is there anything better than massage to remove wrinkles?" Too much massaging may aggravate a wrinkled condition, tending to soften and loosen the tissue. I advise bathing the face in an astringent lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is remarkably effective.

Stella writes: "My complexion is horribly muddy. What shall I do for it?" Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's. Apply this nightly like you'd use cold cream, washing it off mornings. This will cause the offensive cuticle gradually to make way, by a process of gentle absorption, for the clear, vel-etty, healthy-hued skin underneath.—Woman's Realm.—(Advt.)

"48-Six" Six-Passenger Torpedo—$5000

GETTING SAFETY OUT OF HEAT

WITHOUT in any way changing the composition of a piece of steel, Peerless metallurgists can double its strength simply by scientific heat treatment. In this way the steel parts of a Peerless are reduced to a minimum size and given maximum strength. Weight is eliminated without impairing the factor of safety.

The science of heat treatment reaches a higher point in the Peerless factory than in the technical schools. Every vital steel part of a Peerless is raised to its maximum efficiency by this science.

PEERLESS NEW MODELS: "38-Six," "48-Six" and "60-Six," each a car of matured detail. Long stroke motors, silent, vibrationless, ample in power, flexible in control at low speeds; irreversible steering gear; seven distinctive Peerless body types. Prices $4300 to $7300.

Education Is Practical

The well educated person is not he who has rote knowledge of books, but he who has received practical preparation for the life he is to lead.

EDUCATION is not a thing apart from everyday life, It is the study of life ---a preparation for assuming life's duties. Its true purpose "is to cherish and unfold the seed of immortality already sown within us; to develop, to their fullest extent, the capacities of every kind with which God, who made us, has endowed us."

TO the cherishing of that "seed of immortality," and to the development of latent capabilities, Brenau has bent its every effort, recognizing in the process the great need as well of fitting the student for her daily life.

ART, literature, music and oratory reach the aspirational as well as intellectual side of the girl's nature; history, languages, and related studies stimulate her mental interest; and religious influences foster her spiritual and moral nature.

WHILE training her in these ways, the college has not lost sight of her practical needs. Courses in Home Economics and business vocations offer suitable training that will fit the girl for her later duties either as a wife and mother and head of a household, or for professional and competitive life in the business world.

GYMNASIUM work, athletics, properly constructed dormitories and class rooms, and Gainesville's splendid climate contribute to the student's physical well-being and insure good health.

THE Brenau summer session, which will open June 30, offers these and other advantages which will be of special interest to the student, teacher or woman of leisure who wishes to spend a profitable as well as pleasant summer.

Regular Session opens September 11.

COX COLLEGE CLOSES WITH BRILLIANT PROGRAM

After a commencement week of much gayety and interest, Cox college is enveloped in great quiet, and the tranquility which surrounds the buildings recalls by sharp contrast the pleasant scenes of the week just past. The annual festivities were more than usually delightful this year because of the celebration of the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the college.

To commemorate the event several hundred of the alumnae of the well-known institution returned for commencement, and "the girls of other days" were the center of interest during the week.

More than 200 assembled to hear the story of Cox college's growth and development, and in turn they gave interesting reminiscences of the days of 1850 and those following. The "old girls," returning after years of absence, found an unprecedented growth in the college, and noted with pleasure the beautiful surroundings.

BEAUTIFUL SURROUNDINGS.

The big campus, with its many oaks, its flowers, shrubs and roses, was a lovely stretch of landscape. Two hundred and fifty roses, of all kinds and shades, are planted about the yards, and the recent rains had brought them into full flower. Arches veiled with ramblers roses, laden with flaming blossoms, attracted the eye immediately, and on entering the grounds one sees many heavy weighted rose bushes. Commencement began Saturday, May 17, and by that time the alumnae had begun to come in by the scores. Even the class of 1850, the first ever graduated from the college, was represented, one surviving member, Mrs. G. J. Foreacre, coming from Charlotte, N. C., to mingle with the young collegians of today. As many as three generations were represented in the assemblies during the commencement exercises.

One of the notable addresses of the week was delivered by Dr. S. R. Belk, of the Park Street Methodist church, and the baccalaureate sermon was preached by Dr. D. W. Key. Dr. Bear, president of Occidental college, San Francisco, who was in the city for the Presbyterian congress, also delivered an address.

The program Sunday night was filled with interesting features, special enthusiasm having greeted Dr. Key when he spoke to the girls and visitors.

Dr. Key commented with approval on the fact that Cox college has raised its literary curriculum by fifteen units this year, thus establishing the institution with colleges of the highest rank. The conservatory at Cox college has always ranked with the best, and the increased units in the literary courses completes the strong standing of the institution.

WELL KNOWN ALUMNAE.

The names of the alumnae who returned this year to attend commencement indicate the character of women sent out by the institution. A goodly number of them have attained wide renown in church and progressive work, many of them holding high offices.

Among those who took part in the alumnae reunion program were Mrs. G. J. Foreacre, of Charlotte and Atlanta, who was Miss Delia Nichols, represented the class of 1850 and read a paper, "College in 1850." Mrs. Louise Nichols Brown represented the class of 1851, and other alumnae contributing to the program were Miss Mary Gray, daughter of Dr. B. D. Gray, who is president of the Southern Baptist Home Mission board. Mrs. Render Terrell (Mamie Harrison), Miss Margaret Carter, her voice no sweeter than her mother's, who as Dovie Edwards, of LaGrange, was one of the leading singers in her class; Mrs. W. A. Albright (Sophie Blue), who is now vice president of the Laymen's conference of the Southern Methodist church; Mrs. Curtis Arnall North, Mrs. Lelia Jackson Dillard, who is vice president of the state W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Sallie Cox Stanton, sister of the president of the college.

TOUR OF INSPECTION.

The young collegians shared the gayeties of the week with the alumnae. They took part in the pretty events on the commencement program and in leasure hours enjoyed pleasant little farewell chats and walks on the campus, where they sang college songs and gave the college yells. In their dainty graduation frocks, they made lovely pictures as they assembled in happy groups among the roses and shrubs which beautify the campus.

They welcomed the older graduates of past years with enthusiasm and interest, and resolved themselves into a "committee of the whole" for the entertainment of the guests.

Under their guidance, the alumnae saw all the improvements and additions to the college. The elevator, which has been a prized possession of the college since its foundation, was greeted with joyful laughter, as they recalled how many steps up and down it saved them in the past.

The herd of Jersey cows, the chickens in their pretty yard, the fruit trees, gardens and above all the scuppernong arbor, were visited, and last, but not least, the handsome new pipe organ, with its 2,000 pipes, was exhibited with pride. The organ, which is very fine, was heard during commencement, its mellow tones giving evidence of its splendid construction. It has seven French pipes, which were imported from Europe for the express purpose of being used in the Cox college organ for orchestral effect. The old organ is now being used in the attractive Y. W. C. A. rooms.

The week was replete with happy incidents, and at the very last those who were through with college days gave reluctant farewells to friends and teachers.

The exercises for the week closed with a reception Tuesday evening.

Those who received diplomas and certificates are:

Quitman Social News

QUITMAN.—A number of lovely pre-nuptial affairs have been given the past week in honor of the popular young bride-elect, Miss Blanche Walker, whose marriage to Mr. Sam T. Harrell will be the social event of next week. Conspicuous among them was the elegant luncheon given last Wednesday by Mrs. J. R. Davis and Miss Nitie Mae Davis. The color scheme of white and green was effectively used in all the pretty details, and the place cards were heart-shaped with orange blossoms and wedding bells as decorations. White carnations and ferns formed the centerpiece and at each corner of the table a butterfly bow of tulle was caught with white sweet peas. The luncheon was served in six course and at its conclusion a beautiful toast to the bride was proposed by Mrs. Davis. The guests on this happy occasion were Miss Walker, Miss Maggie Batts, of Nashville; Mrs. Lewis Wade, Mrs. Walter Patrick, Miss Mattie Hunter, Miss Lizzie T. Bennet, Miss Mary Hunter, Miss Blanche Chapman, Miss Jennie Young, Miss Lizzie Philgreen, Mrs. Walter Horne, Mrs. Denmark Groover, Miss Mary Powers, Mrs. Russell Snow, Mrs. Jack Faircloth, Mrs. Paul Smith, Miss Leewood Oglesby, Mrs. Wilbur Oglesby.

Mrs. Albert Tidwell was hostess at a pretty morning party last Saturday at which Miss Blanche Walker was the honoree. Mrs. Tidwell's guests were the young matrons, each one bringing a little gift for the bride's gowaway bag.

Much cordial interest centers in the approaching marriage of Miss Blanche Walker to Mr. Sam Warrell, which will take place next Wednesday evening, May 21, at the Methodist church, Rev. L. W. Colson will perform the ceremony, and the bridal music will be played by Miss Blanche Chapman. The maid of honor will be Miss Maggie Botts, of Nashville, Tenn., a college friend; the matrons of honor will be Mrs. Lewis Wade and Mrs. Walter Patrick, the bridesmaids, Miss Mattie Hunter, Miss Lizzie T. Bennet, Miss Minnie T. Groover, and the little flower girls, Gladys McFarland, and Mildred Bennet. The best man will be Mr. Bennet Harrell, the groom's older brother, the groomsmen Mr. Walter Harrell, Mr. W. A. Walker, Mr. John Morris, Mr. Tom Marshall, of Cedartown, and Mr. Ward Wight, of Atlanta. The ushers will be Mr. L. W. Branch, Mr. W. H. Long, Mr. John Townsend, Mr. Russell Snow, Mr. J. R. Davis, Mr. Albert Tidwell.

Mrs. Lewis Wade was hostess at a delightful party Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Blanche Walker, and Miss Lizzie T. Bennet, also entertained in her honor Saturday afternoon. Both functions were thoroughly enjoyed, and were lovely compliments, attesting Miss Walker's popularity. The bridal party will be entertained next Tuesday evening after the rehearsal by Miss Minnie T. Groovers.

Miss Freddie Wade left Wednesday for Atlanta to visit Mrs. J. R. Grant.

Mrs. Russell Snow went to Gainesville, Thursday and will attend the commencement exercises at her alma mater, Brenau college.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tidwell entertained a congenial party at dinner last Thursday evening. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Branch, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Tillman, Dr. and Mrs. J. R. McMichael, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cates.

Closing Exercises of Woodberry School

The literary address of the Rev. W. W. Memminger marked the beautiful closing exercises of Miss Woodberry's school on Monday evening, when twelve graduates were given their diplomas, surrounded by a wealth of flowers, and amid all the joyous surroundings of music, friends, and tributes well earned. Mr. Memminger gave an address of splendid power and eloquence on the true sphere of woman, exquisite in imagery and polish of diction, and noteworthy for its rich sentiment and fearless frankness in meeting the problems of the new woman, where he said sympathy, intellect and judgment were factors needed in their solution, but paramount to all suffrage demands was the development of vision, the power of seeing the needs of the age and their adjustment, the willing hand and the trained mind to meet these dmands. The delicate play of humor in treating some of the foibles in woman's education, and in painting the scenes of every-day girl life as they are, gave even greater strength to his picture of the true helpful woman of the world's need.

He was followed by Bishop C. K. Nelson, who expressed his appreciation of the high scholarship and ideals of the school, and the gracious charm of the lovely young women in the class, and their unusual record of not only literary attainment, but of service in behalf of others and opportunity for growth in things spiritual, in the development of a true, noble character.

He gave an exquisite picture of the true woman of poise and helpfulness, endowed with the highest graces of physical, intellectual and spiritual beauty, and prayed that their lives might be blessed for their own higher living, and for the comfort and inspiration those about them. He closed with prayer and the benediction.

At the close of the program, a brilliant reception was held in the parlors, the graduating class receiving with Miss Rosa Woodberry. The young ladies carried pink roses, and the decorations of the parlors, as well as the stage, were in green and white, magnolias being used with beautiful effect. The spacious grounds were like fairyland in their myriads of many-colored lanterns, in which the young ladies and their friends formed a lovely picture. The undergraduates served during the evening.

Those receiving the literary diploma were Miss Amelia Carney Malone, Miss Ethelyn Lamar Coleman, Miss Clarrise Zelmo Ryan, Miss Edith Howe McCool, Miss Annie Lou Hunter, Miss Mary Ella Gibson, Miss Lottie Aline Hancock, Miss Sarah Fay Taylor, Miss Harriett Broyles. Certificates were given Misses Elliott Beattie Johnson, Nan Edith Outland, Mary McAden Myers, in English and history, and in piano to Misses Mary McAden Myers, Etta Lula Walton, and a testimonial to Miss Harriette Broyles.

Two student numbers were of unusual interest—a violin solo of remarkable technique and musical temperament—"Fantasia Appasionata," by Vientemps, played by Miss Elliott Johnson, and the valedictory essay on "Twentieth Century Heroism," a paper of strength and earnestness, read by the first honor graduate, Miss Amelia Malone.

ATHENS

ATHENS.—The largest event in the social world last week was the beautiful afternoon tea given by Mrs. Rowand Benedict on Wednesday afternoon. The house was exquisitely decorated with thousands of sweet peas, pink predominating. The candles and mints were of the same dainty color. Mrs. Benedict was handsomely gowned to receive her guests in a white lace gown, and wore a corsage of sweet peas. In line with her were Mrs. Morton Hodgson, in white charmeuse; Mrs. John R. Northcutt, in American Beauty charmeuse, combined with lace; and Mrs. John E. Talmage, wearing embroidered voile. Assisting in serving were: Misses Eleanor Lustrat and Minnie Thomas at the punch bowl, Miss Moselle Sander, Miss Martha Phinizy, Miss Leila May Hall, Miss Luelle Brand, Miss Julia Brand, Miss Rosa Smith, Miss Julia Benedict. Mrs. Ara Hart Avery poured tea. She was beautifully gowned in yellow crepe de chine. About two hundred guests called between the hours of 5 and 7.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Scudder entertained delightfully last week at a beautiful supper, in honor of the members of the Union Seminary quartet, who were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rowland. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Scudder was beautifully decorated with quantities of flowers. Roses, sweet peas and mountain laurel were used in all the rooms except the dining room, which was lovely with ferns and white daisies. The supper was served in five courses, and the yellow and white motif was carried out in the ices and cakes. Fourteen guests were invited for the occasion, and after supper an hour of music was enjoyed in the living room.

Another pretty dinner party of last week was the one given by Prof. and Mrs. F. A. Merrell, at their home on Cobb street. The guests were seated at a beautifully appointed table, having for a centerpiece a plateau of pink sweet peas. The place cards were hand-painted scenes, the work of the host, who is quite an artist. The pretty color scheme of pink and white was carried out in all the details. After dinner the guests smoked and discussed various topics on education in the living room, where red roses were used for decoration. Those who enjoyed Prof. Merrill's hospitality were: President Jere M. Pound, of the State Normal school; Dean Alexander Rhodes, Dean Charles A. Snelling, of the University of Georgia; Judge A. J. Cobb and Col. T. J. Shackelford.

One of the prettiest and most enjoyable dances of the season was recently given by the Italic club, of the University of Georgia. The young men proved themselves royal hosts, and entertained with a cordial hospitality. Among those dancing were Misses Lydia Griffith, Jennie Arnold, Louise Barsey, Josephine Wilkins, Florence Hooper, Marion Nicholson, Sarah Mell, Martha Phinizy, Janie Mae Webb, Neal Cochran, Fannie Neal Anderson, Marion and Ruth Hodgson, Lil Hodgson, India Barnett, Helen Lacy, Edith Branson, Eugenia Ivey.

Miss Lalage Darwin, who is being so charmingly entertained in Baltimore, is cruising this week with Mr. and Mrs. Thompson. She leaves in a few days for Washington, to visit Congressman and Mrs. E. Y. Webb.

Among the Athens people who went over to Atlanta last week for the Presbyterian assembly, were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hodgson, Mrs. George Dudley Thomas, Mr. Charles A. Rowland, Mrs. George C. Thomas.

The many friends of Mr. Roy Strickland, are glad to welcome him back to Athens. He will make his home here and will be associated with his father, Judge J. J. Strickland.

Miss India Barnett is one of the attractive visitors in Atlanta for chautauqua week. She is the guest of Mrs. Edwin Sterne.

Misses Louise Kytle, Neal Cochran, Carrie Williford, Zena and Frances Talmadge left Wednesday for Covington to attend Miss Annabel Robinson's house party.

Miss Susie Hatcher and Leonora Golden, of Columbus, are guests at the Lucy Cobb for commencement. Miss Ludwika Levin, of Beverly, N. J., is also expected to be present for the commence gaieties.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Talmadge left Saturday for Chattanooga to spend several weeks.

Col. and Mrs. C. M. Snellings and young sons are spending several days at Mountain City, where they are building a summer home.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Edith Jackson to Mr. Bishop Alexander, Jr., of Augusta, is of much interest to the Athens friends of the bride. Miss Jackson was one of the most popular girls at Lucy Cobb last year, and since her graduation has been an attractive visitor here on several occasions.

Governor and Mrs. Joseph M. Brown were among the visitors at Lucy Cobb commencement, having come over to see their daughter, Miss Cora McCord Brown, graduate.

The following program promises a brilliant closing of a successful year of Lucy Cobb Institute, a year full of splendid work, and a record attendance. Friday evening, under the able direction of Miss Carolyn Cobb, the oratory department gave a splendid presentation of Percy MacKaye's "Jeanne D'Arc," with Miss Helen Baxter in the title role. Saturday morning the Alumnae association held a successful meeting in alumnae hall. Saturday evening there was the annual concert. Sunday morning Dr. Hugh Walker, of the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta, preached the baccalaureate sermon; Monday afternoon, at 6 o'clock, Rev. W. W. Memminger, of Atlanta, will address the graduating class, and Monday evening will be the annual reception, always one of the most brilliant events of the spring months.

Mrs. Billups Phinizy is in Norfolk, Va., the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Hammond Johnson.

Prof. J. C. Wardlaw, of the S. N. S. will conduct a congenial group on a beautiful and comprehensive tour of Europe this summer. The party will sail from Boston by the White Star line steamship "Cymria" on June 17, and will tour Ireland, Scotland, England, Belgium, Holland, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy, returning by the Mediterranean sea and Gibraltar to New York on the Cunard liner "Ivernia," August 26. Those composing the party for this delightful summer trip are Prof. J. C. Wardlaw, Miss Sarah Webb, Miss Elizabeth Young, Miss Agnes Goss, Miss Daisy Putten, Miss Maud Smith, Miss Josephine Allen, Mr. John D. Wade, Jr., and Mrs. Wade, of Marshallsville, and several others.

Lucy Cobb Institute

ATHENS.—Misses Gerdine and Brumby have isued invitations to the annual reception which will be on Monday evening, the 26th of May.

Tuesday evening at 8:30 a very delightful concert was given by the Lucy Cobb chorus under the direction of Miss Lucy Logan Desha with Miss Elizabeth Lord as accompanist. A large and appreciative audience greeted the splendid work of the chorus. The program was as follows:

Overture to "Euryanthe," Weber—Miss Frederika Beatty. Miss Ruth Jackson, Miss Julia Orr, Miss Louise Daniel.

(a) "I Would That My Love," (b) "O Wert Thou In the Cauld Blast." Mendelssohn.

Aria from "Faust," Gounod—Miss Lucile Peacock.

Trios, "I've Been Roaming," "The Year at Spring," Marshal-Loepke—Miss Cora Brown, Miss Mildred Fortson, Miss Ruth Reid.

(a) Gavotte from "Mignon," (b) "Pilgrim's Chorus from Tannhauser," Wagner—Miss Frederika Beatty, Miss Julia Orr.

The pupils of Miss Lucile Peacock gave a charming twilight recital at the Seney-Stovall chapel last Thursday at 6 o'clock. Miss Peacock's class includes a number of the youngest artists and their selections were most enthusiastically received. Those on the program were Miss Lucy Harrington, Miss Dorothy Hodgson, Miss Sammy Rader, Miss Katherine Fulghum and Miss Dorothy Haselton.

Rev. Troy Beatty made an inspiring lecture last Sunday evening at the regular meeting of the Y. W. C. A. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Miss Ruth Reid, of Atlanta, president; Miss Mildred Bobb, of New Orleans, and Miss Louise Walker, of Monroe, members of the cabinet.

Miss Leonora Golden and Miss Susie Hatcher, of Columbus, arrived Friday to be guests at Lucy Cobb during the coming commencement. Both are former Lucy Cobb girls and their stay is a source of great pleasure to their friends.

Miss Louise Walker was called to Macon last week on account of the desperate illness of her brother, Mr. B. S. Walker.

Miss Myrtis McKenzie, of Augusta, arrived Wednesday to spend commencement at Lucy Cobb. As a former Lucy Cobb girls she is being cordially welcomed back.

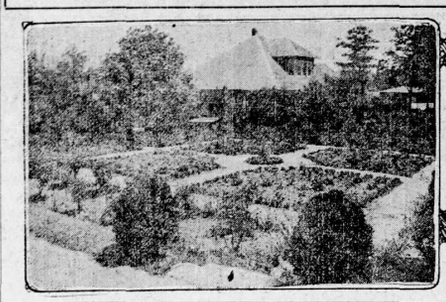
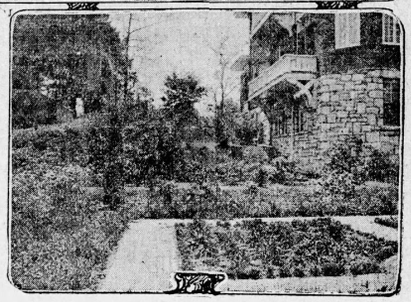
A GARDEN FILLED WITH MAY BLOOMS





The pictures show three attractive views of the lovely garden at the rear of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Willet's home on Peachtree road. The formal plan of the flower beds has been admirably carried out, and since the early spring the yard has been filled with a wealth of brilliant blossoms set about with evergreens and strips of velvety sward.

Monroe Social News

MONROE.—Miss Mary Edwards is visiting Mrs. W. H. Field in Cartersville.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Nunnally entertained a number of Monroe young people at a delightful spent-the-day party last Sunday at their home near Bostwick.

Mrs. P. U. Briscoe entertained a number of friends on last Wednesday.

Miss Beulah Pirkle entertained most charmingly last week, the honor guest being Miss Gladys Lee, of Covington. The home of Mrs. Pirkle was very attractive on this occasion, quantities of sweet peas being with charming effect, used in the decorations. During the evening dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. Boykin Robinson visited Monroe last week.

Mrs. Hamp Hughes has returned from a pleasant visit to relatives in Greene county.

Prof. and Mrs. Eugene Baker have returned from a short visit to Athens.

Mrs. Jamie Van Horne and daughter, Newell, are on a visit to friends and relatives at Bishop.

Miss Hassie Breedlove attended the commencement exercises at Mansfield last week.

Mrs. Earnest Camp entertained the Athenaeum club in a charming manner last Wednesday afternoon. The living room where the meeting was held, was rendered more attractive with quantities of sweet peas and roses.

The program for the afternoon was an unusually interesting one. "Famous Women" was the roll call for the afternoon. Miss Lula Gelman had charge of the lesson, the subject being "The Women of Norway and Sweden." Mrs. J. O. Lawrence read a very interesting paper on "The Seminaries of the North." Several visitors added to the pleasure of the afternoon. After the program an elegant luncheon was served. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of the president, Miss Lula Gelman.

A most delightful meeting of the Merry Matron club was held Friday afternoon with Mrs. Arthur Mobley as hotess. The dining room and living room of Mrs. Mobley's attractive bungalow were thrown together and attractively decorated with lovely roses and sweet peas. As the guests arrived punch was served by Miss Julia Mobley. After several games of 500, dainty refreshments were served.

Miss Hassie Breedlove gave a party Saturday night at the home of her parents, near Moultrie, in honor of her guest, Miss Lorine Collins, of Douglasville. About forty-five young people were present.

"In the Spring a Young Man's Fancy Lightly Turns to Thoughts of Love"

YOUNG LADY, when you hie forth in the moonlit evening hours to keep your tryst with that young man you will want to be looking your best—he will expect it. "Looking your best" does not necessarily mean wearing your most elaborate frock. Your dress may be simple, but if you have given proper care to the details, and more particularly to your hair, you need not be afraid. Unkempt, untidy hair will ruin the effect of a spic and span toilette quicker than anything else.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

For the Merchant Who Doesn't Advertise

In these days of higher efficiency in the management of affairs, where do you stand, Mr. Merchant?

WE invite you to become an advertiser in THE JOURNAL; to join, if you have not already done so, the progressive merchants of Atlanta who have something of merit to sell, and something of interest to say about it.

Many a tale is yet untold about your store or your business, which, if placed before JOURNAL readers, would rejuvenate your whole establishment.

The game is out in the open today.

The livest merchants and manufacturers tell the public of the merit and superiority of their wares.

The most successful enterprises in this city are so constantly before the public in the columns of THE JOURNAL that when one thinks of the many articles of daily trade his mind turns instantly to one of the stores or one of the particular makes whose advertisements are set forth in these pages.

NEWNAN

NEWNAN.—Mrs. W. C. Wright and Miss Lucile Arnold entertained at dominoes on Friday afternoon of last week, the party being a beautiful compliment to Miss Lizabel Farmer, a bride-elect of next month. The house was decorated with vari-colored flowers. In the dining room vases and jardinieres filled with crimson rambler roses formed a most effective decorative scheme and these same rare flowers combined with potted plants, were used on the spacious porches where the tables were placed. The score cards were appropriately decorated with a bride and groom and in the ices and cakes served after the game red was the color emphasized. The trophies for the afternoon, a dainty boudoir cap and a hand-painted laundry list, were won by Mrs. R. O. Jones and Miss Ione Will Redwine. Miss Farmer was given a hand embroidered pin cushion as guest prize. Sixty guests were included among those invited. Mrs. Will Cargill, of Corinth, and Mrs. Roy Arnold, of Gadsden, being the out-of-town guests present.

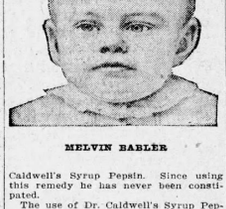
Growing Children Need Good Bowels

Give a Mild Laxative Occasionally to Insure Regular Bowel Action

As a child grows older it rqquires more and more personal attention from the mother, and as the functions of the bowels are of the utmost importance to health great attention should be paid to them.

Diet is of great importance, and the mother should watch the effect of certain foods. A food will constipate one and not another, and so we have a healthy food like eggs causing biliousness to thousands, and a wholesome fruit like bananas constipating many. It is also to be considered that the child is growing, and great changes are taking place in the young man or young woman. The system has not yet settled itself to its later routine.

A very valuable remedy at this stage, and one which every growing boy and girl should be given often or occasionally according to the individual circumstances, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a laxative and tonic combined, so mild that it is given to little babies, and yet equally effective in the most robust constitution. At the first sign of a tendency to constipation give a small dose of Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and prompt action will follow in the morning. It not only acts on the stomach and bowels but its tonic properties build up and strengthen the system generally. Mrs. Henry Babler, Van Dyne, Wis., writes that her little son, Melvin Babler, was constipated most of the time until she gave him Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Since using this remedy he has never been constipated.



MELVIN BABLER

The use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will teach you to avoid cathartics, salts and pills, as they are too harsh for the majority and their effect is only temporary. Syrup Pepsin brings permanent results, and it can be conveniently obtained of any nearby druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

"The Kayser" SILK Glove

The name "KAYSER" stamped in the hem of a Silk Glove, is assurance of quality and reliability.

The generally acknowledged supremacy of the "KAYSER" Silk Glove is not the work of a day or a year, but the cumulative result of many years leadership, which has compelled recognition and attempted emulation on the part of others in the same field.

The Genuine "KAYSER" Gloves "cost no more" than the "ordinary kind," that are represented as being "just as good."

Imagine what would happen if the dealer offered you your change in money branded "Our Own Make" and represented "just as good" as Uncle Sam's—would you take it without Uncle Sam's endorsement?

To secure Silk Glove value is merely a matter of insisting on this endorsement—the name "KAYSER" in the hem.

ATLANTIC BEACH HOTEL

FORMERLY

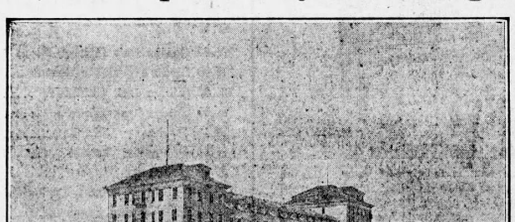
THE CONTINENTAL

¶ Will open for the Season of 1913 on Saturday, May 31, under the management of MR. HENRY M. STANFORD, for the past two years manager of the famous Tampa Bay Hotel

THE Atlantic Beach Hotel is to be operated continuously from this opening, and not merely for a brief summer season. It will be run on the American and European plans. The rates will be moderate and will not be advanced over those of previous seasons, while the service will be vastly superior in every respect.

Mr. Stanford has assembled an operating staff such as has never before been gathered for the comfort of hotel guests and patrons in the South.

Ferdinand Grand, formerly of Martin's, Twenty-sixth street and Broadway, New York City, and for four years chief steward at the Windsor, Montreal, will fill a similar position at the Atlantic Beach.



The following schedule of rates will be inforce:

AMERICAN PLAN.

One person in a room, $21 a week and upward.

Two persons in a room, $35 a week and upward.

EUROPEAN PLAN.

One dollar a day and upward, without bath.

Two dollars a day and upward, with bath.

A special week-end rate will be made, including dinner Saturday evening and breakfast Monday, FIVE DOLLARS.

Joseph Olivetto, formerly chef at the Rudolph and the Shelbourne, Atlantic City, will be in charge of the culinary department. He will be assisted by Albert Corvi, Martin's famous fish cook; Ulysses Martos, pastry cook at the Waldorf-Astoria and Francisco Vinny, baker from the Boulongerie de Paris, Boston, and later of the Plaza, New York.

James Demorest, of New York, will be in charge of the buffet and cafe.

An orchestra of fourteen pieces will give concerts morning, afternoon and evening. Special music for dancing Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

The Atlantic Beach Hotel is without a rival as a resort hotel. Its location on the finest beach in the world, with unequalled facilities for surf bathing, for automobiling, with a menu unsurpassed and unattempted before, with the cooling breezes straight from the ocean and every attraction of climate and surroundings, will make this the social resort of the South.

It is advised that reservations shall be made immediately by wire or long distance telephone, as the large number of applications already on file indicate that the capacity of the hotel will be taxed from the opening day.

Of Interest to Georgia Baptist Women

From the report of the treasurer, Mrs. W. C. Lowndes, of the Woman's Missionary Union auxiliary to the Southern Baptist convention recently held in St. Louis, Mo., she reports "from April 20, 1912, to April 30, 1913, as reported by state treasurers, we find that Georgia led in cash contributions by $1,-290.67, the amount contributed being $47,426.80. Virginia, the next largest giving $46,136.13.

"Totals from all states amounted to $306,136."

Officers Elected

The Twentieth Century Coterie held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. T. L. Lewis, electing officers for the new year as follows:

President, Mrs. W. H. Emerson; vice-president, Mrs. William Upshaw; secretaries, Mrs. McCallie and Miss Melson; treasurer, Mrs. W. M. Goney; custodian, Mrs. Eugene Booth.

Society

Interesting Club Meeting

Wednesday afternoon the Woman's club of College Park closed the best year of its history, as one of the older clubs of the state. Previously a limited membership, this year the doors were thrown open, and the club became a real woman's club in its best sense. Eighty-two women were enrolled and many lines of club work, local and federated, have been undertaken.

That the work has been most successful was evidenced by the yearly reports of the different chairmen read on Wednesday afternoon. Education, under Mrs. B. D. Gray, shows that beside caring for a scholarship girl in Cox college, much else has been done for education. Mrs. W. E. Whitehead, who has had charge of "Current Events" for the year, has, with her able committee, kept the club delightfully abreast with the times. Perhaps the most definite work was done by Mrs. Bayward Willingham, in charge of the welfare work, as this work is largely local in its character.

As each department of work has had charge of at least one program during the year, College Park has had the best in the given lines of work.

Mrs. Daniel Lyle, who retires only by reason of the time limit of office, received the warmest expressions of esteem, the expression of the club's feelings being extended by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, the incoming president, and from the floor by Mrs. B. W. Morton, who led the chatauqua salute.

The following officers were elected for the year 1913-14: President, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson; first vice president, Mrs. Daniel Lyle; second vice president, Mrs. V. C. Mason; recording secretary, Miss Sally Kate Broom; corresponding secretary, Miss Annie Thornton; treasurer, Mrs. Eva L. Thornton; auditor, Mrs. W. W. Reid.

Recital

Students of the Atlanta conservatory, from the piano class of Mrs. Lottie Gray Browne, assisted by a pupil from the department of expression and one from the violin department, entertained most delightfully a large and very appreciative audience at Cable hall Friday evening.

The program was rendered by some who made their first public appearance and others well advanced in their musical education, but the same careful training was very prominent in each and every pupil who appeared, and the audience voiced their hearty approval in repeated applause.

The following took part in the entertainment:

First recital, Friday, May 23, at 8:15 p. m.

Vesper Club Dance

The Vesper club gave a dance Friday evening which was enjoyed by members and friends.

The members present were Mr. R. H. Atkinson, Mr. A. W. Lloyd, Mr. E. M. Stephens, Mr. C. Trotti, Mr. E. Trotti, Mr. H. L. Withers, Mr. J. H. Kelly, Mr. F. S. McGaughey and Mr. L. D. Acker.

Among those invited were Miss Louise Mell, Miss Doherty, Miss Alli Hamner, Miss Lucile Bean, Miss Ruby McGaughey, Miss K. Perry, Miss Ethel Hudson, Miss Virginia Bowman, Miss Margaret Bramlett, Miss Mary Anderson, Miss Maude Lewis, Miss Montile Alman, Mr. Clarence Hill, Mr. R. H. White, Jr., Mr. L. P. Dalhouse, Mr. Mercer Lee, Mr. Earnest Allen, Mr. Horrie O. Andrews, Mr. Richard B. Greene, Mr. Lonnie Stroble, Mr. Donald Aitchison, Mr. J. C. Baldwin, Jr., Mr. A. C. Lampkin, Mr. C. E. Beem, Mr. Paul Turner, Mr. C. A. Trussell, Mr. A. Lovingood, Mr. P. B. Robinson and Mr. L. S. Elkin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Christisen and Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Brooks were the chaperons.

Another dance will be given Friday, June 6.

Miss Clyburn Entertains

Miss Maymie Clyburn entertained most delightfully last week at her home in West End Park in honor of Miss Alice Smith and Miss Frances Crane.

An interesting contest was enjoyed the prizes being won by Miss Willie Richardson and Mr. Ivey.

Several beautiful solos were rendered by Miss Clyburn.

Mrs. McGrath's Luncheon

An affair of last Thursday afternoon was a luncheon given by Mrs. W. R. McGrath at her home on Luckie street to the G. T. club.

The table was prettily decorated with Killarney roses and the ices and mints were pink and white.

In the club contest Mrs. William Van Houten won first prize, a Swiss fan, and Mrs. A. U. Sharp received a hand-painted salad bowl.

Mrs. Rice's Reception

The reception given to the Woman's Pioneer society at the home of Mrs. Frank Rice on Wednesday, May 21, was a beautiful occasion. It was much enjoyed by the members and other guests.

The decorations were attractively arranged, many vases of sweet peas and red roses being used. Each member and guest was presented with a large heart leaf, contributed for the occasion by Mrs. J. N. Bateman. The unique decoration was a thoughtful suggestion of Mrs. William Jennings who is ill in New York and could not be present.

The granddaughters of Mrs. Rice, Miss Annie Rice, Miss Mary Rice and Miss Georgia Rice assisted in entertaining.

Among the belles and beauties of fifty years ago, are some accomplished musicians and the sweet old time music and songs added to the pleasure of the occasion.

Mrs. Osborne's Bridge Party

Mrs. D. B. Osborne entetrained at a bridge party Friday afternoon at her home on Piedmont avenue in compliment to Mrs. George Kent Varden and Mrs. Edward King.

Ferns and pink roses formed the decoration of the rooms where the card tables were placed and the same lovely flowers adorned the dining room where luncheon was served at the close of the game.

The prize for top score was silk stockings and was won by Mrs. Walter Barnwell. Mrs. King received a gold hat pin as a souvenir of the occasion and Mrs. Varden was presented a luncheon set in drawn work.

Mrs. Osborne's guests included thirty friends.

Cable Concert Hall

Miss Jennie Tutt will on Friday evening, May 30, give her annual pupils' recital at the Cable concert hall.

Whist Party

Miss Viola Waldrep entertained at whist Saturday evening. Pink roses decorated the house. First prizes were won by Miss Florence Torian and Mr. Edwin Stanford.

After the games music was rendered by Miss Lillian Hays and refreshments were served.

The guests were: Mrs. W. N. Harkins, Mrs. J. C. Chambers, Miss Florence Torian, Miss Viola Waldrep, Miss Lillian Hays, Miss Aline Torine, Mr. Dan Moody, Mr. Edwin Stanford, Mr. Eugene Emerson, Mr. Laurie Waldrep, Mr. Forest Hays and Mr. J. M. Waldrep.

Mrs. Simmons Entertains

The Modern Priscilla Sewing club and other guests were entertained by Mrs. J. J. Simmons on Thursday afternoon. Pink and white were the colors used in the decorations. Ices and cakes which were served were also in pink and white.

Punch was served throughout the afternoon by Miss Fannie Cowan.

Piano music by Miss Pearl Simmons, Miss Mabel Hall and Miss Fannie Cowan contributed to the entertainment of the guests.

The guests were Mrs. Oscar Harrison, Mrs. R. J. Ingram, Mrs. W. O. Miller, of Big Springs, Tex., Mrs. Annie Cowan, Miss Mabel Hall, of Breckenridge, Mo., Miss Pearl Lacy, Miss Ola Polk, Miss Fannie Cowan, Miss Pearl Simmons. The club members in attendance were: Mrs. W. E. Armistead, Mrs. T. N. Abernathy, Mrs. W. C. Beddingfield, Mrs. C. W. Arnold, Mrs. J. A. Sewell, Mrs. A. H. Adams, Mrs. W. H. Burgess, Mrs. L. H. Fairman, Mrs. Gussie Polk, Mrs. J. G. Hale, Mrs. J. J. Simmons.

The next club meeting will be with Mrs. J. A. Sewell at her home, 110 Grant street, on Thursday, May 29.

Blow to Heart Killed McCarty In First Round

Arthur Pelky Knocked Out Champion Within Minute After Match Started, and He Died Eight Minutes Later

CALGARY, Alberta, May 24.—Within two minutes from the start of the scheduled ten-round fight for the white heavyweight honors, Luther McCarty took the count of ten, knocked out by Arthur Pelkey's terrific drive just below the heart, and eight minutes later died from heart failure, superinduced by the blow. Late today a squad of Northwest mounted police left this city for the Burns arena, five miles from here, with instructions from Magistrate Crispin to arrest every one connected with the fight.

The several thousand spectators, attracted by the prospects of seeing McCarty in the hardest fight of his pugilistic career, hardly had settled down in their seats after the demonstration given the two fighters, when they appeared in the ring at 12:45, before they were dazed by the unexpectedness of seeing McCarty, undefeated since his first great ring victory one year ago over Carl Morris, taking the count from referee Ed Smith, of Chicago. Wild plaudits for Pelky died down when McCarty failed to rise after the awarding of the decision to Pelkey and when doctors darted through the ropes to the side of McCarty, the crowd surged down around the ring. McCarty was carried from the ring and died without regaining consciousness.

ENTERED THE RING.

McCarty and Pelkey entered the ring at 12:45 p. m. (mountain time), and were cheered vociferously by the thousands of spectators. For twenty minutes they were the targets of admiring shouts from their many followers, the fight not being called until 1:05 p. m.

While McCarty seemed the general favorite, Pelkey was not without his backers, who staunchly declared that "a surprise was in store" for McCarty.

Referee Ed Smith, of Chicago, made the preliminary announcement and amid cheers of encouragement from their respective followers, McCarty, trained to 200 pounds, and Pelkey, outweighing him by ten pounds, shook hands for the fight that was destined to be McCarty's last.

At the outset neither showed any disposition to close. McCarty started the actual mixing with a wild swing at Pelkey's head, which missed him by several inches.

They clinched, and on the breakaway Pelkey got in the first blow, an uppercut to McCarty's jaw. McCarty followed with a swinging right that just missed Pelkey's ear, and followed this attempt with a hard blow to his heavier opponent's mouth.

It was after this stinging attack that Pelkey, feigning to uncover McCarty's guard, planted a driving blow just under McCarty's heart. The impact sent McCarty reeling to the ropes. Not a sound issued from the stricken heavyweight as he slowly sank to the canvas, and was counted out by Referee Smith.

McCarty Was Powerful Young at the Game

Luther McCarty was born at Lincoln, Neb., on March 17, 1892. His father was an Indian half breed and his mother of Irish extraction. Standing a trifle over six feet three inches he was physically powerful yet a comparatively weak hitter. His best blow was a right uppercut which he used almost continually in clinches.

He first sprang into the ring prominence when he defeated Carl Morris at Springfield, on May 3, 1912. McCarty was immediately hailed as a real "white hope" but failed to live up to the reputation. His best battle was with Al Palzer at Los Angeles last new year's day, when he defeated the conqueror of Bombardier Wells in eighteen rounds. His last fight, previous to the fatal battle of today, was a ten round victory over Frank Moran, at New York, on April 30.

Arthur Pelkey is one of the new crop of heavyweights. He hails from Chicopee Falls, Mass., and is a powerful six footer who fights at about 200 pounds. While not a clever boxer he has a terrific punch. He has fought a number of bouts throughout the east usually meeting third raters with rather indifferent results. His two bouts of importance were against Jess Willard, at New York, last July, and Tommy Burns, at Calgary, several weeks ago.

Burns, former heavyweight champion, announced a heavyweight elimination tournament to be staged at his club at Calgary and as the opening attraction billed a bout between Pelkey and himself. The contest was declared a draw at the end of ten rounds and Burns immediately matched Pelkey against McCarty, the winner to meet "Gunboat" Smith.

The death of McCarty adds another fatality to a long list of fighters killed in prize ring battles.

NEVER AGAIN CONSCIOUS

Bob Fitzsimmons knocked out Con Bearden in an exhibition bout at Syracuse, N. Y., some years ago and Bearden never recovered consciousness.

Owen Moran, the English lightweight, killed Thomas McCarthy with a blow in a bout at San Francisco in 1910. Other deaths in San Francisco include Harry Tonney, who died after a clash with Frankie Neil in 1906; Jimmy Franey who died from the result of the blows of Jimmy O'Connell in 1908, "Ginger" Williams, who was a victim of "Kid" Kenmith's punch ten years later.

Another boxer of prominence who died later a ring battle was Billy Vernon. Vernon collapsed in a Philadelphia bout in the early nineties and died the next day in a hospital.

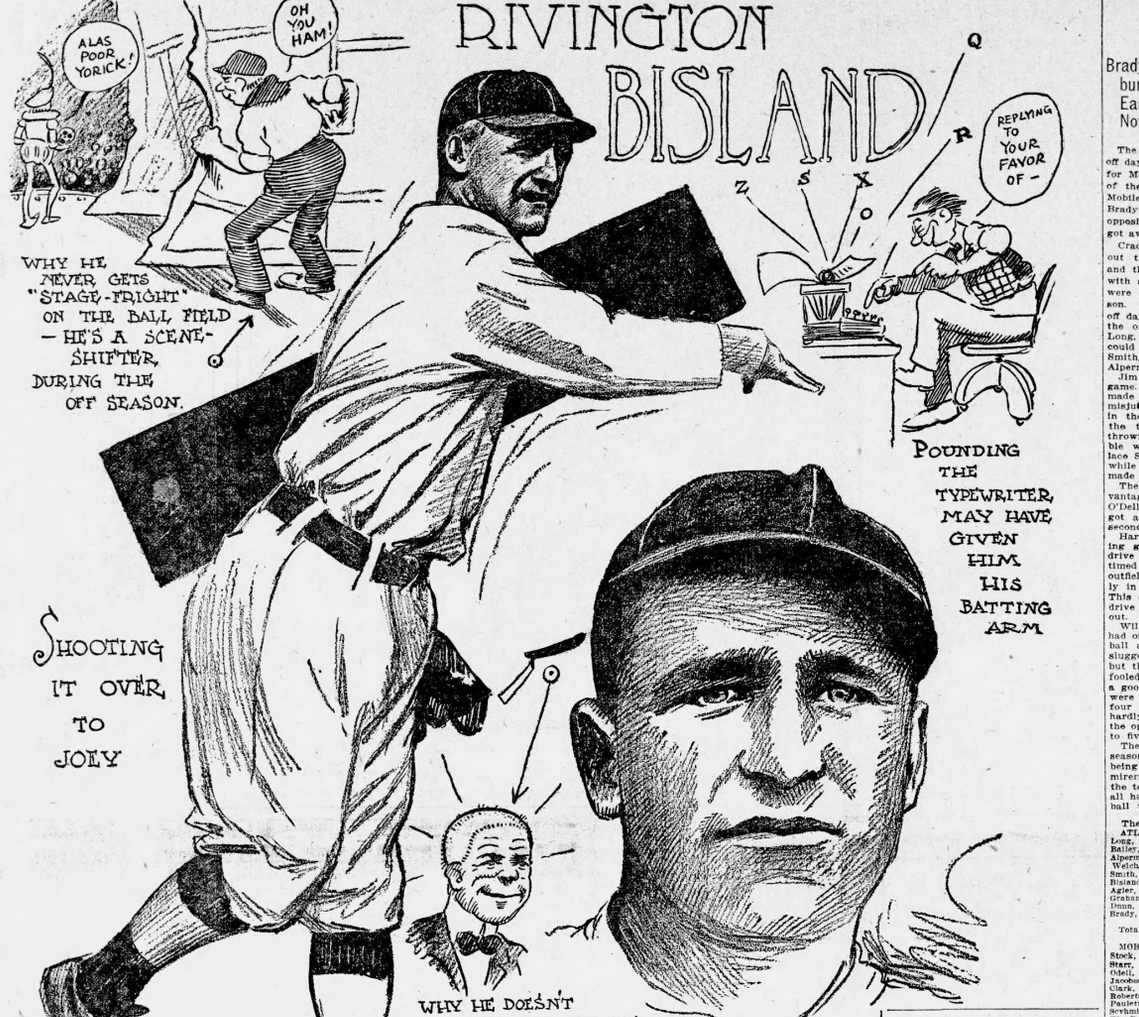
Walter Croot, an English bantamweight died as the result of blows delivered by Jimmy Barry, the American champion, in a bout in London, on December 6, 1897.

Recent deaths include those of "Joe" Ketchell, who died after a bout with "Billy" Walters, at Waukegan, Ills., in 1912, and a French pugilist named Pelli, who collapsed in a Paris ring during a bout with an English boxer, fighting under the name of Evenden.

Joplin Man Wins Bet

In a veteran Studebaker car that had been driven more than 60,000 miles, E. B. Hopper made a privately conducted reliability run from his home in Joplin, Mo., to Detroit and is now on his way back. The trip won a big wager for Mr. Hopper, as the car required neither repairs nor adjustment between Joplin and Detroit. Three observers were carried, one of whom was the stakeholder.

NEW SHORTSTOP WHO IS PROVING GOOD AT BOTH HITTING AND FIELDING



Shaved Head Big Help In Making Brains Work

BY JULIAN MURPHEY.

"When your head is shavel you think better," said Rivington Bisland, Atlanta's new shortstop, in explaining just why he had the barber use a razor on his head. Also from the manner in which Bisland always pulls the correct play you would believe there is something to this piece of info.

Just from what work Bisland has turned out since he joined the Atlanta club he looks to be the best shortstop the Cracker team has had in some six or eight years. There have been those who could outfield him and possibly those who can hit just as well, but for the happy combination no one has yet played around the Cracker shortfield who had it on the boy from New York.

A typical New Yorker is Bisland. He has that brogue which you notice in the upstate chaps. He was born and raised in New York and right there learned to play ball by captaining a team of theatrical stars. He always did love the spotlight, often working the sparkler from back of some New York stage, and naturally he took to baseball like a duck to water, the big crowds never getting on his nerves in the least. For hundreds of nights he had stood back of the stage settings and watched the big guns do their Romeo and Juliet stunt and always shifted the scenes at the proper moment and when he got on the ball field it came natural for him to keep on the move all the while.

Bisland attributes his quickness in getting rid of a ground ball to the quick thinking and quick moving required of him while he was back of the stage. You can easily notice how spry he is around the bag on a ball hit to either side. He grabs with one or both hands and promptlyshoots to first with an easy movement.

Bisland began his baseball career in 1909 with the Pittsville, Pa., outlaw league club. This league soon went up in smoke and Bisland went to Wheeling, in the Central league. He was with Wheeling in 1910 and Springfield in 1911 and 1912, being taken up by Pittsburg, which club turned him over to Atlanta. The Pirates are sure he is to be a mighty good man and now have strings attached.

Bisland is more than pleased with Atlanta and is playing jam-up ball. He likes the fans and the players and can see nothing but a high finish for the Atlanta crew.

GULL TEAM IS STRONG; SURE TO KEEP IN RACE

Finn Has Good Hurlers, Hard Hitters and Crack Base Runners

BY JULIAN MURPHEY.

It has been claimed in many cities around the circuit that the Mobile club is leading the league because of the many good breaks it has received in the old luck column. This looks to be a big injustice to the Finn tribe, the team appearing to be mighty good in all departments of play.

Mike Finn's team is now leading the league because he has a versatile bunch of ball players. He has good stickers, good hurlers, crack base hunners and men which have a lot of baseball sense and are in there to work and not stall. Then, too, Mike is a wise old leader, and has his men continually pulling something new.

Just take a look at the Finn hurlers. He has Billy Campbell, Wilbur Robertson, Bradley Hogg, Pug Cavet and Heinie Berger. Cavet, Campbell and Berger have been in this league long enough to learn its ways and they are good for a crack game just any old time. Bradley Hogg, though young at the game, looks like a great find. He has everything a good hurler should have and does not mind taking instructions.

Along with the Gulls you find Dave Robertson, that sensational college youngster who is working in right field. This lad is the league's leading hitter with an average of .420, tops the bunch in stolen bases with 17, is best at pass hitting with a total of 83 bags and with six homers stands first in this department of play.

Base stealing is another strong point with the Mobile players. Robertson, Starr and Stock are the three leaders in this department of play. Tommy Long leads the league with the greatest number of hits but Robertson is next in line.

A glance at the percentage tables will show that Mobile has the leading hitter, leading home run hitter, leading base stealers and the leading slugger. This is enough to keep them right at the top and when you glance at the records possessed by Mike Finn's flingers you find added reason why the team is at the top. And while Mike may not win the flag you can depend upon him finishing high in the race, for he has the kind of team that gets results.

COBB BOOSTS HIS AVERAGE

When Ty Cobb rapped out three hits in four trips to the pan in Saturday's game with St. Louis he gave his batting average a decided boost, his mark now being .532. His hits Saturday were all of the clean-cut variety, going for extra base hits.

Here is Cobb's record to date:

G.	AB.	R.	H.	SB.	BA.

Dartmouth Winenr

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 24.—So overwhelmingly was Dartmouth's victory in the New England intercollegiate track and field championship today that interest lay only in the struggle for second place, which went to Brown and in individual performances. Captain Norman S. Tabar, of Brown, did the mile in 4 minutes, 13 3-5 seconds. The old association time was 4 minutes, 24 2-5 seconds. In the half mile Taber breasted the tape in 1 minute, 55 3-5 seconds, two seconds better than the old time.

TRAVERS AGAIN WINNER

NEW YORK, May 24.—For the fifth time in his golfing career Jerome D. Travers, of Upper Montclair, N. J., won the Metropolitan amateur championship title by defeating August F. Kammer, the Staten Island champion, at the Fox Hills Golf club today. As a member of the Upper Montclair Golf club he has won three times and the championship trophy, a bronze panel presented by Daniel Chauncey, becomes the permanent property of the Upper Montclair club. From the outset of this year's tourney Travers, who also holds the national title, displayed such wonderful accuracy that the result was a foregone conclusion. During the week he established a new amateur record of 70 strokes for the remodeled course and outclassed all the other contestants.

All the other contestants, Kammer, the runner up, was scarcely able to make the champion extend himself. He was 5 down at the conclusion of the first half of the 36-hole match today and the match ended on the eleventh hole in the second half, Travers winning by 8 up and 7 to play.

The president's cup, competed for by the beaten sixteen in the first match play round, was won by Max R. Marston, of Baltusrol, who won the interscholastic championship last week.

Errors Paved Way to Loss For Atlanta

Brady Pitched Good Ball—Wilbur Robertson Appeared Easy, but Crackers Could Not Get Over Timely Hits

The Crackers had their first real big off day and the result was an easy win for Mobile in the third and last game of the series between the two clubs, Mobile taking two of the three games. Brady and Wilbur Robertson were the opposing flingers and the Gull slabber got away 5 to 1.

Cracker infielders who usually hand out the most jam-up game possible, and the hitters who are usually there with a good bingle at a critical time, were not on the jobs against Robertson. It is natural for all to have an off day and Saturday was the time for the off day with the Cracker stars. Long, Smith, Alperman nor Welchonce could hit, while Pat Graham, Wallace Smith, Rivington Bisland and Whitey Alperman fielded poorly at times.

Jim Brady did not pitch a half bad game. The two runs in the fourth were made possible through an error and a misjudged line drive. Two bad errors in the fifth let over one more while the two others were earned. Bad throwing seemed to be the main trouble with the Atlanta infielders, Wallace Smith twice tossing badly to first, while Pat Graham and Bisland each made a bad throw.

The Mobile club showed to good advantage on the paths, Starr, Stock and O'Dell stealing at critical times. Starr got away with a couple of steals of second.

Harry Welchonce played a nice fielding game, his stab of Schmidt's line drive in the second inning being a well-timed play. The high sun caused the outfielders much trouble, being directly in Bailey's eyes in the right field. This caused Harry to once misjudge a drive which should have been an easy out.

Wilbur Robertson started off like he had only a round house out and a slow ball and it looked as if the Cracker sluggers would surely get next to him, but this same style of work kept them fooled throughout the game. He used a good head and very few hard drives were taken off him. There were just four hits for the home clan. This is hardly enough to win a ball game when the opposing team is making from four to five tallies.

The biggest Saturday crowd of the season was out, 4,300 paid admissions being on hand. Unfortunately the admirers of the Cracker clan witnessed the team when they were decidedly off, all hands being able to play far better ball than was shown.

Montgomery Is Next on List

Billikens Make First Appearance Here Monday—Stay for Three Games

Now that the leaders have gone on their way it now devolves upon the Crackers to try and grab the lead from them by defeating the Billikens three straight games while the Gulls are losing. This will put the local club high up in the race and pretty near to the top. For the past few games the Crackers have been going good and but for an untimely blow up they would have made a great deal better showing than they did.

However, it is easier to talk about beating the Billikens than it is to beat them. They have some ball team and besides that they are pulling together and know the game from start to finish. Johnny Dobbs is the manager this year and this is the second year that he has given satisfaction to the Coal City fans. All of his team are mostly new men and he has an abundance of good material that will begin seasoning toward the end of the season and then the other clubs will have to look sharp or it is good night for those who are the least bit weak.

This is the first appearance of the Billikens in the city and there should be a good crowd out to welcome them on their advent into the town. They have a good, clean set of players and they always put up a good article of ball, as is evidenced by their standing in the league. After the Billikens have had their do there will come within the sacred gates of Ponce de Leon the team of players dubbed the Pelicans.

BOWDEN LED ALL HITTERS

Timon Bowden topped the batters of the Georgia team during the college season just closed, this outfielder-first baseman-catcher having an average of .361. Next in line was Ginn, who batted .356. Five of the Red and Black regulars finished with an average better than .300.

Crackers Led With Willow; Fielding Off

Only Hard Hitting in the Series With Memphis Kept Crackers in Lead – Even Break in the Two Big Series.

In the six games played at Ponce de Leon this week the Atlanta club has managed to get an even break, winning two out of three from Memphis and one out of three from Mobile. At the hitting end of the game the Crackers came out on top but were outfielded, the poor exhibition in Saturday's game against Mobile bringing down the average.

The Crackers in defeating Memphis the best two in three both outhit and outfielded the Turtles but in the games with Mobile it was different, the Gulls having the edge in both departments of play.

One of the biggest edges gained by the Gulls in the three game series was at the running end, the Gulls swiping 4 bags and the Crackers none at all. They also excelled at sacrificing. At the hurling end the Gull flingers walloped but three men in the three games while Atlanta's flingers walked five, which is indeed good enough for anybody and shows that the Cracker slabbers are gaining control.

Here are the figures for the Memphis series:

	AB.	R.	H.	PO.	A.	E.	BA.	FA
Memphis—	85	9	16	66	33	3	.189	.976
Atlanta—	88	19	28	72	36	2	.318	.981

Macon Plays Albany a Tie

ALBANY, Ga., May 24.—Albany and Macon played a 9 to 9 nine-inning tie here today that was just about the weirdest exhibition of baseball that was ever seen in Albany. There were five pitchers used in the game, and Reynolds, Macon's leading hitter, was chased from the game in the third for disputing a decision. The feature of the game was the batting of Holden and Munn, Munn getting four out of five times up, and Munn three.

Race Devotee Figures Out Tire Troubles

A devotee of the motor racing sport has been busy digging into the archives and making deductions from the 500-mile race of last year on the Indianapolis speedway in order to better figure on what the cars must do this year in order to break the record.

It was thought for a while last year, according to this fan's figures, that the Mercedes was going to win. But it went out of the race on the 197th lap. The National won with an actual running average of 81.72 miles per hour.

The Mercedes had four tire changes—two right front and one right rear. The National had seven tire changes, as they did not want until they were out but avoided trouble. Of these seven two were four right rear, two right front and one left rear. The other tire went through the race.

The Mercedes stopped one second to adjust the carburetor and one minute for gasoline. The National stopped at the 181st lap to get a new spark plug. The National lost fourteen minutes in all at the pit, while the Mercedes lost only four. The National stops were made in the 78th, 107th, 142nd, 175th and 181st laps. When the Mercedes went out of the race the National made its fastest time, averaging 87 1-2 miles per hour for one lap. This was the fastest lap average of the entire race.

Self-Dumping Alco Trucks For Building State Road

As an evidence of the increasing popularity of motor trucks with power dumping bodies for road building work, the Pennsylvania State Highway department has purchased from the American Locomotive company two Alco trucks, to be employed in road building activities in the state.

Both vehicles are of five tons rating and are fitted with a type of body for hauling heavy materials such as rock, gravel, crushed stone and sand. The body raises or lowers by the power of the motor, has a maximum angle of forty-five degrees, and deposits a full load of material in thirty seconds. A hand windlass is also provided in the event hat a slower speed is desired.

New White Trucks Are Gaining in Worth

The sale of sixteen White delivery trucks to the New York department store of Gimbel Brothers, announced yesterday by the White company, of Cleveland, Ohio, is one of the largest motor truck installations of the year, and it follows closely upon the announcement of other large sales to New York stores, notably the delivery of fifteen trucks to Stern Brothers.

The sixteen trucks purchased by Gimbel Brothers, in conjunction with a fleet of twenty-six Whites which have been in the service of the company for a year and a half, gives the well known department store the largest fleet of standardized gasoline delivery trucks.

This increased installation is equally important from the standpoint of delivery efficiency inasmuch as all of the forty-two trucks are exactly alike, enabling the firm to take the utmost advantage of uniform design as well as the accompanying simplicity of operation, garaging and maintenance.

Gimbel Brothers' delivery department is maintained on progressive lines. The company's own men handle all adjustments and simple repairs. Not one of the White trucks owned by this company has ever been in a White service station.

Indifferent Work in Short Game Helped Kid Elberfeld's Team Win – Assists Were Very Numerous

New Buildings for The Tire People

Several of the sixteen new buildings which are contemplated as additions to the United States Tire company's Detroit plant, the capacity of which will be more than doubled, have been completed and are being utilized in maintaining an increased tire production which this year's sales have demonstrated will be necessary.

In addition to extensive improvements at its three other plants it is the aim of the United States Tire company to make the Detroit factory its greatest base of operation and as a result of this determination more than 1,000,000 feet of floor space will be added to the present dimensions of this mill.

As an indication of this year's volume of business for the first quarter, the report of President Samuel P. Colt, of the United States Rubber company, is interesting. Mr. Colt states that the United States Tire company's sales for the first three months of the present year show an increase of about 40 per cent over those of the corresponding months of last year.

Jays Win in Close Game

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 24.—Savannah won out from the locals in this afternoon after a hard-fought game. Stewart, who twirled for the Jacksonville club, lost his own game by a rank error in the ninth, when the score was tied. This error was followed by a bingle, and then Stewart hit the next batter with the bases full. Manager Wilder went into the box and held the visitors fairly safe, but the winning run was scored on a sacrifice fly. Box score:

Banquet to Coach

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 24.—Friday evening the faithful fans of Milledgeville tendered an elegant dinner to Catch A. K. Maddox, and the Georgia Military College Athletic club at the Hotel Baldwin. Forty were present and several addresses were made.

The feature was the presentation of a beautiful watch fob to Coach Maddox by the fans, and an additional surprise was furnished when President O. R. Horton responded by presenting a beautiful silver cigar stand and match case, a gift from the baseball and football teams of the institution. The affair shows the spirit of the city and the students and was an enjoyable occasion.

Long Presses D. Robertson For the Title

Atlanta Has Six Players Who Are Hitting the Ball Hard, and All of Them Are in the Daily Line-Up

D. Robertson, of Mobile, continues to lead the Southern league at the hitting game, with Tommy Long doing the runner-up stunt. Robertson had on May 20 an average of .420, with Long batting at .376. Since that time Long has jumped up a bit, and Robertson has fallen.

Robertson also leads in the matter of total bases, his six home runs bringing his total base record to eighty-three runs. Tommy Long, with fifty-six hits, leads in the number of safe bingles. Starr and Robertson, both of Mobile, lead in stolen bases, with seventeen each, with Stock, another Mobile star, next in line with sixteen. Starr, of Mobile, is the leading sacrifice hitter, with nine intentional outs. Tommy Long leads in runs with fifty-five.

Six Atlanta players are batting .287 or better. In this list is Long, Smith, Welchence, Alperman, Bisland and Bailey, coming in the order named.

GOLF BOOK IS NOW OUT

NEW YORK, May 24.—The year book of the Metropolitan Golf association for 1913 has just made its appearance, bigger, better and more entertaining than ever, as the backers say. Considering the events that take place within a year it would be surprising if the book were not at least more extensive in its records than that of the previous year. One of the new features is the introduction of the summary of the junior championships, which was held at the Plainfield Country club last year for the first time. The records of all the other championships, both amateur and professional, are also included from their inception to date. Between its bright red cover the year book also holds a list of past and present officers of the association rules of golf, metropolitan association ratings for the current year and several other matters of value to the golfer.

The conditions governing play for the Daniel Chauncey and Lesley cups are also included. Considering recent events the clause covering the championship shield is well worth the notice of all members of clubs in the association. It is as follows: "Said trophy shall remain the property of the Metropolitan Golf association, and shall have been won three times by the same player playing from or representing the same club when the trophy shall become the property of such club. Until permanent possession of the trophy passes from the association as above indicated it shall be held each year in the custody of the club whose representative shall have won a leg on the trophy at the last championship. The club thus holding the trophy in its custody shall be held responsible for its safe keeping and shall see that the trophy is turned over to the Tournament committee of the association at the next succeeding championship in good order and condition. The name of the winning player and the club which he represents shall be engraved on the trophy each year.

"The above conditions may be altered or modified only by the unanimous consent of every member of the executive committee of the association, the intention being that said conditions may be changed or altered in future years if deemed advisable for any reason with the unanimous consent of each and every member of the executive committee at the time."

LaGrange Trims Opelika

LAGRANGE, Ga., May 24.—The hottest game of the season on the home grounds took place yesterday between LaGrange and Opelika, ending in a score of 4 to 3 in favor of LaGrange, the game having been called in the eighth inning on account of rain. LaGrange used their new pitcher, Schoessler, and he struck out thirteen men in eight innings and was at all times complete master of the game. Several new players have been added to the LaGrange team. The umpiring of the game was very poor, and it took police interference to get the people off the diamond in the eighth inning when Opelika kicked on the decision of Umpire Stephens in calling a man safe at home plate.

Score:

	R.	H.	E.
LaGrange	001 010 11x	4	5 1
Opelika	200 010 00x	3	7 5

At Anniston, Talladega won by a score of 1 to 0.

At Newnan, the game was called in the fourth inning with the score 6 to 0 in favor of Gadsden.

Finals Are Reached In Emory Tourney

OXFORD, Ga., May 24.—The semi-finals have been played in Emory's tennis tournament, and Van Landingham and Murray have come down for the finals in singles. The contestants for the finals in doubles are Van Landingham, Dillard and Murray and Crowder. The date for the finals has not been decided upon, but will likely be in the next few days.

A number of entries were made in both departments of the tournament this year, and the contests for the finals waxed warm during the program of the schedule.

The singles were won last year by H. D. Towson, of Ashburn, and the doubles by Haskell Bass and Lewis King, of Griffin, Ga.

Cobb Improves And Now Leads By Big Margin

Though in Only Half as Many Games as Collins, He Has Swiped Almost as Many Bags as the Mack Star

Joe Jackson, Eddie Collins and Nap Lajoie have all been passed by Tyrus Cobb in the race for the American league batting honors. Ty now leading the league with an average of .500. Jackson and Collins are both hitting like a house afire, being over the .400 mark, but Cobb is going equally as fast, and right now it will be hard to catch the Georgian.

In total bases Jackson tops the league with eighty-eight sacks. He also leads in the number of hits with fifty-one, being the only player over the half century mark.

At stealing bags Cobb is going unusually strong. Though he has been in but seventeen games, he has swiped eleven bags and is next to Collins, who, with thirteen steals in twenty-eight games, tops the league.

Here are the averages of all who are hitting over .300, the figures being through the games of Wednesday:

Oxford Coach For Yale Crew

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 24.—Followers of rowing throughout the country, as well as those directly interested in Yale, are awaiting with considerable interest the result to be obtained by A. G. Kirby, the Oxford crew coach, who is here to train the Eli oarsmen. Mr. Kirby came here on the invitation of the Yale Athletic association to become advisory coach. He will be followed by Mr. Gold soon and within a short time followers of amateur rowing will have an opportunity to see the effects of the system which has been so effective in England, when applied to American oarsmen.

The introduction of the English stroke at Yale will mark a new chapter in rowing for the Blue. Those who have been giving the matter careful study, including Captain Snowden, are confident that the move will be a big success. The training of the crew will be entirely in the hands of the English coaches.

The Yale crew as it stands today is rowing smoothly, but seems to lack dash and drive, which, it is claimed, is due to the faulty stroke being used and which fault it is expected the new coaches will remedy. Speaking of the present condition of the crew and the changes that it is believed will be brought about by Messrs. Kirby and Gold, Albert H. Barclay, of the Yale alumni, said recently:

"What the final result of the innovation will be no one can predict, so far as the present crew is concerned. But this change in the coaching is certain to have a great influence on the future of rowing at Yale. It will mean the development of a stroke more closely patterned after the English stroke than any that Yale has hitherto worked out. It will mean the rowing more perfectly of the stroke that Yale has, since early in '70s, been striving to row. Whether Yale will ever be able to row this stroke as the Englishmen row it is a debatable question. But as this is the stroke that every successful coach has copied, with varying success, it is essential that Yale men should learn it. If Yale is to develop a winning stroke under the guidance of Yale coaches.

"The new coach will find a rather unusual crew. The men have a lot of good points that will undoubtedly be of material assistance to the English coaches in their work."

Driscoll Has Now Re-Entered Ring

LONDON, May 24.—The big night of the many contests arranged at the National Sporting club before the season closes will be the first Monday in June, on which the rearranged fight between Eddie Morgan and Digger Stanley for the bantamweight belt is down for decision, for on the same evening we shall see Kid Lewis (St. Georges) and Joe Starmer (Kettering) in opposition. Piquancy is added to the latter contest by the understanding that the winner will be matched with Jem Driscoll, who has consented to return to the ring.

Got 27 Tallies In This Game

NORCROSS, Ga., May 22.—Norcross defeated Lawrenceville on the local ground Tuesday afternoon, 27 to 1, in a slugging fest. The locals seemed to have their batting cloths on, as McConnell and Medfgomery were both easy marks for the local lads.

Stiles Smashes Broad Jump Mark

CHICAGO, May 24.—P. Stiles, of the Culver Military academy, set a new world's interscholastic broad jump record in the Lake Forest meet. His leap was measured with a surveyor's steel tape and was announced as 23 feet 3 inches. This, it was officially announced and verified, should have read "six-tenths" instead of "inches," of about 23 feet 7 1-2 inches. The former record, 23 feet 5 inches, was made by E. T. Cook, at Chillicothe, Ohio, May 25, 1906. Stiles also broke the Lake Forest interscholastic meet record by making the 100-yard dash in 10 seconds.

NEW PLAYERS NOW WITH THE MOBILE BASEBALL TEAM

Unexpected Wins Games

Miller Huggins Tells of Few of the Queerest Plays He Ever Saw

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—When asked the queerest plays he ever saw on a ball field, Manager Miller Huggins, of the Cardinals, said:

"Two instances of quick thinking on the spur of the moment occur to me as being well above the average. Certainly each played an important part in the game.

"'Last year the St. Louis club, in a game with Chicago, had a man on second and another on third, with only one out. A St. Louis batsman hit a fly ball out to Jimmy Sheckard.

"Sheckard got all ready to throw the ball to the home plate, anticipating that the runner on third would try to score. But just as Sheckard drew back his arm to throw he saw that the man on third did not leave the bag, but that the man on second, expecting that the player ahead of him would try to score, had started from second to third.

"Quick as a flash, Sheckard, with the same motion, wheeled and let the ball drive to second, where he got his man by two feet.

"The second play was one in which I was mixed up myself. Two of our St. Louis players were on first and second bases, with no one out. The man on second was a slow runner. I was at bat, and it was my intention to sacrifice along the third base line.

"We were playing against Pittsburg, and as soon as the pitcher pitched the ball he started for the third base line, and I knew he hoped to get the ball and make a play for a force-out at third.

"I saw what was coming and had just time to shift the position of my bat and to bunt the ball right down the line to the pitcher's box. As the pitcher had left his position the bunt went for a single, and, with the bases filled, we subsequently scored enough runs to win the game.

"Once while playing in Cincinnati against New York, with Johnstone as umpire, it having rained during all the game, 'Dummy' Taylor put on a large pair of rubber boots and went out on the line to coach. Being a deaf mute and not paying any attention to Johnstone, it caused a lot of excitement and was very funny."

Fats Play Leans And All Attend

THOMSON, Ga., May 24.—A game between the Fats and the Leans Thursday established a new record for baseball attendance in Thomson and judging from the spectators was a howling success.

The game was gotten up by W. C. McCommons and H. C. McCorkle for the benefit of the Woman's club. Ex-mayors and an ex-ordinary; an ex-representative and a bank cashier; lawyers, merchants and traveling men; and a member of the county board of education were on the teams and in one instance father was pitted against son.

The Leans wore uniforms of khaki and hose of baby blue. The Fats wore pale gray uniforms and delicate lavender hose. A. H. Thrasher and C. F. Hunt enlivened the wait between innings by fancy dancing to the strains of the brass band.

The Fats were stronger on all points except running. Unfortunately the distance between bases was too much for them. The score was 14 to 8 in favor of the Leans, but by a slight error of the scorer it was marked up 104 to 71.

The line-up was:

Fats—E. H. Burnside, p.; H. C. McCorkle, c.; H. Johnson, 1b.; A. H. Thrasher, 2b.; O. L. Williams, 3b.; H. S. Davis, ss.; Toombs Parrish, rf.; J. B. boyd, cf.; J. B. Burnside, lf.

Leans—W. C. McCommons, p.; R. J. Johnson, c.; C. F. Hunt, 1b.; J. R. Roswell, 2b.; R. L. Hadaway, 3b.; R. A. Kunnes, rf.; Jos. Goolsby, cf.; L. W. Porter, lf.; C. W. Dozier, ss.

Hon. J. H. Boyd was umpire on balls and W. F. Gheesling on bases. Mr. Boyd had a gun with fixed bayonet and all decisions of the umpires were perfectly satisfactory.

C. F. Hunt scored a home run owing to a mixup between the outfield and a barbed wire fence. The gate receipts were $50.

KLAUS IS WORLD'S CHAMP WHEN HE IS IN FRANCE

Over in France Frank Klaus is champion of the world. Over here Frank is not. But that makes no dit o' difference—he would sacrifice a world's championship any day to be in this land of the free and the home of the—Japanese.

So he is back—Klaus is—and he doesn't care if McGoorty does know it. He looks fine and feels fine and he doesn't care if Gibbons does find it out.

You see they called Frank champion of the world over in Paris—and Frank liked it. Sounds nice, the words are musical, and it always makes a beautiful thing to say at all times no matter how large the audience. All in all it is a lovely little thought, and we don't blame Frank for liking it. Naturally life in America without them kind words is just one big deaf and dumb institution to the boy with the superior inferior maxillary.

Now what Frank wants—Frank does—is McGoorty and Gibbons to help him. If they will only assist him, Klaus is sure he can make a name for himself—sure that those musical words of gay Paree—"champion du monde," will be translated and transplanted on the sidewalks of U. S. eyeal, even shouted from the housetops by the roofers—Frank Klaus, "Champion of the World."

And, too, methinks, there is nothing many wanting in our minds (cept brains) than to see either Eddie or Mike in the ring "assisting" Mr. Frank K. Klaus, of Pittsburg, Pa.

But we are rolling off the alley. Frank Klaus and George Engle came up to tell us about the "hardest battle" that Klaus and Engle ever had. Engle told it. Klaus fought it. That's right. That's the way it should be. If Engle fought it and Klaus told it—why, game reader—we would have to lie to you—that's all.

Klaus may be champion of the world over in Paris, but George Engle told of his hardest battle here, so if there are any mistakes, we are sorry—we are doing the best we can for the money.

"Jimmy Gardiner!"

"Huh?"

"Jimmy Gardiner," repeated George.

"He was the guy that gave Klaus his hardest battle."

"Oh! so it"—

"Yep! Jimmy certainly gave me boy Frank a terrible battle. I will never forget it—and neither will Frank as long as mirrors are in existence. Ain't that right, Frank?"

"Yup," said Klaus.

"Yhee. Gardiner had just fought Klaus about six months previous, and you knocked him out in three rounds, didn't you, Frank?"

"Yep," replied Klaus.

"Well, when we were offered another match, why, we just simply jumped at it, didn't we?"

"Yup," said Frank.

"It looked soft—you know—one of those 'in' fights, so we just loafed during the training period, didn't we, Frank?"

"Yup," escaped Klaus.

"And we climbed under the ropes a little off color, didn't we, old boy?"

"Yup," acknowledged the Pittsburg bearcat.

"Most of prepared himself great, for he certainly put up one of the greatest battles of his career, didn't he, Frank?"

"Yup."

"It happened in Boston in 1910, and you know what a clever fellow Jimmy was."

"I do," broke in Klaus.

"Well, sir, he surely was clever that night, and the way he climbed into Frank was a shame, wasn't it, old boy?"

"It was a crime," said Klaus.

"So, to make a long story short, I never saw such a scrap in my life. I was surprised—thunderstruck!. He peppered Frank all through the course. I was getting frightened—bet a few, y'know, and if Frank hadn't come on those last——"

"I was coming strong the last few rounds," broke in our Pittsburg pal.

"Why, we would have never received a draw—we were kinda lucky at that—ah, Frank?"

"Yup," said Klaus.

Middies Break kEven With Pennsy Crews

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 24.—Navy and the University of Pennsylvania divided honors in two boat races here today. The midshipmen senior eight won from Pennsylvania varsity by four lengths, while the Pennsylvania freshmen eight finished a little over a length ahead of the Navy fourth class men. The official time was:

Varsity, Navy, 6 minutes 36 4-5 seconds; Pennsylvania, 6 minutes, 48 4-5 seconds; freshmen, Pennsylvania, 6 minutes, 56 seconds; Navy 6 minutes, 59 seconds.

Prior to these two races the eight of the Ariel Boat club of Baltimore defeated the Navy third crew and the Navy senior four won easily from the Arundel club of Baltimore. All of the races were rowed over the inside course on the Severn river at the regulation American Henley distance.

Don't Like Class For Racing Boats

NEW YORK, May 24.—Since the formation of the Handicap Class on Long Island Sound there has been very little interest in the various restricted raceboat classes that formerly were the life of yachting on metropolitan waters. Although many of the boats are in commission, their owners have preferred to sail in the percentage division rather than in their regular classes. However, there is a movement now on foot to bring the boats back into their old classes, and give at least one series for the Larchmont raceboats, the American raceboats and the other raceboats of Long Island Sound.

Six of the raceboats now are enrolled in the Philadelphia-Corinthia Yacht club. These boats are coming to New York to take part in the annual race week of the Larchmont Yacht club. They have asked to race as a class and the Sound club has offered a special trophy for the division.

United States Tires are good tires

How did you pick your car?

When you bought your car you didn't choose it because you happened to like the carburetor or because of its thick upholstery or even because of its famous motor.

You got right down to the bottom of the question. You compared various cars point by point until you finally found the car that came the closest to combining all the good points you wanted to find in your car.

Why not buy your tires in the same way?

Why not size up the various brands point by point and pick the tire that combines all those strong features that a good tire ought to have.

You want high mileage

You will get from 25 to 50 per cent. more mileage from United States Tires than any tire ever yielded up to the time the United States Tire Company was organized.

You want to avoid rim cutting

Air capacity and diameter are important

No tire ever made has a larger average air capacity or larger diameter measurements than the United States Dunlop. Get a few cross sections and prove it with your own eyes.

You want an easily manipulated tire

The round toe makes the United States Dunlop the most easily manipulated tire on the market.

But the prime essential is fabric strength

Strong fabric means not only high mileage but protection against blow-outs. By a process which we have perfected and control exclusively we have practically doubled the strength of United States Tires and reduced blow-outs proportionately.

These are the good points you want to find in your tires. They govern the size of your tire bills. Four-factory cooperative methods (used exclusively in the making of United States Tires) have enabled us to combine all of them in this one tire.

Cost no more than you are asked to pay for other kinds

World's Tour Of Ball Club Now Assured

Advance Man Has Already Started Work and Comiskey and McGraw Have Signed. Players From Giants and Sox

NEW YORK, May 24.—The "trip de luxe" around the world of the Giants and Chicago White Sox has progressed to the stage where contracts have been signed by Charles Comiskey and John McGraw and an advance man started out over the trail the baseball players will follow next winter. The teams will be recruited largely from the Giants and White Sox, but other clubs will also be represented. Roger Bresnahan probably will be one of the catchers, and it is possible that Walter Johnson will be exploited.

M. D. Bunnell, an experienced foreign tour director, who has been abroad many times, will handle the executive end of the trip. He has sailed for Europe, where he hopes to make arrangements for big games in Rome, Monte Carlo and Nice. These games will be played last, but instead of circling the globe on his advance trip Mr. Bunnell will work both ways out of New York. He will return here in July or August, and start for the Orient. The baseball tourists will catch up to him in Japan, and he will travel with the party the rest of the way.

There are so many details to be attended to that five months of advance work are none too many. Mr. Bunnell says the party will include more than a hundred people, as there will be many extra bookings, and the traveling will be strictly first-class, both in this country and abroad.

The other day Mr. Bunnell called on McGraw, and they went into the plans for the trip in detail. The director general then hurried west, and reported he obtained Comiskey's signature to the contract. He returned to New York and held another conference with McGraw. It is now announced that all preliminaries have been completed.

The baseball tourists will start for Vancouver, B. C., immediately after the world's series, stopping off at big cities for exhibition games. Tentative plans fix the date of their sailing for Japan at November 5. They will skip Honolulu, and after the games in Japan will pay a short visit to China. From there they go to Manila, and then sail for Australia.

As much of their time will be taken up on the long jumps, the tourists are not due in Rome until January. They probably will spend the holidays in Australia or en route to Europe.

The schedule after Rome in Australian games will not be known until Bunnell returns from Europe. The tourists will touch at Port Said, and will also visit Egypt for sightseeing purposes, if not for games.

After the games in Nice the trip will be for sightseeing purposes only. The party will make brief stops in Paris and London, not forgetting to take a long, fond look at Ireland. The last sailing will be from Queenstown, and the globe trotters will arrive in New York about this time the call to spring training is issued.

Billy Evans and Billy Klem probably will be appointed to umpire the games, and Germany Schaefer, of the Washington team, will be one of the funmakers.

Stop Betting At Ball Yard

LYNCHBURG, Va., May 24.—The efforts of Secretary Briggs, of the Portsmouth team, to put an end to gambling on the Portsmouth grounds is to be commended by the lovers of clean sports, and if Mr. Briggs succeeds in his effor he will have the credit of taking the lead in this commendable movement and, let it be hoped, that it will spread to the other cities of the Virginia league.

While the Virginia league has never been hurt to any great extent by professional gamblers, yet at the same time it has been an open secret that nightly little effort has ever been put forth to stop small betting in the grandstands and bleachers around the circuit.

Betting is done and has been done since the league started in a small and rather quiet way, and from this coterie of patrons of the game have come the largest share of the kicks and knocking for a losing team.

Lynchburg had this class of betting here, and if any effort ever was made to suppress it the public knew nothing of the effort.

BURNS IS TO AGAIN FIGHT

NEW YORK, May 24.—According to report Tommy Burns is still on the verge of another plunge into pugilism's troubled waters. For months the ex-champion from his stronghold at Calgary, where he is in control of the fight situation, has been sending out announcements that he is about to take the field once more. But beyond boxing a draw with Arthur Pelky the stocky Canadian has done little to back up his words by deeds. Immediately after his encounter with Pelky, Burns said that he had given up the idea of coming back, but would stick to the promoting end of the game. He engaged Another McCarty and Pelky to box at his arena tonight.

Probably after inspecting McCarty close at hand Burns will be unable to restrain himself any longer but will immediately bill himself and McCarty as contestants for the championship. There is no reason to doubt that such a scheme would be hailed with great delight by the Mc-Carty-McCarney combination. On July 4, the winner of the Willard-Smith bout will be ready to test the strength of McCarty's hold on the championship crown. And apparently McCarty has no idea of meeting this test if he can possibly avoid it. A bout with Burns would enable the pretender to sidestep the big holiday date in California. Labor day would then be the next big fistic date on the far coast, and McCarty no doubt, would cite this as good ground to postpone the inevitable for the time being.

Many sporting events will feature the Portola games, to be held in San Francisco next October. There will be track and field athletics, international army and navy boxing championships, swimming races between champions of the Pacific coast and Honolulu, motor-boat and hydroplane races, rowing races and tennis.

Faculty-Senior Game Big Event at Emory

OXFORD, Ga., May 24.—The really big and interesting game of Emory baseball is the faculty-senior set-to for Wednesday afternoon, June 4.

This is a time-honored affair which provides an outlet for a great deal of rooting, especially on the side of the student.

The announcement of the line-ups for either team has not been made.

The senior team will be composed entirely of men who have never made the class teams while in college. On the other hand, the faculty picks from a wide range and always numbers several stars.

Hupmobile Cars

"We are tickled to death over the Hupmobile showing this far in the year," declared F. W. Northcutt, sales manager of the John M. Smith company, agents for the "Hup" in this territory. "Already our business has surpassed our expectation for the entire season."

Mr. Northcutt has returned very recently from a trip through the company's territory. "Things are looking up good," he declares. "Business conditions in general are very promising indeed."

Last Monday a "Hup" owner, Harold McKennedy, left Atlanta to run to Tampa Fla., in his car. Mr. Northcutt has heard from him the report of a trip without a ripple. "He reports an average running time of twenty-five miles an hour," says Mr. Northcutt. "His gasoline consumption averaged about nineteen miles to the gallon. He went through without a particle of trouble, without even a puncture."

Golf Meet Announced

CHICAGO, May 23.—With conditions practically unchanged from last year, the Western Golf association today announced the program for the Tom Morris memorial cup competition, which will take place simultaneously against par over all the courses belonging to the organization on June 14.

Fifty-two clubs turned in last year's event, which was won by the Los Angeles County club.

L. S. Crane with a Pope Hartford got away again with the free-for-all cup, out at the hill climb, yesterday afternoon. A fine big crowd, in which there were many ladies, was out to see the running of this and the other events of the fast program. The weather was superb, being cool and bright with all the dust laid. The woods were full of automobiles and folks along both sides of the course. The hill was in excellent condition and the county police kept it clear. Every one of them was on the job, and things went off in great shape, starting on the dot at 2 o'clock.

The free-for-all cup is the big prize offered by the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory association and must be won three times by one contestant before it becomes his property. Mr. Crane won it last year, with a Pope Hartford of course, he being the very efficient and popular local representative of that company. His time then was 53 seconds. That was the fastest on the course. He lowered it in the free-for-all this year to 51 1-5 seconds for the nine-tenths of a mile climb; but in event No. 4 he beat that too, making the hill in one second less, or 50 4-5.

THE RIVERS CUP

F. Lundgren with a Studebaker won the E. Rivers Realty company cup with the fastest time in classes 1 and 2. This cup, like the free-for-all prize, must be won three times before it becomes the property of the holder. It was won last year by an E. M. F., so the competition next year is going to be just that much keener.

Some of the fastest and classiest motorcycle running that Atlanta ever has seen, made the big program lively with the work of the smaller motors. Harry Glenn, giving an exhibition run, came up the hill in the very fast time of 48 seconds. Other riders in the several motorcycle events did fast time too.

FAST CARS MAKE RECORDS ON STEWART AVE. HILL IN THE SECOND AUTO ASSN. CLIMB

BETTER BALL NOT FASTER

Mgr. Griffith is original; is strong of spirit. He has ideas of his own. He has the hardihood to stand up for them in the face of no less a personage than Ban B. Johnson, supreme high muckamuck of the American league. Clark's latest display of daring originality is just because they have the dust laid. The woods were full of automobiles and folks along both sides of the course. The hill was in excellent condition and the county police kept it clear. Every one of them was on the job, and things went off in great shape, starting on the dot at 2 o'clock.

The free-for-all cup is the big prize offered by the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory association and must be won three times by one contestant before it becomes his property. Mr. Crane won it last year, with a Pope Hartford of course, he being the very efficient and popular local representative of that company. His time then was 53 seconds. That was the fastest on the course. He lowered it in the free-for-all this year to 51 1-5 seconds for the nine-tenths of a mile climb; but in event No. 4 he beat that too, making the hill in one second less, or 50 4-5.

THE RIVERS CUP

F. Lundgren with a Studebaker won the E. Rivers Realty company cup with the fastest time in classes 1 and 2. This cup, like the free-for-all prize, must be won three times before it becomes the property of the holder. It was won last year by an E. M. F., so the competition next year is going to be just that much keener.

Lookouts and Pels Change

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 24.—Shake-ups in both the Chattanooga and New Orleans teams resulted here tonight prior to the departure of the Pelicans for Nashville. Manager Cholly Frank announced the purchase of Breen, who played in right this afternoon from Montgomery, and also the unconditional release of James. To bolster the Pels' receiving department, Jack Adams has been secured from the Minneapolis club. He was formerly with Memphis.

Elberfeld announced the unconditional release of outfielder Betcher.

"Lefty" Hunt, who was secured from Victoria, will work for the locals against Nashville tomorrow.

Cotton States Develops Many Good Hurlers

Comnitz and Sallee Two of the Best—Who First Came Into Prominence While Flinging in Cotton States

There are five pitchers on the rosters of major league teams that secured their first baseball experience in the Cotton States league. Two of them—Howard Camnitz and Harry Sallee—are stars of great brilliance. Mack Allison was one of the winning pitchers for the St. Louis Browns last season. Al Demaree has shown fine twirling ability with Mc-Graw's New York club this spring, and bids fair to become a valued member of McGraw's pitching staff. Al Klawitter has earned a position as a regular on the Detroit pitching staff.

Howard Camnitz came from his home in Danville, Ky., in 1903, and joined the Vicksburg team. He was the sensation of the Cotton States league that year, pitching thirty-seven games, winning twenty-six and losing seven, and tieing four. The following year he was with the Pittsburg team, but pitched in very few games. The next season the Pittsburg management sent him to the Toledo club for more experience. In thirty-four games that he twirled that season he earned an even break, winning seventeen and losing the same number.

The next season he pitched so well for Toledo that the Pittsburg club recalled him, and he has been one of the Pirates' most reliable twirlers since then. In 1909, when the Pittsburgs won the National league and later the world's championship, Camnitz lost but six games in thirty-one trips to the mound.

In 1905 Scatter Sallee was with the Meridian club, and the following season he had a great deal to do with Birmingham's success in winning the Southern league pennant. In 1907 he jumped to the Williamsport team of the outlaw Tri-state league, and as the league's pitchers, winning twenty-two and losing but five.

In 1908 the slim slabbist joined the St. Louis National league team, and has been their best pitcher since joining them. If Sallee was on a team like the Browns for a season he would be hailed as a wonder, but like Nap Rucker, of the Brooklyn club, he has always had a very mediocre team behind him.

Mack Allison and Al Demaree learned the first rudiments of the game in the same league, and with the same team, both having months of it with the Columbus club in the Cotton States league. Al Klawitter was also in the league at the time playing almost every position on the Vicksburg team.

Mack Allison had a varied career before reaching the big show. He was at different times since leaving the Cotton States in the Central, Blue Grass, International and Texas leagues. He was released from the San Antonio club by the St. Louis Browns and last year pitched very good ball for a club that finished next to last.

Al Demaree, after leaving the Cotton States league went to the South Atlantic and pitched so well that he was secured by the Chattanooga team. He pitched very fair ball for Chattanooga, but was traded that winter for Bill Chappelle, going to the Mobile club. Last season he was considered the best pitcher in the Southern league. The form he has been showing in the games this year SOUTHERN MAID, (Moore) $3.60, $2.40, $2.50.

MISS GAYLE, (Turner) second, $2.40, $2.50.

LARGEST BARBER SHOP IN WORLD OPENED HERE

Public Is Invited to Inspect Herndon's Magnificent New Establishment Tomorrow

Atlantians will be given an opportunity tomorrow between the hours of 2 p. m. and 10 p. m., of being present at the opening in this city of the largest and most magnificently equipped barber shop in the world.

A. F. Herndon, who has been established for more than twenty years in this city, has remodeled his establishment at 66 Peachtree street, running through to 65 Carnegie way, at a cost of $20,000, and has invited all his patrons and the general public to come in and see what has been accomplished.

Herndon searched the wide world for ideas, and has embodied in his new shop the result of observations made in all the principal American cities from New York to Frisco and in Europe as well.

The establishment is not only larger, but a great deal more elaborate and magnificently equipped than anything Atlanta has seen before. The walls are of polished marble and plate glass mirrors. The floor is of marble, and the ceiling is white and gold. There are twenty-three barber chairs, heavily white enameled, with green leather upholst

Wesley Again

In a very ragged game the Wesley team defeated the Acrogas nine by the score of 15 to 14. The Acrogas hit hard and fielded well, but had luck played its part. Wesley scored 5 runs in the second, when Tinsley walked 5 men and hit 1. Weston relieved Tinsley and pitched good ball. Thompson, for Wesley, played a game of credit for his work with such poor support. A glance at the box scores will show what each did.

STRONG AMATEUR CLUB

The team representing the Hallet & Davis company in the Commercial league is composed of some star individual players and the record that the bunch has made in the race for the rag is ample proof of the brand of the game that the team is putting forth.

Didlake, the fast shortfielder of the squad, was formerly a star with Mississippi A. and M. The two Luck boys both of whom were prep stars with the G. M. A. team of the Atlanta Prep league, are showing up well. The other members of the team are Blackmon, Kane, Davenport, Jeter, Porter, Findlay, Martin, Henri, Murray and Barnes.

Atl. Nat. Bank Wins

The Atlanta National Bank defeated Southern Railway Saturday afternoon in an interesting game. Both teams played jam-up ball and the game was very interesting. The pitching of Golightly was the feature.

Batteries; Vanderbilt, Lattimer and Brown; Sewanee, Eggleston and Dinkins. Umpire, H. H. Jones.

Fan Gets Ticket Given by Journal

R. C. Vanadore, of 665 East Fair street, and one of the best baseball fans in the city, will be the guest of The Journal at the game Monday, he having been identified as the lucky fan in The Journal picture story. This makes quite a few fans who have been the guests of The Journal as the result of their pictures being snapped by the official photographer of The Journal.

This contest has created quite a bit of interest and daily fans watch the sport page to see if they are the lucky persons. The Journal is publishing only the livest sports and this picture scheme is a double attraction to the true lovers of the news of good sport first hand. These pictures will be run all the season, so be on the lookout for your picture in the sport page of The Journal, you may be the next lucky one.

Veteran Stars Located

Frank Owen, formerly of the Chicago White Sox and Ed Killian, for years a member of the Detroit club, are now working regularly at the Studebaker automobile plants in Detroit, and divide the work of pitching for the shops baseball team in the Manufacturers' league.

Omaha, in a recent league game with St. Joseph, scored seven runs without making a hit. Eight batsmen received bases on balls, two errors were made, a sacrifice fly and wild pitch being responsible for a new feature of scoring runs in the national pastime. St. Joseph won 13 to 7. Omaha used four catchers and St. Joseph three.

Baxley Defeats Scotland

BAXLEY, Ga., May 24.—Baxley and Scotland met in a ten-inning struggle here yesterday afternoon, the final score being 5 to 6. Branch featured for Baxley, striking out fifteen men and giving up three hits, besides getting two two-base hits and a single out of four times at bat. The fielding on both sides was bad. The two teams meet here again tomorrow.

Batteries: Scotland, Clements and Wooten; Baxley, Branch and Gray.

Oxford and Cambridge are willing to come to America for the international meet with Harvard and Yale next September.

Boxing will be included in the Berlin 1916 Olympic games.

Guesses Poor During Start Of the Majors

None of the Experts Doped the National League Correctly, While Few Hit It Right in the Younger Circuit

NEW YORK, May 24.—The first month of the 1913 baseball season went into the records with as near as we could figure it from material at hand the experts hitting .678. According to the advance opinions, as printed in three baseball periodicals, the one lone, correct guess was as to the Athletics. Ninety-nine per cent. of the scribes declared that the Athletics would get away to a flying start and win in a walk. That one pick is their only consolation. In the National league the predicters have a batting average of .0. The scientific opinions on the ultimate winner were evenly divided between the Giants and the Pirates. Seventy-five per cent. of the experts, including some of our player-writers, named the first division clubs as New York, Pittsburg, Chicago and Cincinnati. Of these four they got one—the Cubs—and they are hanging on by the skin of their teeth. The Giants and Pirates will be second divisioners for three or four days at least. Boston refused to be a tail-ender and even that cinch-like selection has proved a flivver.

We are confronted with the rather strange spectacle of first division in the National league at the end of a month of play made up of Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Chicago and St. Louis. And it cannot be said that they are up there by accident, either. Brooklyn and the Phillies have played the best ball in the league. After beating the Giants the Dodgers proved that it was no horse-shoe series by turning right around and beating the Cubs three out of four. The Braves did likewise unto the Pirates.

In the American league the champion Red Sox have proved more of a disappointment than have the Pirates and Giants in the senior organization.

In the cases of the Red Sox and the Pirates the explanation for this remarkable state of affairs is that their pitchers have not been going good. On the other hand, that alibi does not go for the Giants. They have taken a slump behind as good pitching as could be expected from a championship staff in the middle of August. It seems a shame for such work as that displayed by Mathewson, Demaree and Tesreau to go to waste. Matty could stand it all right, but it's doubly tough on Demaree, who is just breaking in and trying to make good. He should have won every game that he has pitched.

It is said that baseball strength, like water, eventually seeks its level and that luck, in the long run, cuts no particular figure one way or the other. Evens itself up, in other words. If that theory is correct, then the New York fans need have no great worry. There is no doubt that the Giants and the Pirates have the strength. Why, the secondary strength of McGraw's team is greater than that of some of the regular lineups in the National league. Then, you ask, and naturally so, why don't they show us something?

One trouble that has beset the Giants and one from which the Red Sox also suffer is overcondence. The players have been taking the early spurt of the Phillies and the Dodgers as a joke; but if they don't knuckle down pretty soon it will cease to be a laughing matter. A game lost in April hurts just as badly in the final standing as one lost in September. The New York players are a little too much overburdened with assurance that everything will come out right in the end.

There is no doubt that McGraw is worried over the situation notwithstanding the cocksure feeling of the players. He has made more shifts in the team this spring than he has for several years.

McGraw rarely ever criticises a player for making errors, but he is still sore to the quick over a base running play made by Fletcher which he believes brought on defeat. Fletcher was on third with Doyle on first when McGraw gave the signal for a double steal. It was to be a "bluff" attempt to score. As there was no one out, all he wanted was for Doyle to reach second, so that two runs would be possible. He knew that Archer would make a bluff at second and then throw to third. That is the old Cub defense to the play and is well known to veterans. But Fletcher, instead of sticking to third, as had been planned, took a long lead and was nabbed. That one play prevented a victory, as Doyle afterward scored.

"Well," said McGraw, "I can't run the bases for them." And that is all he had to say. Those few words, however, expresses a lot.

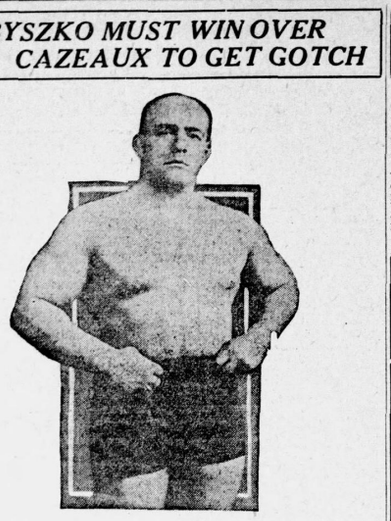
New Line For Truck's Work

One line of business in which, unknown to or unrealized by the uninitiated, the motor truck has made rapid strides of late is that of catering, according to John N. Willys, president of the Gramm Motor Truck company, of Lima, Ohio. In a recent interview Mr. Willys declared that the caterer has greeted the motor truck joyfully as the means of his salvation from the vexing problems of rapid and economical transportation.

"Food, being a perishable merchandise, requires rapid transportation," said Mr. Willys. "Therefore it is no more than natural that the caterer, driven almost distracted by the inadequacies of horse and wagon delivery, and the uncertainties and inconveniences of railroad transportation, should welcome the motor truck. Among the scores of lines of business in which we have found our vehicles giving excellent service, that of catering has given the best opportunity for demonstrating its worth. There are a large number of Gramms in the service of caterers in every large city of the country and almost daily we hear of the economies they are working.

"In the old days, when the caterer depended on the horse and wagon or on the railroads, he was constantly at the mercy of any number of conditions that can in no way apply to the motor truck. Snow or rain usually meant that his horses could not make the delivery required, and the nature of his business makes the caterer's delivery a highly important one. Railroad and express companies were constantly failing to deliver the caterer's consignments on time and in good condition. Therefore, though a profitable venture under normal conditions, the caterer's business became an extremely hazardous calling in the matter of profits. A single delayed feast, oftentimes, was sufficient to ruin the preparer of feasts out of business, for the unudesirable publicity such a failure brought wrought havoc.

ZBYSZKO MUST WIN OVER CAZEAUX TO GET GOTCH



If Zybszko, the mighty wrestler from Poland, shall beat Cazeaux, the Frenchman, when they meet May 19 in New York City, he will have a match with Frank Gotch, the present champion wrestler of the world. If he falls Gotch may take on Cazeaux or some one else to pick up a few dollars, and while away the time which hangs monotonous over his farm at Humboldt, Iowa.

Gotch has already proved he is a better man than Zybszko by throwing him. If you consider the measurements of the Pole it is difficult to conceive of a lighter man pinning his shoulders to the mat. The Pole weighs 245 pounds, but he is only five feet ten inches tall. His chest measurement is fifty-five inches, at least seven inches larger than that of Jim Jeffries, the biggest heavyweight champion fighter the world has known. His biceps are twenty-three inches in circumference, if his manager is to be believed. Jeffries's biceps were about ten inches. Many a young woman has a waist not any larger than the Pole's good right arm. His thigh is thirty-two inches, and there are many million young men in the United States, and most of the women who would think they were growing fat is their waists grew so large.

ROASTING DOESN'T HELP PLAYERS DO ANY BETTER

Here's what the Cincinnati Inquirer's sporting editor thinks on the subject of panning ball players for their failures and his arguments ring true with fairness:

"A correspondent thinks the Reds should be roasted severely when they lose, believing that this would help them to win. Nothing could be farther from the truth. When a player is going badly, it does not help him any to declare that he is a bone-head or a quitter. Deliberate attacks on individual players never result in any good to the team. Nineteen players out of twenty are trying to deliver the goods to the best of their ability. There are a few record players who think solely of themselves and are always trying to protect themselves at the expense of the club.

"But these are a small minority of the athletes who make up the big league clubs today. Nearly every man is trying, and for that reason he should be encouraged as much as possible, and not roasted for an error or a strikeout at a critical time. Baseball is unlike the ordinary business in that the players are in the limelight all the time and their deeds are recorded in the papers every day. How would a traveling man like it if some paper should come out and hand him a column of abuse because he happened to fail to get an order from some business house that he called on? This paper endeavors to give strictly accurate reports of the games played by the Reds.

"No details are gossiped over, but the exact facts are always clearly stated. If the pitcher blows up the fact is made clear to all who can read. If the game is lost on errors or failure to hit at the right time, the fans know it just as it happened as soon as they read the Inquirer.

"No one is unfairly protected and neither is any one unfairly criticised. The plain and simple facts are spread before the fans, who thus know just how a game was won or lost. The wise ones can draw their own conclusions. But the mistakes of individual players are not harped on; and neither is abuse indulged in. It is up to the manager to discipline his team and to make changes and shifts for the good of the club. The fans are entitled to know the facts and that is what they get. Sharp criticism of individual players never did anything but harm to a team."

Must Be Sure Car Is Good

That the successful motor car agent must believe absolutely in the car he is selling is the opinion of Mr. R. H. Radford, vice president and general manager of the Carter Car company, Pontiac, Mich.

Mr. Radford, in a recent bulletin, told his agents that if they did not believe every word they told their prospects they must either quit such talking or get busy and sell themselves.

"It is one of the most important things," said Mr. Radford, "that the agent be enthusiastic and a real booster for his car. He must be able to make strong statements, but unless he feels that he is telling the truth he cannot make others believe him. The old way of selling your goods to others and then going across the street to buy for yourself is past. The agent who is trying to sell a certain car, wishing all the time that he had the agency for another, will never be a success.

"In going over the results obtained by our own agents I find that the fellows who are most sincere and most enthusiastic in their statements always sell the greatest number of cars. I remember once overhearing one of our representatives tell a prospect that the fibre filler on the gearless transmission would wear for 15,000 miles, even when the car was driven up 50 per cent hills, which any driver can do, and, of course, the listener would not believe it. If the man had said from 5,000 to 7,000 miles, which is true, the prospect would have believed him, and, at that, the advantage over the cost of oil in the gear transmission would have been apparent.

"The motor car agent, like every other business man," continued Mr. Radford, "is coming to the point where he must be absolutely on the square, and I am glad to say that very few agents are today even trying to misrepresent their cars."

Don't Get the Mileage Craze

This is the safe and sane advice given truck owners by Wylie West, local manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company. It Sits a Keynote to which truck owners ordinarily pay little or no attention.

There is no question that the majority of truck owners of all classes, are more or less subject to this kind of "madness." They are ever calling for more and more mileage, and do not realize that this mileage, beyond a certain point, must incur losses to pay for the gain.

The truck tires built and sold by the Firestone company unquestionably give all the mileage any one could, within reason, ask for. This is one of the strongest points of these supreme servitors (tires). But a tire to give mileage must be tough and unusually strong. The less pure rubber there is in a tire, naturally the less resiliency there is.

Breaker Strip A Necessity

A representative of one of the larger tire companies recently remarked that so many tires went to pieces at the breaker strip that he thought they would discontinue the use of the breaker strip altogether. This reminds me of the Irishman who thought that on account of the fact that so many people who were killed in railroad accidents were in the rear car, that the rear car should be left off. The breaker strip is put in a tire to take the shock, which obstructions in the road are liable to give to a tire, before they can reach the organic part of the tire. It plays no part in the strength or efficiency of the casing, but is simply an armor belt around the outside of the tire to protect it from injury.

The body of the tire, to give the best results, is made of fairly close woven fabric placed at an agle of 45 degrees. The tread rubber, to give the best wearing qualities, is made thick and tough, and while in service exerts a drag on the fabric, tending to pull it loose. The breaker strip should be put in with the threads running around the circumference of the tire, instead of at an angle of 45 degrees, as this more effectively takes up the shocks without transferring them to the carcass and better resists the drag on the rubber pulling it away from the

Paige-Detroit Car Popular in India

In India the American car is rapidly getting a strong foothold. It has been a hard fight. India being an English possession, of course a number of English cars have been sold there. Up until lately, the automobile buyer has been very skeptical in buying a low-priced car, owing to the fact that the English car has been so high priced that the automobile owner of India has been educated up to the idea that he could not purchase a reliable car unless he had expended a good sum of money for it.

Evidence to the effect that the popular priced car is gaining a good foothold in India is brought out by the following letter received by the Paige-Detroit dealer in Bombay, India, from one of his customers: "It may interest you to hear of my experience with the Paige car four-seater, purchased May, 1912. Now that it has done 4,000 miles I have nothing but praise for its behavior. It has been used in all weather and over rough roads and has never caused me the slightest trouble. The engine runs silently and without vibration, and has had no attention beyond grinding valves. I am confident when this car gets better known it will have an extensive sale and supersede many of the other cheap American cars."

Biggest One-Floor Garage

On a recent visit to California, Sales Manager Benson, of the Studebaker corporation, inspected what is said to be the largest one-story garage in the world. The building houses the Studebaker representation in Riverside—Duncan & Grant—and is built on the mission style of architecture. It has often housed more than 200 cars over night.

ALMOST KILLED THOMAS WHEN AFTER MORIARITY

George Moriarty, of Detroit, tells a good story of how "Chief" Bender, the Athletics' great Chippewa Indian pitcher, once nearly sent Ira Thomas to an untimely grave in the belief that he was slaying George himself.

"It happened back in 1906 when I was new with the Highlanders," says George. "One day when we were playing Philadelphia, Griffith, the New York manager, sent me out on the coach lines with instructions to 'get Bender's goat.' I was stationed on the third base side, while Griff himself took the first base position and together we set out to arouse the ire of the Redskin.

"'Get the ball over, you big wigwam builder,' I yelled to Bender.

"'What's that?' he yelled, astonished that a raw busher should take such liberties with one of the stars of the big league.

"'You heard what I said,' I replied. 'Get the ball over the plate, you big stiff and quit your stalling.'

"That made the chief so mad that he started to talk fight. He was the picture of outraged dignity.

"But the madder he became, the fresher I got and finally he got so riled up that he informed me that he would 'get' me sooner or later. Well, about a week later his chance came, or he thought it had come. Ira Thomas was sent in to bat for somebody and Bender, thinking that it was I, made up his mind to bean me.

STUDEBAKER WINS AS USUAL

It was an old familiar sight to see "Old Bullet" swoop across the tape a WINNER. Some people were surprised, others who were driving her sisters were not. Last year "Old Bullet" won on a tour around the world and could not be here to defend her title as "Champion of Stewart Avenue Hill" but her younger sisters were there and incidently set a new record for the class on the "Hill."

The Studebaker "20"

was no surprise, only to the prejudiced who seemed to be. The sentiment of the crowd was that old mean saying,

"I Told You So"

The newspaper boys came around and asked us if we were going to say anything in the papers about winning, as you have quit advertising. This remark made us write these few lines to our friends and customers. WE HAVE NOT QUIT ADVERTISING, but we are so far oversold, the demand is so far in excess of the supply that we are simply trying to catch up, and want to assure our friends THAT THEY ARE ALL WINNERS AND IT WILL PAY YOU TO WAIT JUST A LITTLE WHILE LONGER.

STUDEBAKER QUALITY, STUDEBAKER PRICE, AND STUDEBAKER SERVICE. Think of it and you will wait. These winning cars were equipped with FIRESTONE TIRES.

Saratoga Race Will Be Rich This Season

Thirty-One Star Horses Have Entered Big Event and It Is Rapidly Becoming One of the Turf Classics

SARATOGA, N. Y., May 24.—The Saratoga Special, one of the best of the two-year-old races that will be run at Saratoga Springs in August, has closed with thirty-one subscriptions. It is a rich sporting stakes, and when it was founded by the late William C. Whitney it was intended to be the richest fixture of the turf.

John E. Madden is the heaviest nominator, with three, while Richard T. Wilson and H. K. Knapp, who race under the name of the Oneck Stables, have taken two each. Under the conditions of the race, it is possible to take as many nominations of three each as may be desired, but it is incumbent to name the colt or filly that is to race at a fixed time before the running.

Among others who have made nominations are August Belmont, C. K. G. Billings, John Sanford, Richard F. Carman, Woodford Clay, Frederick Johnson, Alex Smith Cochran, J. N. Camden and Andrew Miller.

The entries for the Whitney Memorial Handicap Steeplechase, which will be one of the features of the spring meeting of the Piping Rock Racing association, have closed, and the list is a guarantee of a race that will bring back all the glories of cross-country sport.

The race was included in the attractive program that will be offered for the meeting on June 5, 7 and 9, at the suggestion of Harry Payne Whitney, who generously offered a purse of $5,000, with the addition of a cup valued at $500, to the owner winning twice, not necessarily consecutively, making it the most valuable offering of the year for the jumpers.

Practically every one of the tried performers of merit is in the list, and with them several new aspirants for fame in the field.

Twenty-eight have been named, including Coligny, The Welkin, Waterspeed, Naushon, Ticket of Leave, Delirium and Wooltex.

Sons of Eli Are Champs

NEW YORK, May 24.—Yale alumni and undergraduates are discussing the prospects of a championship baseball team for the Blue this season. The remarkable record made by the varsity nine to date has encouraged the belief that Yale has an excellent chance to capture both the Princeton and Harvard series. Since the season opened early in April, Yale has played twenty-five games, of which all but three have been won. The University of Pennsylvania is the only college to defeat the Eli players, taking one of the three-game series. The other two defeats were administered by the New York Giants, both the "Cubs" and regulars winning five-inning games from Yale.

Three small only two games to be played before the Princeton and Harvard series begin. Tomorrow Yale plays Cornell at Ithaca, and on Tuesday Williams comes to New Haven. On May 31 the first Princeton game is scheduled and on June 21 the third and final game of the Harvard series will be played should a deciding contest be needed. Since the double defeat at the hands of the Giants, the Yale nine has scored six ten consecutive victories, several of which have been extra inning contests.

NEW ENTRIES IN BIG RACE

NEW YORK, May 24.—Judging by the names which appear as subscribers to the "owners' fund" and the "replenishment subscription," new converts have been made to the sport of thoroughbred racing through the amateur meetings of the last two years. This means much in the earnest effort now on foot to revive the sport.

C. K. G. Billings has registered life colors and made entries to many stakes. His interest as an owner of trotters is sufficient guarantee that he is going into racing in no half-hearted manner.

Doesn't Look Bright For Boat Events

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 24.—With storm clouds handing over the river and strong probabilities of rain and wind at any time, conditions for the Pennsylvania-Navy boat races here this afternoon The races will be rowed over the inner course if weather conditions at 4 o'clock permit.

Frank Klaus nd Eddie McGoorty will box six rounds at Pittsburg on Saturday, May 24.

THROW AWAY BUSINESS CARES BY VISITING PIEDMONT LAKE

One of the Best Spots for Recreation Is at Piedmont Park, Where Everyone Now Takes a Plunge

At the entrance to Piedmont park stands a monument.

Its base rises from a plot of green and it towers upward toward the blue sky, a veritable Rock of Gibralter, unyielding and firm, the mute figures on its top silent testimonials of eternal world peace.

It is a fitting object to greet the observer as he steps from the street car. for it is significant of its surroundings and a harbinger of the peace that it sentinels, peace in the broad green sweep of land, peace in the blue sky above, peace in the open country which lies beyond it.

For in Piedmont park of a summer's day the wearied city man will find such peace as he cannot have between towering walls of sable skyscrapers and among crowded streets panting with the rush of humanity.

Other parks have zoos, and amusements, circle swings and carefully tended shrubs and flowers; but in Piedmont park there is something broader and healthier, a park only for those who would seek the quiet and freshness of Nature as she is, a park of wholesome activity and healthy clean-minded exercise.

The only thing that Piedmont park has in common with other parks is peanuts; but what is a park without peanuts?

And you can get away from even these if you follow the green border of the lake past the bathing houses and the swing to the edge of the woods and beyond.

The broad stone steps start near the foot of the Peace monument and open at their base on the wide circle of the race track. Inside it is a tremendous sweep of green grass. Go there some Saturday afternoon and you will find it alive and teeming with days and young men. They are playing baseball, and if there is one spot where baseball thrives in the city of Atlanta it is Piedmont park, where there is enough room for a dozen home runs to be hit on a straight line and strung out together without clashing with a board fence.

There is room enough for half a dozen diamonds within this race track, although but four are generally used there.

To the left, at the foot of the green bank which slopes down from the Piedmont Driving club, tennis courts are in process of construction. Here workmen have been engaged for weeks in grading the earth, putting up wire netting, and smoothing out hard dirt surfaces. Seven courts in all will be erected here, and they will be finished next week. They are open to the public. First come, first served.

But the lake's the thing. It is a big lake, Clara Mere, almost as large as Lakewood, and wide enough and long enough to tuck Grant park lake away in one corner without knowing it.

There will be a big day at the lake next Thursday, the day when it will be opened to the public for boating and bathing. Never before in the history of Atlanta has such a place been provided for young and old alike.

Last year Piedmont lake was the most popular spot from Buckhead to East Atlanta. This year it should prove an even greater success, for nothing is lacking that Park Manager Dan Carey could think of to make it a better and more beautiful place.

A concrete bottom has been installed in the girls' and women's section. Here the water is at its deepest not over five feet. For weeks the pipes have been pouring water into the lake day and night. They line the edge of this pool, and there is another big cistern pouring water into the lake at the extreme western end.

They say that it will be twelve more days before the lake is full, but already the water is creeping far up the red banks on either side of it. By next Thursday there will be enough water to float sixty times as many people as the thousands who expect to visit the lake on that day.

New dressing rooms and lockers have been built, all the buildings have been painted a fresh green, a concrete walk has been laid around the bathing pool. There are enough lockers to accommodate 444 people.

Two towers have been put up in the lake in the northern end, where all the swimming will take place. They are placed in spots where the swimmer most often begins to feel weary in a trip to and from the opposite shore.

There will be no swimming this year on the southern side of the bridge which divides the lake in half. At that end there will be boating. A number of boats have been ordered and will be installed by opening day.

The rest room is situated at the far end of Clara Mere, while there is a soda fount, restaurant, etc., near the bathing pool.

Piedmont lake teems with fish, but no one is allowed to catch them or to try to catch them even. (They are two different questions, you know.) The government recently stocked the lake with fish, and they swarm in it from shore to shore.

Baseball diamonds, swimming, boating and tennis, what more could a man in search of wholesome athletics require?

Cornell Leads Universities In Athletics

Boys From Ithaca Have Won 13 Out of 49 Championships Since 1909—Yale Next in Line With 9 Wins

ITHACA, N. Y., May 24.—The claim that Cornell is the "Greatest Athletic University," made by the Cornell "Daily Sun," was borne out by inspection of records.

Cornell is credited with winning 13 out of 49 championships since the fall of 1909. Yale is next with 9.

Princeton follows with 8, Harvard 5, Columbia 5, Pennsylvania 3, Army 1, Navy 1, Swarthmore 1 and Johns Hopkins 1.

In the major sports—crew, football, track and baseball—Cornell has won four championships. Princeton has won a like number, Harvard 2, Pennsylvania 2 and Yale 1. The contention is made that Princeton should rank second to Cornell, as Yale's honors have been won, in all but one case, in tennis, swimming and golf.

It is stated that forty-nine championships have been decided since the fall of 1909, of which thirteen have been won by Cornell, leaving thirty-six to be divided among eleven other institutions. Delving deeper into figures and comparative percentages, the "Sun" states that Cornell has won 4333 per cent. as many championships as have all five of her chief competitors.

In the 1909-1910 season Cornell won in crew, cross-country track, hockey and fencing. 1911-1912, crew, cross-country and wrestling, while in the present series victories have been achieved in basket ball and wrestling with seven sports, three classed as major, still to be competed for.

MOTOR RACES BIG FEATURE

NEW YORK, May 24.—Fifty nights of high class cycle racing at the Brighton Beach Stadium motordrome has just been announced for the coming season, which will be inaugurated on the night of Memorial day. The schedule includes every sort of event conceable, running the gamut from special match races, handicaps, sweepstakes, championships for individuals and teams to international races between the premier motor cycle riders of the east and west.

The attractive programme will wind up with a twelve-hour team race, in which the cream of pilots will match wits and brawn. This event will hold the boards on Saturday and Sunday, September 13 and 14.

A strong feature has been arranged for the opening night. Arthur Chappie and Hartley Thomas have been matched for a speed test, best two out of three heats. Chappie is the acknowledged "Speed King," while Thomas gives every indication of being the New York marvel's closest rival for championship honors the coming summer.

Another interesting feature is scheduled for the night following the opening. The John J. McGraw sweepstakes, a handicap affair, will attract lovers of the sport. The race is thus designated in honor of the doughty commander of the champion Giants. The Little Napoleon of the diamond has graciously consented to act as starter of the race which bears his famed name. He has promised to bring his Giants and a detachment of Philadelphia players to the Brighton course to see him fire the gun that will send the speed demons on their mad dash.

The crowd at the recent final game for the English Football association cup (soccer) in Crystal palace, London, numbered 121,919, who paid over $45,000 to see Aston Villa beat Sunderland 0 goal to 0. A total of 477 elevens have entered for next season's competition.

MAIN WHEEL IS LAJOIE

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 24.—Napoleon Lajoie is still regarded as the main cog in the Cleveland infield.

"This is Larry's eighteenth year in the game," remarked Manager Birmingham, of the Naps, recently. "But he will be good for at least three more seasons. There are two things in his favor where ordinarily a ball player would have faded out. In the first place, he works without physical effort. There is no wasted energy in his motion—no useless wear and tear. Larry glides rather than jumps or runs. In the second place, he works by intuition. He doesn't have to keep keyed up in regard to the next play. He knows which, where and how to make it as the play arrives without another thought.

"As for batting, he hit .368 last season and will be above .350 this year. I'd rather see Lajoie at bat in a tight spot than any man that ever lived."

CARPENTIER WON'T FIGHT

LONDON, May 24.—Despite the rumor to the contrary, it is emphatically stated that Bombardier Wells and George Carpentier will meet in Ghent on the afternoon of June 1. Wells is, of course, also open to defend his title to the Lonsdale against Packey Mahoney, if the Irishman secures the necessary backing. Wells is far from the idea of retiring from the ring evidently, for there is talk of him visiting Australia. The success of the English boxers in Sydney, where recently Johnny Summers scored his third consecutive victory, has whetted the appetite of several of our well known men. Owen Moran is said to be waiting for "terms," and Kid Lewis, in the event of proving successful in his contest with Joe Starmer, may find his way to Sydney. Digger Stanley is another champion who is contemplating a visit to Australia.

Burns a Star Says M'Graw

Giant Boss Does Not Often Boost a Player, but Burns Is Exception

NEW YORK, May 24.—When Manager John McGraw praises a ball player, it is the unusual. The leader of the Giants is taciturn regarding his men, but he enthuses over George Burns, the recruit secured from Utica, of the New York State league team last fall.

Burns is a product of St. Johnsville, N. Y., which is at Utica's side door. He played ball for his native town, then for Utica, where "Sadie" McMahon, Giant scout, assigned by McGraw to find the best outfielder in the minors, saw him. McMahon claims he also saw Eddie Murphy at Baltimore and could have had him for $1,500, but preferred Burns at $6,000 and McGraw says Burns is worth the difference. What Connie Mack, who has Murphy, says remains to be seen, but every time he looks at Murphy he grins.

Also, Burns is pretty certain to be left alone by the league bullies. He is the best boxer in the National, with the possible exception of Al Bridwell. He is also a good shark. To a man the Giants will back Burns against any pool player in the league.

Players say Burns is a baserunner marvel. He does both, the "hook" and "fall-away" to either side of the bag, something very few players are able to duplicate.

Speaking of Burns, McGraw says:

"Burns has more natural playing strength than any outfielder I've seen in years. He may never be a Cobb or Speaker. By 'playing strength' I mean he is more proficient in all the things required of an outfielder. He is as clean a fielder as you ever saw, a great thrower, a good hitter, and wonderful baserunner."

LAGER BEER CAN BE MADE AT HOME FOR ONE CENT A GLASS

CINCINNATI, O., May 25.—Through a recent invention of an expert brewmaster of this city a sparkling and foaming Lager Beer can be made right at home for one cent a glass. He has concocted Barley Malt and Hops, the principle ingredients of Beer, so that simply by the addition of water and sugar a genuine and pure Lager Beer can be made. Easily made in any kitchen, no apparatus, no experience necessary, a few minutes does the work. It is claimed by many that the Beer made by this method is better and purer than the best Brewery Beer, and above all saves the Brewers' enormous profits. The question of the legality of his method has been carefully investigated by the highest authorities and found to be legitimate in every respect. He has written a very interesting booklet giving the "Secrets of Brewing Beer at Home" and by writing to A. S. Shih, Brewmaster, 1206 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O., he will be more than pleased to mail his booklet absolutely free to any one sending their name and address.—(Advt.)

INJURY PUTS CRAIG AWAY

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—A kick on the head, received in the Pennsylvania-Michigan football game last fall, may prevent Walter Craig, the University of Pennsylvania athlete, from taking part in any more competitions on the track or gridiron. Craig played quarterback in several games last year and was a member of the University of Pennsylvania's one-mile relay team this spring.

Recently he suffered several attacks of paralysis, said to be due to the old football injury, and physicians have ordered him to give up all forms of competitive athletics.

The boxing contest between Bombardier Wells and Georges Carpentier will take place at Ghent on Sunday, June 1, where an exhibition is now in progress.

DON'T make your car pay for your tire experiments. Increase your car's efficiency, and reduce the upkeep expense by equipping with

Firestone
NON-SKID TIRES

Car owners of experience have proved the correcting resiliency, the mileage and security value of the Firestone tough, pliable tread.

H. S. Firestone's book, "What's What in Tires" tells how and why.

Diamond Tire users get maximum mileage at minimum expense

In our engineering department we have men who have made a life business of tire construction.

That's why, in Diamond Tires, you get a tough, elastic, wear-resisting tire, as well as a side wall that will not break above the bead—a No-Clinch construction that prevents rim cutting.

Diamond

Tires

In an effort to give you the greatest mileage at the least expense, our engineers discovered Perfect 3-Point Rim Contact—that holds the rim with a vise-like grip.

Another advance step in tire construction is the more air-room, insuring more resiliency and greater ability to withstand shocks and strains—another exclusive Diamond more mileage advantage

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

Come See The New Type Tires

You who ever have rim-cuts—
You whose tires lack capacity—

We urge you to come and see tires that can't rim-cut—the oversize tires.

The tires which far outsell all others, after years and years of tests.

You'll See

You will see at a glance that No-Rim-Cut tires make rim-cutting forever impossible.

You will see they are larger than clincher tires—over the rated size.

In air capacity, they exceed oldtype tires by an average of 16.7 per cent.

You know that these features must mean big economies, if the tires themselves are the best men make. And the verdict is that Goodyears are.

No Extra

No-Rim-Cut tires now cost the same as standard clincher tires.

As our output increased, the saving in cost has been given in full to users. No-Rim-Cut tires are selling today about 11 per cent lower than last year.

Now there is no extra price to deduct from the savings these new-type tires insure you.

In 1912 the demand for Goodyears was almost ten times larger than in 1909. All because of this new-type tire.

And men today are quitting clincher tires faster than ever before.

Come see why. Then make a comparison. Let your mileage figures, let your tire upkeep win you to these modern tires.

Write for the Goodyear Tire Book—14th year edition. It tells all known ways to economize on tires.

Atlanta's Hospitality.

It has been a rare pleasure as well as distinction for Atlanta to have as its guests during the past ten days the three great assemblies of the Presbyterian church in America. Never before have all the branches of this historic faith met at the same time and in the same city. Though their business or administrative affairs were conducted independently, they united each evening to counsel together on those vital interests that concern their common problems and ideals. And so, in spirit at least, the old boundary lines of North and South, East and West, the old divisions in matters of detail were swept away; and, as one of the distinguished commissioners declared, "Atlanta became a word synonymous in religious circles with the most progressive strides made by Presbyterians since the Cival war."

The entertainment of so great a convention would have taxed any community less resourceful or less hospitable than Atlanta. The official delegates numbered fifteen hundred or more and besides these there were continual streams of visitors from neighboring States and cities. Atlantians rose to the need and graces of the occasion as they always do when called upon to serve a worthy cause. The city's homes were opened and everything possible was done to make the visitors feel that they were not strangers but welcome members of the big Atlanta family.

One of the most delightful characteristics of this community is the fact that in its vigorous growth to the proportions of a metropolis, it has never lost the spirit of simple neighborliness or a homelike greeting to those who are its guests.

In Europe war takes such a running start that it continues even after peace is declared.

It is about time to be reminded again of the amount of the per capita circulation.

The old-fashioned embezzler who fled to Canada these days would sojourn in one of Uncle Sam's institutions.

Rural Schools and Rural Life.

The problem of keeping men on the farm is largely one of providing for rural district school advantages that will compare favorably with those of the city. Secretary of Agriculture Houston well expressed this idea when he said in a recent interview:

"Take a farmer with six small children, for whom he desires to provide an education. They will be sent to the country school as long as some one can be found to take charge of it, but at best the education received there is meager. If he would give them an education which will be of benefit to them, he must send them away to some institution of learning, entailing perhaps greater expense than he can afford. He must either maintain his farm at the expense of the education of his children, or move to one of the large cities. So, education, among other things, is driving occupants of farms to the cities."

There is no greater duty upon the Legislature of Georgia than that of providing adequate means and funds for the upbuilding of our country schools. The new education law enacted a few years ago has done much to perfect this system and under the able leadership of the State Superintendent of Education our teachers and school officials are rendering earnest and efficient service in rural districts. But there is much yet to be done in order that the average country school in Georgia may stand comparison with the city school and thereby afford the family on the farm the advantages to which it is entitled.

For one thing, the length of the country school term should be extended and its course of studies elevated. For another, more high schools that will fit boys and girls for college or for the practical needs of life should be established. More teachers should be employed and all of them should be better paid, to the end that rural school teaching may command the highest talent to be found.

The rains came in time to save the reputation of congress' garden seed.

It never rains but it puts crops in the grass.

A Case For the Grand Jury.

Since the publication in The Journal last Friday of a dictograph conversation alleged to have taken place among certain well known Atlantians, the civic atmosphere has been tense with inquiry and indignation, the papers have been filled with charges and countercharges, the integrity of private citizens and public officials has been made a grave issue and the community's sentiment has crystallized into a clear-cut demand that this affair be probed through all its windings and probed deeply until the guilt or innocence of those involved is clearly established.

As to the truth or falsity of any of the charges made, The Journal has expressed no opinion, and does not now. We do say, however, that these accusations strike at the honor and usefulness of public officials as well as that of individual citizens. They cast a cloud upon the city itself and give rise to all manner of sordid gossip under which the good people of Atlanta cannot afford to rest. These charges must be investigated, promptly, intelligently and exhaustively.

If there is corruption in the city detective or police department, it should be laid bare and brought to account. If there is not, then the uprightness and worth of these officials should be duly vindicated.

If private citizens have been guilty of corrupt practices or of criminal attempts to destroy the usefulness of the police authorities, such citizens, whoever they may be, should be dealt with as the offense deserves. If unjustly accused, they likewise are entitled to complete exoneration.

The all important thing, however, is that the great public of Atlanta be avenged of the monstrous wrong against its welfare which these charges imply. This is no individual affair. If the acts or the conditions alleged be true, then the good name and the rights of this entire community have been outraged. We are told, on the one hand, that bribery of public officials has been attempted, that plots have been engineered to thwart or overthrow public servants in the performance of their duty, that practices, condemned alike by courts and conscience, have been perpetrated; and, on the other hand, we are told that the police and detective department has sought to foil the ends of justice and has trafficked in vice.

Charges like these, we repeat, reach vastly further than the individuals against whom they are directed. They strike into the very heart of the community's safety and welfare; for, if such a state of affairs as is alleged does exist, either in respect to the private citizens or the officials concerned, then the fair name of Atlanta is at stake and there is sorely needed work for the courts to do.

The people of this good city will stand for no such practices as are charged. They realize that to pass such offenses by or to permit them to go unpunished, would compound whatever crimes have been committed. The public, therefore, demands the full truth and full justice not only in the Phagan case itself but also with reference to the conduct of those involved in the collateral issues that have arisen.

Let the grand jury proceed as speedily as possible to a rigorous investigation of this entire affair.

As a body charged with the community's moral well-being and with the duty of bringing evil doers to an accounting before the law, it cannot afford to ignore the far-reaching charges and countercharges that are now public.

Let the truth be established and justice completely done.

Open-Air Schools.

One of the most interesting and wholesome tendencies in the school affairs of today is that which looks to a steady and abundant supply of fresh air for pupils during the hours of their class room work. In some communities, indeed, the old-fashioned class room has been abandoned, or changed beyond recognition, and students are taught practically out of doors. The result of these experiments leave no doubt that boys and girls who are so fortunate as to attend such schools are more vigorous in mind and body, more easily controlled, more apt to learn and less likely to sickness than those who are confined in close or heated quarters.

A particularly striking instance in point is described in a recent issue of the American Journal of Public Health, by Dr. Walter W. Roach, a supervising medical inspector in the public school system of Philadelphia. The teachers and patrons of one of the schools agreed to test the value of the open-air theory by a direct comparison between the progress of pupils taught in an open-window class room and that of the pupils of a parallel grade taught in an ordinarily ventilated and heated room in the same building. "It was decided," says Dr. Roach, "to devote one room, with the heat cut off and the windows wide open, to teaching in nature's air with a minimum of artificial tempering, a normal third-grade class the regular third-grade work. It happened that in this same school there was another class of equal number of pupils, occupying a room heated and ventilated in the ordinary way, so that it was possible to keep accurate records and make a fair comparison."

In extremely cold weather, the children in the open-window room were protected with extra wraps and on rare occasions the temperature was warmed to about fifty degrees. They were duly safeguarded against draughts and were given physical exercise and freedom not possible in the ordinary class room.

At the end of twelve weeks, the period of test, the average weight of the boys and girls in this room had increased two pounds, while that of the pupils in the other room showed an average increase of only about one pound. It should be said in this connection that the experiment bestirred a certain genial rivalry between the teachers and also between the pupils of the two grades under comparison, so that those of the ordinary class room took particular pains to see to it that their atmosphere did not become overheated. Thus the example set by the open windows was doubtless responsible, in a measure at least, for such gain as was noted in the children of the ordinarily ventilated room; yet it should be remembered that their increase in weight was only half that of the others.

The comparison showed further that the scholastic progress of the children in the open-window room was more rapid than that of their neighbors, that their record of atendance was higher and that, on the whole, their discipline was better. Especially noteworthy is the fact that they were almost entirely free from "colds."

This is but one among hundreds of kindred experiments that have been conducted in various parts of the country and that are equally convincing of the value of open-air school work. The housing of children in close or overheated rooms where they are compelled to sit long hours in vitiated air inevitably results, as Dr. Roach declares, "in undernourished and devitalized bodies" and leads to all manner of deficiencies, if not positive disease. These are the children who "catch cold," who are irritable, who lag in their studies, or keep pace only through nervous strain, and to whom school work is a frowning task rather than the inspiriting thing it should be.

There has been a vast deal of progress within recent years in the methods of heating and ventilating school rooms but evidently much remains to be done. Thoughtful parents are looking more and more favorably on the fresh-air methods of teaching, and it is not too much to expect that the public will soon demand the adoption of such methods in all our common schools.

If the plan of an open-window school room can be carried out comfortably and safely in the rigorous winter climate of the northeast, certainly it is practicable in Southern communities. Indeed, we need not turn to distant States or cities to find striking examples of the efficiency of the out-door or fresh-air school room. This progressive idea has taken root in Atlanta where it has already yielded very fruitful results. It is to be hoped that boards of education and teachers generally will recognize the virtue and the vital need of fresh air to the health and efficiency of pupils and will apply this principle, in so far as is possible, to their particular schools.

A New Menace to Balkan Peace.

Should the fighting between the Greek and the Bulgarian troops near Saloniki continue, the future safety of the Balkans would be seriously menaced. It was due to their steadfast alliance that the little peninsula States won such sweeping and rapid victories over the Turks. Should they now fall out among themselves, it is doubtful that any of them would enjoy their due share of the fruits of their common cause.

A general war among the Balkan States would almost inevitably call for intervention by the large Powers; it might call for a re-partitioning of the territory recently wrested from Turkey and such a division, once begun, would be made in the interest of the Powers rather than in that of the several Balkan governments.

It is possible, however, that the fighting reported near Saloniki is simply a bit of hot skirminshing between army detachments and that an amicable agreement between Bulgaria and Greece will soon be effected. Indeed, King Constantine, of Greece, is said to be endeavoring to arrange a neutral zone between the two armies.

The Genealogist

MRS. MINNIE E. HOGAN.

College Park's comunity has been wonderfully favored in having with them several of the brightest lights of the Presbyterian assembly.

Rev. J. S. Norris, D. D., from Pine Bluff, Ark. (where he has built up a strong and liberal church of 550 members), occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church and preached a most instructive sermon on "The Church." Reading for scriptural lesson the tenth chapter of Numbers: "The orderly march of Israel from Egypt to Canaan, symbolical of 'the church,' orderly, marching to the heavenly Canaan." Two points of special interest to all people saved, or unsaved, were the "need of an objective: We are going to heaven." 2. Moses' invitation to Hobab, "Come and go with us and we will do thee good." I do not know of a sermon more appreciated, or one that left a deeper impression upon his congregation. He made a most earnest plea to the unsaved "to accept Christ and go with us." One young man came before the session manifestly seeking light as a result of this convincing truth. We hope to have the pleasure of hearing Dr. Norris again.

Dr. Barton D. Bigler, of Racine, Wis., occupied the Methodist pulpit and preached a most impressive sermon on the subject of "Christianity," from John III. 14, 15, 16, 17. Telling us with such earnest, quet dignity, of the great Love," the foundation of Christianity: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believed in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The inffable sweetness and convincing truth of the great broad love of Christ for humanity. His quiet and forceful delivery impressed his hearers that that love, was the motive power of the world. His great desire in prayer for one soul for that day. I am sure it not lost, as we could hear that sermon of the great love of life, of home and the whole world without being very seriously impressed. Love means all that is true, noble and good, the purest of all of God's gifts. "For God so loved the world."

In the home he was genial, wholesome, and companionable, deeply appreciative of all the south had done for the Presbytery, and the individual kindness shown him. He was surprised to find an educational center and not a typical country village. The fact that a number of the people he had met in his congregation were some of the originals in "The Circuit Rider's Wife," and in meeting in his host and hostess for the day the original "Brother A and Sister Z," of "The Circuit Rider's Wife," was still more amusing to him. He was deeply interested in the former and personal side of the author's life.

Dr. John Willis Baer, of Los Angeles, Cal., was with us at night at Cox college, and delivered an instructive, deep and helpful address to the girls and boys of Cox college and the Georgia Military academy. His subject was "Life," making three impressive points, "A Clean Conscience, a Clean Life and a Tender Heart." He exhorted all "not to get into a rut, for the only difference between a rut and a grave was a matter of depth. He said that Carnegie said he would give $200,000,000 for ten more years of life, and that it was impossible to set a value upon life, one can not measure it, or weigh it, neither conceive what life means to them, until they have wasted it.

Dr. Baer paid a beautiful tribute to Henry Grady, "the man who had loved the nation into union," his tender heart and loving kindness to his mother; that Mr. Grady was not ashamed to go and put his arms round her, sit in her lap and hold her head between his two hands and kiss her dear old face. He pleaded with he boys to be always ready to draw out a chair for those older and to be gentle, kind and loving to their loved ones, that love was life, that life was love. College Park is very appreciative in having Dr. Baer to speak so beautifully of the rue life to her girls and boys. We hope to have him with us again.

Dr. Baer was for a long time field secretary of Y. P. S. C. E. and from the home mission board of the Northern Presbyterian church to the presidency of Occidental college, a large Presbyterian co-educational institution of Los Angeles, Cal. He has this to say about Christian colleges: "From this viewpoint on the Pacific coast where the orient and the occident meet, looking east as we can over our own land, and west across the Pacific ocean, it certainly is evident that there has been a sane moment toward denominational comity of the fields at home and abroad. Increasingly Presbyterians are becoming desirous that our boards at home and foreign missions shall be economical of *men and money and careful not to duplicate ma*chinery. It seems to me the policy of our great missionary agencies along that line should be applauded and approved. Self-respecting denominationalism of the right kind will always exalt Jesus Christ and make him first. I think, too, another outstanding forward step which we Presbyterians have made during the past year is the raising of the academic standard of our Christian colleges, placing them in many instances alongside of the best in the land. It is no longer necessary to apologize for our curricula. Sound teaching and pure living go hand in hand. And while we have strengthened in every way our Christian colleges we have remembered the Presbyterian youth who go in great numbers to the state universities by providing them with university pastors and counselors and in some places erecting and equipping buildings which have become the centers for Christian influences of the right kind. Personally I feel that the pastors all over the land have struck a more positive note in their preaching and on that account such movements as our men's brotherhood and the laymen's missionary movement have not lacked in virility, but are fostering the fact of Christ. There are many that will be pleased to read this fact, and profit by same.

Dr. A. McIver Fraser, D. D., another visitor that College Park is honored with having among us. He is the son of Thomas B. Fraser and Sarah Margaret McIver. Thomas B. was a fine planter and a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church, through his mother he descends from one of the first members of the "Society of Friends" that came to America; his great-grandfather was Alexander Love, who was a Presbyterian and married Margret Moore, whose parents were such strict Qukers, that Friends' Society disowned her for her outgoing in marriage." Her parents, Andrew and Margaret Moore, he a grandson of John Moore, who emigrated to Ireland from near Glasgow, Scotland in 1612. Andrew was largely instrumental in establishing Sandsbury Friends' meeting and in erecting the first meeting house there in 1725. The women of the family were strictly religious and many beautiful tributes of love and appreciation have been paid them, strict Presbyterians, or Friends, they were consecrated Christian characters.

Dr. A. McIver Fraser was the first Presbyterian minister of the lines I have mentioned, his maternal line. He was elected three times to the presidency of the Theological seminary at Columbia, S. C., but the southern presbytery thought he was of more service and his influence needed more at Staunton, Va., as pastor of the First Presbyterian church. He is also dean of the Mary Baldwin seminary, a Presbyterian college for young ladies, which is under the supervision of Dr. Fraser, and one of the finest schools for girls in America.

Dr. Fraser came to our little city on a mission of love, for he came with message from his aunt, who is now past eighty, to her cousins, Mrs. J. J. Goodrum and Mr. A. F. Simrel, of Newnan, Ga. This aunt of Dr. Fraser is Miss Eliza E. Cooper, who is a retired principal of Sumter Female institute, a talented and successful teacher.

When the people of Staunton, Va., invited President Woodrow Wilson to spend his birthday in his old home Dr. A. McIver Fraser asked him to be his guest in the place of his birth, the old Presbyterian manse, now occupied by Dr. Fraser.

College Park, Ga., May 23, 1913.

THE INCOME TAX

XVIII.—INHERITANCE TAXES.
BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

When the income tax law of 1894 was passed it contained a provision which made it something else besides what it purported to be—a national inheritance tax law. It provided that a tax of 2 per cent should be assessed upon all inheritances and gifts received during the year. It applied only to personal property but it is true, and it is said that the exemption of real property was made because of a feeling that the land owners already bore their fair share of the country's taxes.

How nearly the American people came to getting a full fledged inheritance tax law in 1909 will never be known, but it is known that some hersh work was done to induce President Taft to give up the fight and to take up the corporation tax instead. It will be remembered that when the constitutionality of the inheritance tax provision of the law of 1894 was attacked in the case of Knowlton against Moore, the supreme court declared an inheritance tax to be constitutional without apportionment. When President Roosevelt was still in office and saw the revenues of the government steadily falling below the expenditures, he cast about for a vehicle through which to replenish the treasury, and he hit upon the inheritance tax with a graduated rate that would take a small toll from the small inheritance and a heavy one from the swollen fortune as it would pass from one to another by inheritance.

When Mr. Taft became the nominee of his party for the presidency he did not accept the Roosevelt idea at the outset. Rather, in his speech of acceptance he came out with the statement that he believed that a constitutional income tax law could be enacted, leaving the general impression that he would be in favor of such a law. However, when he came to write his inaugural address he reached a different conclusion, this time holding that it would be most unfortunate to pass such a law in the face of the decision of the supreme court in 1895, the effect of which, he thought, would be to undermine the public faith in the nation's highest tribunal, which would either have to reverse itself in whole or in part, or else stand by its own reversal of a hundred years of interpretation. Therefore, he recommended the enactment of an inheritance tax. His recommendation did not arouse the general support for the proposition that he had hoped, and finally it became evident that the inheritance tax sentiment was not as strong as the sentiment in favor of an income tax. It was then that he gave up his advocacy of an inheritance tax and came out for a corporation tax and a constitutional amendment making certain the constitutionality of income taxation.

There seems to be a general feeling in the United States that the national and local taxes ought to be raised wholly and distinctly from different sources, and the inheritance tax seems to be one that the states themselves have felt they could hvy with success and constitute a domain which the federal government ought not invade.

* * *

The inheritance tax is by no means a new engine of government finance. Before the Star of the East had shone over the hills of Judea the Romans were using it as a means of filling their public treasuries and keeping their legions in the field. There is evidence that even back further than the Romans the Egyptians used it as a source of public revenue. From those times forward it has been utilized more and more widely until today it is employed either locally or nationally by nearly all of the nations of the civilized world.

Its friends laud it in glowing terms. They say that no other tax is easier to defend or has in it more to commend. Pointing out that it does not touch private property during the life of the owner, they assert that it thus places no tax upon business activities. The simplicity of its administration, its freedom from placing burdens on the poor, the impossibility of its being shifted, all commend it to its friends.

Under one name or another it exists in the Australasian states, in Great Britain, France, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Austria-Hungary, Italy and nearly all other European countries. In the United States less than half of the states have failed to enact inheritance tax laws. In many of them there is a graduated tax, which permits small estates to be exempted, moderate ones to be taxed lightly, and big ones to be required to pay heavy taxes to the government.

Perhaps no other state in the union has had such trouble to get an inheritance tax law upon its statute books to stay as Minnesota. It enacted its first law in 1885, in the shape of a probate fee whose rate should increase with the size of the estate to be probated. This law was declared unconstitutional. In 1897 another law was passed, and it, likewise, was declared contrary to the constitution, in that it exempted real estate, did not apply to certain classes, prescribed a higher exemption to lineal than to collateral heirs, and on other grounds. A third law was passed in 1901, and it likewise discriminated in favor of lineal heirs and was declared unconstitutional. Nothing daunted, the legislature passed another law in 1905, fixing the rate at 10 per cent, and this was declared unconstitutional also, the ground being that an amendment to the constitution in 1894 legalizing the inheritance tax idea, provided that the maximum rate should be 5 per cent. The fifth attempt at making a constitutional inheritance tax resulted better—the Illinois statute was borrowed and incorporated in the state laws.

Tl is tax law exempts inheritance up to $10,000 and adopts a graduated scale above that. For any estates over the exemption up to $50,000 the rate is 1 1-2 per cent. Up to $100,000 it becomes 2 per cent, and above $100,000 it is 5 per cent. In 1906 the constitution was again amended, and in 1909 another act passed the legislature fixing a sliding scale of exemptions starting with $10,000 for the wife and going down to $100 for distant relatives, and those who were no kin. It also provides a sliding scale of tax rates beginning at 1 per cent in the case of the widows with an inheritance not exceeding $15,000 and rising to 15 per cent in the case of a distant relation or no relation where the estate exceeds $100,000. The governor vetoed the law, although it conforms generally to the Wisconsin law, and to the laws of California and Idaho.

The laws of these states exempt $10,000 in the case of a widow, $2,000 in the case of a child or husband, and on down to $100 for remote kin and strangers. The rate on the excess over the exemption up to $25,000 is 1 per cent for husband, wife or child, and rises to 3 per cent where the estate exceeds $100,000. In the case of distant relatives and strangers it begins at 5 per cent and climbs as high as as 15 per cent.

It is said that the highest inheritance tax rate in the United States is to be found in New York, where a law was enacted in 1910 with the approval of Governor Hughes. The rate goes as high as 25 per cent on estates of over $1,000,000 left to any more distant relation than brother or sister, or the wife or widow of a son or the husband of a daughter.

* * *

There is an organization known as the International Tax association, which is made up of tax experts and economists from all parts of the world. A few years ago it met in Milwaukee and drew up a model schedule for taxing inheritances. This schedule followed the New York law rather closely, except that the rates were lower, the highest rate being 15 per cent to those more distantly related than those cited in the New York law.

RICH BACHELOR GAVE ENTIRE ESTATE TO SCHOOL FOR POOR

The First Conception of Industrial School for Poor Children Was That of Dr. John De La Howe, Who Lived in Abbeville, S. C., During the Close of the Eighteenth Century

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 17.—The first conception of an industrial school for enabling poor children to obtain an education in the south was conceived by Dr. John De La Howe, a rich bachelor, who lived in Abbeville county during the close of the eighteenth century. When South Carolina was just recuperating from the Revolutionary war which had freed the thirteen American colonies from the yoke of British dominion Dr. De La Howe, displaying a public spirit and a vision of the future which stamped him as a great man, in dying bequeathed his fortune to the state as a trust for the erection of a school where poor children should be reared and given that equipment that would make them useful citizens.

During every session of the state legislature for the past quarter of a century bills seeking disposition of the De La Howe fund have been introduced. People generally had a faint idea of having heard of some such fund as the De La Howe estate which stipulated certain conditions before it could be used by the people of South Carolina. Legislators quickly railroaded all measures having to do with the De La Howe bequest and consigned them to the heap of would-be measures yearly rejected by the legislative grist mill, and thus the subject quickly passed from the attention of the law-makers only to go through the same experience year by year. Just what constitutes the De La Howe estate, its origin and the purposes which the testator had in mind is not understood by many in South Carolina.

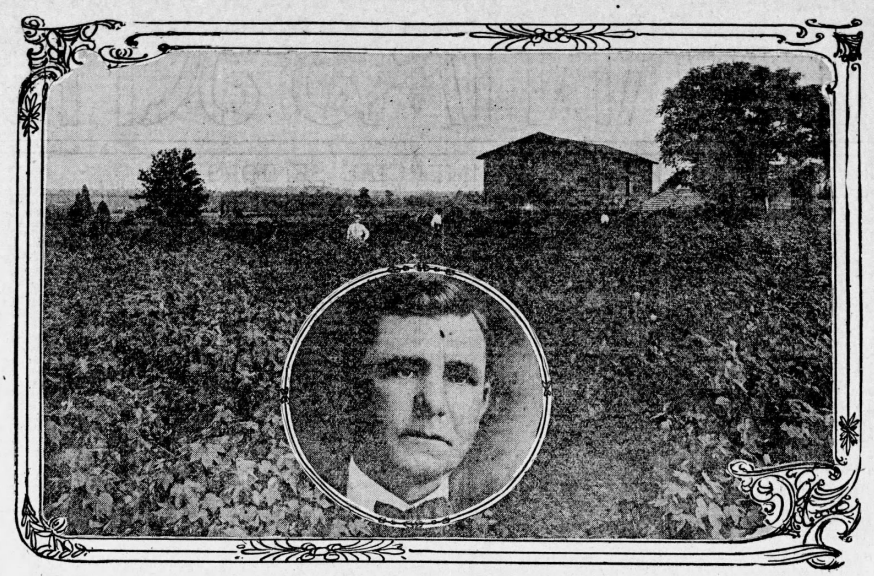
In the year 1800 Dr. John De La Howe, a rich bachelor planter, died in Abbeville county, South Carolina, leaving a will devising all of his property to trustees to be used in founding and maintaining an agricultural and mechanical school on his land in which twelve poor boys and twelve poor girls were to be supported and taught, and in which the children living in the neighborhood who chose to attend were also to be instructed.

The will contemplated that the trustees should be appointed by the agricultural society of South Carolina, and in case the society should decline to make the appointment that then the trustees should be designated by the legislature. On that point the provision was made: "and as the aim of this, my last will and testament, is to raise useful citizens, I do hereby humbly request the honorable legislature that in the above case they may be pleased to incorporate such trustees as they think proper to appoint, under such clauses and regulations as in their great wisdom shall deem meet; and for the same reason of intending to raise useful citizens to the state many whereof without such an institution be a nuisance, I beg the honorable legislature graciously pleased to keep the institution under their fatherly protection."

The agricultural society having failed to exercise the power of appointment the legislature of the state designated the trustees, and E. A. Mars, J. B. Holloway, Albert Gilbert, John U. Wardlaw and W. B. Ulrich now constitute the board holding under legislative authority.

The will was dated January 2, 1797. The farm thus left to the state contained 2,630 acres and Dr. De La Howe specified that "one thousand acres shall forever remain in wood or forest," for the purpose of supplying fuel and timber and contribute to the support of the school and the balance was to be leased to subrenters for not longer periods than fourteen years. Considerable personal property was also included in the gift, with several thousand dollars in cash.



The above picture is a typical scene in Abbeville county, where De La Howe lands are located. The inset shows Representative Harvey W. Mitchum, author of the De La Howe School for Destitute Children. The bill is now pending in the general assembly of South Carolina.

In direction with the testator's will a small school has been conducted upon the land but without coming up to the purposes which Dr. De La Howe had in mind. The income from the estate has accumulated until today there is a surplus of over $25,000 held by the trustees in addition to the 2,630 acres of land. The trustees represented to the general assembly that the public schools were supplying the same school facilities as were furnished by the De La Howe school and that the benevolent purpose of the will could better be carried out by establishing scholarships in Clemson and Winthrop for twelve poor boys and twelve poor girls. The legislature authorized the trustees to formulate the plan to maintain the twenty-four scholarships but the courts vetoed the legislative action by deciding that the proposed change nullified the will of the testator.

Dr. John De La Howe had three main purposes in view in making this gift to the state, as pointed out by the court. First the establishment and maintenance of an agricultural and mechanical school as an institution in Abbeville county stimulating and improving the industrial life of the entire community; second the training free of charge of twenty-four boys and girls, not as college men and women, but in the beginning of school life; and third the like training of the children of the neighborhood not supported by the fund.

For over a century this fund has lay practically dormant and few of the people of the state are aware of its purposes. The lands are among the richest of the farming belt of the great Piedmont country and are located in the middle of a prosperous sections of the state in Abbeville county not far from the Savannah river.

When this trust was created the state made little provision for the teaching of poor boys and girls. It was just a few years after the Revolutionary war and the state was still young and sparsely settled. Today, 116 years after Dr. De La Howe made this will, nearly all the schools are free, and there is little difference between the school facilities of the rich and the poor. But the main branches, namely, agriculture and mechanical arts, which Dr. De La Howe proposed to have taught to the children of the neighborhood, are still little taught in the public schools.

Dying Man Bequeathed His Fortune to the State as a Trust for the Erection of a School Where Such Equipment Could Be Given as Would Make the Students Useful Citizens

The far-sightedness of this benefactor is recognized by the supreme court in an opinion on this case when it says in speaking of the importance of the above branches: "It is now generally recognized that the teaching of these branches is not only practicable and advisable but absolutely essential to the progress of every community."

At the last session of the general assembly Representative H. W. Mitchum, of Clarendon county, proposed a bill to establish a state industrial school for the support of destitute children of the state and proposed that the De La Howe trust fund be used for this purpose. The Mitchum measure provided for a board of trustees to have charge of the administration of the school, and all white boys and girls between the ages of six and sixteen years, who are destitute and have neither parents or guardians to care for them, would be deemed wards of the state and assigned to this school. All booys and girls committed to the school are to remain there until twenty-one years of age unless released by orders of a judge, board of trustees or a court on habeas corpus proceedings. The children are to be taught in the school by the faculty and help earn their support by working on the farm adjoining and connected with the school. The bill passed the house but was continued by the senate until the session of 1914, when it will come up for final action.

That Dr. De La Howe must have had an early romance in his life is seen in the opening paragraph of his will which is as follows: "It is my will and desire that my remains shall be buried as near as can be to the spot where those of the late Miss Rebecca Woodin are deposited, on th hill opposite to the dwelling house wherein we both resided together, and I still do reside, on my plantation or farm named Lethe, as the last mark and testimony of my friendship and sense which I ever have retained of her merit; and it is further my will, that as soon as it can conveniently be done after my decease, a substantial brick wall shall around our sepulchers, not less than ten feet square in the clear, eight feet above ground, and two bricks thick; with a substantial door and lock, and that the whole of it shall forever be kept up and in good order, and the area within clear of bushes and weeds; that the following inscription in large iron capitals shall forever be encased in the door, Rebecca Woodin obiet Oct. rbi 1788. Joos De La Howe fundator seminarie agriculturalis, with the date of my decease."

Mrs. Tedder Found Guilty of Robbing Man of Bank Roll

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MACON, Ga., May 24.—Mrs. Frances Tedder, of Atlanta, who was found guilty last Thursday of robbing W. F. Kersey of $175, was last night sentenced to serve one year in the penitentiary. Her attorneys, John R. Cooper, immediately gave notice of an appeal.

George Douglas, her brother-in-law, has been placed on trial for the same offense, as Mrs. Tedder accused him of the robbery. It is expected that he will be vindicated.

Kersey stated that he formerly knew Mrs. Tedder in Atlanta, where she was tried for murdering her husband. He claims that he went to her home one night last winter to pay her a visit and that she gave him a drink of whisky that was "doped," and that when he came to himself his roll of $175 was missing.

Mrs. Tedder claims she was boarding with Douglas at the time and that he was the party who committed the robbery.

MISSIONARY EXHIBITION IS FEATURE OF MEETING

Cluster of Five Lights Flash Every Two Minutes, Indicating Birth of Five Chinese

(By Associated Press.)

DETROIT, Mich., May 24.—An annual feature at the Northern Baptist convention now in session here, is the "missionary exhibition" in charge of Dr. John M. Moore, secretary of the department of missionary education. Several exhibits show vividly the reasons for missionary endeavor. For instance a cluster of five lights flashing every two minutes, show that five babies are born in China with every flash, coming into a world of darkness.

There is a huge dial, the hand of which moves twice every minute indicating that with each round of the hand of the clock an immigrant enters the United States. The dial also totals the number of immigrants who have entered the country since the convention began. Last night the number was 6,592.

A chart bears a record showing this year has been the best financially in the last fifteen. When the work was organized in the missionary field of the Baptist church, six societies were forced. This was in 1814. In 1901 the income from the societies was $935,266 while last year the income was $1,819,803.

The chart shows that California leads all states per capita in gifts for the convention.

Occupying a prominent place is a "cheer up" booth, containing encouraging figures, especially a poster which shows the organization has gained forty per cent in membership since its inception in 1907.

To balance the "cheer up" booth is the "chamber of horrors" with a poster showing that one of the prominent churches in the country sent an offering of two cents to the foreign missionary society last year. It cost two cents to return a receipt.

HUFF CREDITORS WON'T ACCEPT COURT VERDICT

Decline to Receive Payment on Account of Alleged Lack of Interest

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MACON, Ga., May 24.—Under thne present decree of Judge Emory Speer, of the United States district court, that portion of the claims against the Huff estate which have not been disputed are being paid today, amounting to a little over $50,000. This represents about half principal and half interest, in some cases the interest having accrued during the fourteen years being as large as the principal.

Mrs. Jennings and Edison Huff, children of Colonel Huff, have refused to accept the $6,110 given to them by the decree of the court because it does not include interest for the last four years, while all of the other amounts awarded Colonel Huff has based his appeal.

After the money has been paid out today there will be $33,000 left in the registry of the court in addition to five and a half acres of improved property in South Macon known as the Armory property.

BREAD THAT SATISFIES

A Little Sermon for Hungry Hearts.

By Rev. Loy Warwick

Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.—Matthew 5-6.

SIN never satisfies. The path of ungodliness leads away from peace. The author of Ecclesiastes sounded all the deeps and scaled all the heights of worldly pleasure.

"I said in my heart, 'Go to now, I will prove thee with mirth, therefore enjoy pleasu e;' and behold, this also is vanity. I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards; I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kinds of fruits; I gathered silver and gold; I got me the delights of the sons of men. Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and behold all was vanity."

James Steerforth in David Copperfield tried all the paths and promises of sin only to find them vain and profitless. Your own observation and your own experience teach you that sin does not satisfy the human heart.

The religion of the heathen man leaves him restless and joyless. The heathen are not great in singing and music. This is because their religions give no joy. They have no song in the heart.

Search the paths of sin and you will find not one happy or contented man. The king of that land is at enmity with joy and has banished peace from his borders.

It is characteristic of the true religion that it does satisfy. The wine that Jesus furnished at the wedding in Cana was the best of the feast. The multitude that partook of the feast in the wilderness did all eat and were filled. Elijah was fed by the angels and went for forty days in the strength of that meat. The manna that blessed the Children of Israel in the wilderness was all they needed.

These things are parables to us. They show God is the soul-satisfying portion.

Jesus at Jacob's well said, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of. My meat is to the will of Him that sent me and to finish His work." In His love for the lost woman He forgot His physical weariness and hunger. It filled His soul with such joy to be able to help her that He forgot to eat.

Paul said, "I have learned whatsoever state I am in therewith to be content." Where had he learned it? Not in the schools of Tarsus not at the feet of Gamaliel. He learned it from Him who said, "Blessed are they that hunger after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

The rich young ruler had a hungry heart when he came to Jesus that day. With great earnestness he sought the bread that satisfies. Jesus looking at him loved him. "If thou wouldest be perfect," He said to him, "go sell all and come and follow me." But the young man refused to pay the price. He wanted peace and joy, but he wanted his great possessions more.

Saul of Tarsus paid the price and found the pearl of great value.

Joy is a fruit that will not grow in nature's barren soil. You can become a citizen of another land by a legal process, but you must be born again to enter the kingdom that means righteousness and peace and joy.

There are counterfeits and substitutes for the blessedness that Jesus gives, but brief life is their portion. One day in His courts is better than a thousand in the tents of the wicked. The little that a righteous man has is better than the treasures of sin.

PEOPLE spend their money for that which is not bread and their labor for that which does not satisfy. They go afar to find that which is near at hand and do not find it in their weary world-search. The Prodigal Son learned the lesson too late. He had lost much that he never could find.

Moses knew this great truth at the beginning of life. By faith he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. He chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God. He had respect unto the recompense of the reward. He esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. John and Joseph and Jeremiah and Bunyan in prison were more contented and far happier than most of the kings and high captains of earth. The happiest man in Georgia today is the one who best knows the Lord.

The Apostles had no silver and gold to give the lame man at the beautiful gate of the Temple. But they gave him more than gold. He went from the Temple with a new song in his heart and a new purpose in his life.

There are poor rich men in our land, and there are poor men who have more and get more out of life than a multi-millionaire. They have riches that endure and joys that will not fail. They build their houses on the Rock. Hungering and thirsting after righteousness, they are filled. Being pure in heart they see God and are content. Belonging to the royal line of the meek they inherit the earth.

SPEAKER SETTLES ONE MILEAGE PROBLEM

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Speaker Clark has settled a mileage problem, one of three affecting the rights of members to their traveling allowances. He ordered a check, covering a member's mileage account, sent to William Baltz, of Milistadt, Ill., who was elected to succeed William A. Rodenberg.

Mr. Baltz came to Washington to attend the extra session, but because of the floods in Illinois hurried back home before he was able to take the oath of office. He is now suffering from nervous prostration and may not be able to attend the extra session at all.

The speaker has recently ruled that Representatives Baltz, Henry George, of New York, and Timothy D. Sullivan, of New York, were not to be considered on the rolls of the sixty-third congress so far as any question of a quorum was concerned. Mr. Sullivan is said to be in a sanitarium in New York, and Mr. George has been in Europe for his health ever since the closing weeks of the last congress. Neither Mr. Sullivan nor Mr. George will be entitled to his mileage allowance until he appears personally in Washington. The three cases are the only mileage problems raised so far in this congress.

HART BOYS SURRENDER FOR KILLING HARNAGE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MOULTRIE, Ga., May 24.—James and Jerry Hart, participants in the Hart-Harnage fued, near Berlin, yesterday, surrendered to the sheriff today. They will ask for a commitment trial and endeavor to show that the killing of Horace Harnage and the wounding of Jasper Harnage was in self-defense and justifiable. They have secured counsel and hope to at least be able to give bond. Jasper Harnage is still in a very critical condition.

CONFESSES SLAYING WIFE AND BURNING BODY

Farmer in Indiana Set Fire to Home After Killing Wife

(By Associated Press.)

RICHMOND, Ind., May 24.—Seth Lucas, a farmer, has confessed that he killed his wife, then set fire to their home near Williamsburg last September, according to a statement of the police here today. First investigation of the fire revealed no indication of crime, but the inquiry was reopened when Lucas, acting in a peculiar manner, appeared at the police station here last Thursday. Lucas is a prisoner.

APPOINTMENTS ARE MADE BY BLEASE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 24.—Governor Blease today reappointed Messrs. Arthur Lynah, B. H. Rutledge, and John Marshall as members of the Dispensary board for Charleston county. Mr. Lynah was recommended by the delegation, Mr. Rutledge by the majority of the mayors of the county, Mayor Grace having recommended a Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Marshall was recommended by the county board of education.

The governor today appointed Dr. E. W. Pressly, of Clover, from the Fifth congressional district, vice Dr. W. W. Fennell, of Rock Hill, whose term expired, and Dr. John Lyon, of Greenwood, from the Third congressional district, vice Dr. P. G. Ellesor, whose term had expired, as members of the state board of medical examiners, they having been nominated by the South Carolina Medical association.

PHONE TALK NOT A SUBJECT FOR MONOPOLY

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Telephone conversation is not a subject for monopoly within the meaning of the Sherman anti-trust law, according to a brief filed today in the supreme court by the United States Telephone company.

The brief was in support of a request to the court to review the decision of the federal courts in Ohio that the company's contracts with 200 local exchanges throughout Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are in violation of the Sherman law. The contracts bind the local exchanges to give to rivals of the United States company no long distance business to points reached by the United States company.

The United States company claims that telephone companies cannot violate the law like manufacturers or producers of articles who may control the price by increasing or decreasing the supply. Its position is that the supply of telephone conversation is unlimited and cannot be restrained.

REMARKABLE MORTAR TARGET PRACTICE

(By Associated Press.)

PORT TOWNSEND, Va., May 24.—Announcement was made today of remarkable results of target practice yesterday with the 12-inch mortars at Fort Worden, one of the defense at the entrance to Puget Sound. The mortars were fired for the first time at fixed and movable targets in Discovery Bay, eight miles distant and hidden from the fort by forest-covered hills. The exact score has not been computed but several shots were marked as hits.

The importance of fortifications commanding Discovery Bay has long been recognized but it was not thought that the bay could be covered by fire from a distant fort. Just how the shots were directed was known only to the officers but it probably was done from a concealed station on Protection island.

You Folks Who Want Your Town to Grow--

DISEASE and poverty are twin-brothers to insanitary living-conditions.

¶ Sickness cripples the working and earning capacity. Then follows poverty and distress. This means trouble for everybody.

¶ Is your town clean and healthy? Is it disease-proof so far as correct sanitation can make it so?

¶ Is the water-supply free from contamination?

¶ Remember that a breeding-place of disease may be a scourge to your town. And remember too that such a scourge may take toll of your own home.

¶ Our specialty is SANITARY ENGINEERING.

¶ We have cleaned up and straightened out more than 300 towns. We have shown them beyond the shadow of a doubt that improvements are the best investment they ever made.

¶ We want to improve your town and we can show you that it will pay you well from every point of view.

¶ A town that is insanitary, unsightly, inconvenient and unattractive will never draw new population to itself.

¶ More than that: it won't hold its present population. The young fellows growing up, the enlightened men and women are not going to stay where the conditions are bad and out-of-date.

¶ Does your town want to grow? If it does and it YOU are concerned to have it grow the right way, write to us. We will give you all the information you want.

¶ We plan, construct, finance and operate sanitary systems, water and power plants, paving and all municipal improvements. We can show you a big and successful record of our achievements.

GEORGIA HARDWARE RETAILERS MEET HERE THIS WEEK FOR ANNUAL CONVENTION AND SHOW

THREE-DAY SESSION WILL INCLUDE MANY ATTRACTIVE FEATURES

Visitors Will Be Given Theater Party, Barbecue, Luncheon at Piedmont Club, and Trip to Ball Game

SHOW WILL BE DISPLAY OF UP-TO-DATE PRODUCTS

More Than Thirty of the Leading Manufacturers of Atlanta and Other Cities Have Contracted for Space

Members of the Georgia Retail Hardware association, one of the foremost trade organizations of the state, will gather in Atlanta on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week for their annual convention, which this year will have the added feature of an extensive show of hardware products by manufacturers of Atlanta and other cities.

The business sessions will be held in Taft hall and the exhibits will occupy the entire space in the big auditorium room. Thirty of the leading manufacturers of the south and the north have already taken space and this number will be largely increased before the opening of the show.

It has been several years since the association met in Atlanta and retailers, manufacturers and jobbers here intend to make the present convention the most memorable one in the history of the organization. An elaborate and instructive program has been prepared for the business sessions and the entertainment committee headed by J. T. Rose, of the Atlanta Steel works, has planned a series of pleasure features that means a big time for every one.

"The response of the jobbers and manufacturers to the call for contributions to the entertainment fund," said Mr. Rose, "was prompt and generous, and I have written members of the association that it is very evident that Atlanta intends to welcome them and extend them the most cordial hospitality of which it is capable.

"On Thursday the visitors will be tendered a theater party at the Forsyth on Thursday at noon there will be a barbecue at the plant of the Atlanta Steel company and on Friday at noon a luncheon at the Piedmont Driving club, after which the visitors will see a ball game at Ponce de Leon park. Special attractions have been secured to serve the visitors for all these occasions.

The show at the auditorium will be a wonderful display of all the latest hardware products. Stoves, plows, steam engines, leather goods, wagons, paints, roofing, agricultural implements, and in fact all hardware lines will be attractively displayed. The exhibits will not only be attractive but also instructive. A visit to the show will be the next thing to a liberal education for every man in any way connected with the hardware trade. It will also prove particularly interesting to the housewife, the farmer, dairyman and the public generally. Record crowds are expected to pass through the display aisles in the auditorium during the three days of the exhibition. The convention members themselves number more than 200. They are recognized as

ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS TO VISIT DISPLAY BUILDING AT CHATTANOOGA NEXT THURSDAY

Special Train Has Been Secured for Trip—Industrial Leaders Determined to Have Permanent Exhibit for Atlanta-Made Goods—Will Go Chattanooga Several Better and Make Manufacturers' Building Here Show Place of the South

"On to Chattanooga!" That's the slogan now of the Atlanta manufacturers. The Tennessee city has had for several years a manufcturers' building which houses a permanent display of the products manufactured by Chattanooga industrial plants.

The enterprise has proven wonderfully successful. It has caused Chattanooga-made goods to be known all over the south, and even in the distant states. Thousands of visitors yearly see displayed in attractive form what Chattanooga has to offer to the commerce of the country.

"Atlanta must have a permanent exhibit of its products also," say the manufacturers here. "We will visit the Chattanooga display, see how it is conducted, and then we will return and establish one of our own and make it the largest thing of its kind in the entire south."

So has spoken the Atlanta spirit, and it has been so ordered. The chamber of commerce has secured a special train, and the trip to the Lookout city will be made next Thursday, May 29. Secretary Walter Cooper has sent letters to the manufacturers all over the city telling them to join the party. The low rate of $2 for the round trip has been secured.

It is planned for the train to leave Atlanta Thursday morning at 7:30 o'clock, reaching Chattanooga at 11:30. Returning, the party will leave Chattanooga about 4:30 p. m., reaching Atlanta about 9 o'clock. A dining car will be attached to the train, so that both breakkfast and supper may be had en route.

Brooks Morgan, who is chairman of the special committee on the manufacturers' building, has for several months been working out the details for the proposed building and its operation. These details he has now practically completed, and the plan in full will be presented the manufacturers at an early date after the Chattanooga trip. Some big building, centrally located, will be leased for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods. It is believed that the building can be so maintained that exhibitors will have to pay only a moderate space rent and will enjoy the advantage of having their products before the eyes of the public the year round.

Both Mr. Morgan and Secretary Cooper are anxious that as many Atlanta manufacturers as possible make the trip to Chattanooga, and they urge that all who will do so communicate with Secretary Cooper at once.

"A permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods," said Mr. Morgan, "will mean more to Atlanta and Georgia than I can well express in a few words. Those who saw the exhibit made last summer by seventy-five manufacturers were surprised and delighted. When it is remembered that there are 548 manufacturing plants in Atlanta and Fulton county, making approximately 1,000 different articles, it can easily be seen what a wonderful display a full exhibit of Atlanta products would be.

"The value of such a display to the manufacturers here is apparent at once when it is recalled how attentively the exhibit last summer was witnessed by the 2,000 southern merchants who were visitors here at that time. While an exhibit of one factory or one line of goods might not be generally interesting, a collective exhibit, such as that proposed, showing a great variety of lines, would prove not only a great attraction, but would give valuable information to any merchnt in the conduct of his business.

"Such an exhibit building would become one of the great show places of Atlanta and Georgia, and in fact of all the south. The public would begin to realize the magnitude of Atlanta's industries. Southern merchants would cease to pass by Atlanta and go hundreds of miles eastward to buy their stocks. They would see that they could get a better variety here at their very door, saving time, freight and trouble.

"We have long wondered why southern farmers send hundreds of millions of dollars to the west for hay, corn, and other grain, when these things could be raised at home and the money kept at home. We likewise wonder why southern merchants send millions of dollars to distant points for goods when these same goods could be obtained of home manufacturers and why we will thus continue to deprive ourselves and our financial institutions of the strength and support that would come from retaining this money at home. If we will but reverse this policy our entire commerce will grow faster than we can dream of.

"Our enterprising friends in Chattanooga have with their permanent exhibit so placed their products before the eyes of the public that actually there are some people who think that Chattanooga makes more goods than Atlanta, though this is far from the truth.

"So successful has Chattanooga's permanent exhibit become, that only recently it was found necessary to double the display space. Manufacturers saw that exhibits in the building were so valuable as trade getters that they could not afford to stay out.

"I hope every manufacturer in Atlanta will go on the trip to Chattanooga. They will see there something that will be of vital interest to him and his business. He will see an enterprise which can be duplicated in Atlanta but on a much larger scale and which will be. MISS SPELLMAN MAKES LETTER MAILING RECORD

Miss R. Pearl Spellman, who does multigraphing and general public stenographic work, is gratified over the work done by her office in getting out letters incident to the entertainment of the Presbyterian assemblies. From Monday morning to Wednesday night at 6 o'clock her office addressed, stamped and folded 10,000 letters, inclosed 10,000 letters and 50,000 tickets, and mailed all the foregoing work at the post office.

GEORGIA-FLORIDA U. C. T.'S HAD BIG TIME AND SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION AT COLUMBUS

NEWSY NOTES OF DOINGS AT U. C. T. CONVENTION

Spicy Personal Items About the Men Who Composed the Columbus Gathering

S. L. Ditto, the able editor of the Firing Line of the Jacksonville Times-Union and member of the Jacksonville U. C. T. council, was a popular visitor at the convention. He was made a member of the grand council press committee.

R. N. Fickett, Jr., was the champion cake walker on the boat ride. No one enjoyed the delightful barbecue served on board more than he.

"Daddy" Kugelman and M. J. Heinberg, of Pensacola, were certainly some workers. It was through their enterprise and that of the other Florida delegates that the convention goes to Pensacola next year.

B. H. Murk, of Gainesville, made a strong speech in advocacy of Gainesville for the 1914eeting. He spoke enthusiastically of the beautiful women for which Gainesville is famous, and almost persuaded the delegates to vote for his town.

Gran Counselor Cole was one of the most popular dancers on the boat ride. He missed no number on the program.

George P. Byrd, of Atlanta, and Mr. Burns, of Tampa, led the singing on the trip down the Chattahoochee.

"Hotel Inspector" Shirley was among the gayest of the gay. No one can vouch for having a better time than he.

George B. Hunt, of Boston, supreme sentinel, was declared to be the best informed man on U. C. T. matters at the convention. He proved a good mixer and soon knew all the boys as well as if he had been a member of the Georgia-Florida division. He responded to the welcome address on behalf of the supreme council.

R. L. Wallace, the grand secretary, proved valuable to the council in dispatching the more weighty matters that came before the meeting.

A. L. Brooke, of Atlanta, the grand treasurer, arrived late on the first day, but made up for it in prompt attendance at all the meetings thereafter.

W. A. Webb, of Atlanta, was one of the hard working members of the gathering. He was intrusted with the framing of the hotel inspector law.

LEATHER CUTTING PLANT FOR WILENSKY EXHIBIT

In the space at the hardware show at the auditorium this week which has been reserved by H. Wilensky & Sons company a feature will be a cutting plant in operation showing how sole leather strips are prepared for the retail hardware trade.

This company is taking a very active interest in the show and will have one of the largest exhibits there. They will give the hardware dealers an idea of what Atlanta handles in leather findings generally as well as a full exhibit of the part of their line which is handled by all hardware dealers.

D. M. Holsenbeck and M. S. Craig, of the road staff, and J. W. Simmons, house salesman, will be on hand to meet the dealers.

The concern has had displays at the exhibitions at the conventions for the last several years.

New Grand Treasurer

A. L. BROOKE.

Mr. Brooke is the Atlanta U. C. T. who was elected treasurer of the grand council of the Georgia-Florida division of the United Commercial Travelers at Columbus last week. Mr. Brooke is past counsellor of Council 18 of Atlanta, and is one of the best known members of the organization in the state.

ATLANTA STOVE WORKS TO HAVE BIG EXHIBIT

Saunders Jones and the Three Georgia Salesmen Will Welcome the Visitors

One of the largest exhibits at the hardware show at the auditorium this week will be that of the Atlanta Stove works. This company has secured 400 square feet of space and will have an artistic and attractive display of its famous lines of ranges, including the Advanced Barrett range, the Imperial range and full line of cookers and heaters. Forty or fifty ranges and stoves will be on display.

Saunders Jones of this company will be in charge of the booth and will have the glad hand for all visitors and will be ready to turn loose all possible information about his company's products. The company also extends a cordial invitation to all the visitors to come out to the factory and see the ranges in process of making.

All three of the company's Georgia salesmen will be on hand to assist in entertaining and instructing the visitors, particularly about the lines of the Atlanta company. The salesmen are P. D. Fudge, of Bainbridge, Ga.; F. L. Cooper, of Norwood, Ga., and E. D. Newton, of Monroe, Ga.

SHACKELFORD DELIVERS WELCOME ADDRESS

H. D. Shackelford, of Atlanta, member of Council 18, in the absence of J. Ralston Cargill, of the Columbus council, delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the Columbus U. C. T.'s. Mr. Shackelford spoke of the benefits of the order and the hospitality that Columbus was ready to extend to the visitors. He also referred to the mileage fight and hotel bill, and showed how these measures would be beneficial to the travelers. After his speech Mr. Shackelford was warmly congratulated on his effort.

Bagmen of Bagdad Initiate Large Class and Have Unique Parade—Entire Town Turns Out to Witness It

Columbus and the U. C. T.'s. They were well met. The good old town did itself proud in entertaining the delegates and visitors to the meeting of the grand council of the Georgia-Florida division of the United Commercial Travelers on Thursday and Friday of last week.

The visitors had one of the biggest times ever enjoyed at an annual meeting of the division. The business sessions while lively were harmonious and in all the discussions it was plain to be seen that the good of the order was the leading consideration. The minor politics incident to the election of officers and committeemen left not a whit of jealousy or heart-burning. Following the business sessions the delegates and visitors turned themselves loose to enjoy the round of hospitality which Columbus U. C. T.'s and citizens had prepared for them.

The following officers of the grand council were elected for the ensuing year: E. D. Weir, of Athens, grand counselor; J. M. Kelly, of Tampa, junior grand Counselor; R. L. Wallace, of Atlanta, grand secretary; A. L. Brooke, of Atlanta, grand treasurer; M. L. Stern, of Savannah, grand conductor; M. L. Hienberg, of Pensacola, grand page, and J. M. Giddens, of Columbus, grand sentinel.

Among the important matters transacted by the grand council was the appointment of a committee headed by W. A. Webb, of Atlanta, to draft a bill amending and strengthening the present hotel law and providing for the office of state inspector to see that the sanitary regulations of hotels are rigidly enforced.

Resolutions were also adopted indorsing the bill introduced in congress by Senator Burton, of Ohio, to change the date of national elections from the first Tuesday to the first Monday in November. Many travelers every election year find themselves unable to vote without losing the entire day of Monday from their road duties.

The sanitary barbers' bill advocated by the barbers of the state was also indorsed, as was likewise the bill introduced in congress by Representative Bartlett, of Georgia, to provide for one-cent letter postage.

The following executive committeemen were named for a term of two years: G. P. Byrd, of Atlanta, and J. W. Bates, of Macon. T. B. Lewis, of Atlanta, and D. Kuzelman, of Pensacola, were named representatives to the meeting of the supreme council at Columbus, Ohio.

The visitors were given luncheon Thursday in the convention hall and were later taken to the ball game between Charleston and Columbus. At night there was a delightful boate ride down the Chattahoochee river. A barbecue supper was served on board, and a band furnished music. Dances and songs made the night gay with merriment. The grand ball at the Racine hotel was largely attended and fittingly brought to a close the convention festivities.

The whole town turned out for the parade of the "Bagmen of Bagdad," the advanced degree of the order, on Friday afternoon. The initiates were dressed in all manner of costumes. Many were garbed in convict stripes and were followered by the patrol wagon and guards. The following were the Bagmen initiates: B. N. Franklin, of Montgomery; Edwin Yates, of Columbus; J. L. Askew, of Columbus; J. M. Giddens, of Columbus; D. B. Meadows, of Columbus; I. B. Rothschild, of Columbus; H. D. Shackelford, of Atlanta; P. T. Dawson, of Columbus; R. B. Cole, of Jacksonville; C. M. Hunter, of Columbus; E. G. Lord, of Columbus; C. M. Richardson, of Columbus; L. E. Floyd, of Columbus, and R. L. Wallace, of Atlanta.

T. B. Lewis, of Atlanta, was chosen the new greater ruler of the Bagmen, and P. S. Browlee, keeper of records and seal.

A special commitee composed of A. L. Brooke, C. E. Scott, F. W. Thelling submitted resolutions which were unanimously passed thanking the people of Columbus for their hospitality and the Columbus newspapers for their courtesies. A part of the resolution was as follows:

"We especially desire to thank the Firing Line of The Atlanta Journal for the presence of R. H. Rowe at our opening session and for the instructive remarks on matters for the good of the order delivered by him."

The press committee, consisting of R. I. Zacharias, M. L. Duskin, J. M. Giddens and S. L. Ditto, offered the following resolution which was adopted:

"We, your press committee, desire to express thanks to the press of Georgia and Florida and most particularly to the Columbus daily papers, the "Firing Line" departments of The Atlanta Journal, the Atlanta Constitution and the Florida Times-Union of Jacksonville, for valuable services rendered in giving publicity to the convention now in annual session and courtesy in reporting the proceedings of this grand council.

"Your committee fully appreciates the great good that the traveling men in general have derived through the able manner in which the "Firing Line" department of our papers have aided in the efforts to bring about certain legislative reforms and fully appreciating the stimulating effect they have on the traveling salesmen as a whole.

"We further submit, therefore, that special consideration is due them."

After a lively contest between Gainesville, Ga., and Pensacola, Fla., for the next convention, Pensacola was victorious.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

JENKINS WRITES ON NEED OF GRATITUDE

Tells of Thorns Travelers Receive With the Roses Along the Way

Enter Firing Line:

There are times in life when the best of us may become discouraged and feel like giving up. It may be the defects that lurk within us. Like the fairest flower none are perfect, but after we have spent time and money seeking a certain object, worthily trying to accomplish some good deed, we feel entitled to all the joys and pleasures that may come from it.

"We rise by things that are 'neath our feet.
By what we have mastered of good and gain,
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet."

What drummer has not gone forth in the morning of his prime and greatness when all rolled along merry as a dream, spending money and time to win the friendship and patronage of a customer, and when it was won felt entitled to it? But when he goes beyond what others have ventured, does more than others have done or will do, and pulls the fellow out of a hole and sets him safely on his feet again and makes life worth living once more to that fellow. It is then the sunbeams should outnumber the shadows so far as it lies in that man's power.

There was a time not far back when a man failed in business. His affairs were in such shape none cared to listen to his stories of woe; his liabilities were great; he owed several hundred dollars, all of which he promised to pay, with interest, if the salesman would or could intercede for him in some way to get another stock of goods. Strange to say, the salesman, with confidence in him with all of his troubles, stood for him, becoming responsible himself for the debt in case he failed, as the factory was not willing to trust him, and had the goods shipped. He met the salesman with an open countenance, glad hand, tears in his eyes, overjoyed with thanks, words of love and affection that could not be mistaken.

His soul was bubbling over with gratitude and he said: "I shall always remember you for what you have done for me. You have made it possible for me to live. I will not only live, but will win success and pay you every dollar. Furthermore, will, as an evidence of appreciation, always buy my goods of you, matters not where you go or what you do so long as you travel and sell goods that I buy you shall have my business."

Time wore on; he was successful. The salesman continued to sell and supply him with goods. He would get far behind at times, but standing between him and the factory, as the salesman had great faith in him, he finally paid out. When this was done, he felt independent of the salesman and the factory. His credit was now restored and other drummers started once more to call at his place of business. He would never fail to give them an order, at times, too, when his friend would be in the city and leave empty handed. He would meet me with a smile just as gracious as though he had given me the order. It was here where the stinging thorns come in among the roses. If he had at any time become angry with the factory for pushing him up on a past due account and lost respect for their feelings, he should not have so soon forgotten the burdens that were borne by a free traveling friend for him, and at a time, too, when he was in peril, helpless, wanting a friend, and found one that trusted him without bond or mortgage with his simple word to pay, stood by him, resented wrongs that were thrust upon him and defended his rights, as a true friend will do whether clouds are dark and hanging low, or the days bright and sunny.

It had always occurred to me (and I have tried to live up to it) that a friend in sorrow and trouble needed me more at that time than any other. What is friendship to any one that is prosperous and happy? It is well and good to smile on such, but better to let their joyous rays reach out with helpful hands to those who are in distress and need them most.

This man made good. He paid every dollar of the old account, and today is considered one of the best and best merchants of his line in the state, much sought after by the traveling men. He is loyal and true to his old salesman friend in this way. He gives about four-fifths of his business to the other traveling men. Their prices and goods are no better. All are good. His only reason, if any, is because, as he says, "Ask the man for Big Four Peanut Butter Sandwiches."

After a few dozen of the aprons had been handed out to some down town founts the army of small boys who deliver drinks around the city learned of it in the mysterious way that small boys have of learning these things. From then until the aprons were all given out there was a stream of the drink boys calling at the sandwich factory on Whitehall stret.

Mr. Singleton says the kids are the best advertisers anway.

"If you can get them pulling for you it is money well spent," he says.

HAMLETT WILL SHOW MALLEABLE RANGES

Will Have Large Exhibit Space at Hardware Show and Will Welcome Visitors

One of the enthusiastic exhibitors at the hardware show at the auditorium this week is S. Edgar Hamlett of Atlanta, the Gulf States representative of the Malleable Steel Range Manufacturing company of South Bend, Ind.

S. EDGAR HAMLETT.

Mr. Hamlett's company will have a big exhibit of his company's ranges and accessories and will be in charge of the booth himself to welcome all visitors who, he says, will be sure to be pleased with his company's famous lines of ranges.

Mr. Hamlett is known all over the south and has been in the range selling business for 20 years and the high position he holds with the Malleable company attests to marked efficiency as a salesman. His office and residence is at 39 Ripley street, Atlanta.

MERCHANTS ORGANIZING TO SUPPORT NEW LAWS

Every Dealer in Fulton County Will Be Asked to Urge Their Passage

To get the active support of every merchant in Fulton county, wholesale or retail, for the new garnishment law and the fraudulent check bill, the executive committee of six Atlanta merchants appointed especially for this purpose will meet Tuesday of this week and name a number of merchants, each of whom will be asked to see that every dealer in his immediate community does his part in working for the legislation.

The six on the committee are: P. J. Paxon, chairman; C. W. Hatcher, W. O. Stamps, O. T. Camp, C. A. Tappan and C. V. Logan.

This committee was appointed at a general meeting of merchants interested in the proposed bills held last week at the chamber of commerce hall.

Merchants throughout the state have been similarly organized to work for the passage of these laws. L. W. Roberts, a special representative of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia, who has been active in the organizing, is now lending aid to getting the co-operation of the Atlanta dealers.

It is proposed to distribute printed copies of the bills and the twenty-five men who will be selected Tuesday are to see that every dealer in their district familiarizes himself with the matter and then writes the legislators asking that they vote for the new laws.

Sanders E. Smith, of Fain and Stamps sold a big opening bill last Thursday after dark at Tate Ga.

E. E. Shyer and S. P. Smith were in at the Consolidated company saturday. F. H. Glasgow and C. E. Owens, city salesmen of this company, are both turning in splendid business. C. S. Harley the South Carolina traveler, was up last week with the best of them in total sales. J. C. Mason will as usual spend Sunday at his home at Cuthbert, Ga.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

"LET TRAVELERS URGE HOTEL INSPECTOR LAW"

Shackelford Asks That Letters Be Written Legislators in Behalf of Measure

Editor Firing Line: The traveling man as a rule thinks little of his own interest. Now, I know that there is an excuse for this. For to be a success as a traveler, he forms a habit of putting every one's interest before his own, and after a few years it becomes second nature with him to take things as they are, and be satisfied.

But as salesmanship has become a science these days, he is getting to demand his rights, and is working through his organization to better the conditions that he is compelled to live under.

The public as a rule are under the false impression that the salesman has all his expenses paid for by the house that he is traveling for. There never was an opinion more absurd than this. The traveling man does not only have to pay his own expenses, but must earn enough to pays his salary, and also a profit to his house.

It is true that he lives well, and as a rule is prosperous. But, on the other hand, who is compelled to put up with more hardships than the traveling salesman? He is compelled by circumstances to be separated from his wife and children a large part of his time, and away from all dear friends and all surroundings that make life livable.

It is at times that to some extent that he makes some very sincere friends in his travels. But as a rule, he never stays in one place long enough to create that true bond of friendship that constant companionship creates.

But I ask, with all these drawbacks, where do you find a more truly good fellow, perfectly open and a heart as large as himself, always the first to respond in times of need of his fellowman. Now, my fellowmen, should not this good fellow be surrounded by the majesty of the law, and should not the laws that are now made to protect this carrier of progress be enforced? But is it? We now have a hotel law and a good one that is violated every day.

And, fellow-travelers, the only way that it will be enforced is to rise up in our might, and demand of this state a hotel and sanitary inspector. Now, boys, get busy on your letters to your representatives, and let them know your wants, and you will find them ready to respond. Yours very truly,

H. D. SHACKELFORD,
Press Committee, U. C. T., No. 18.

HUGHES JOINS ROAD FORCE OF BRANNEN CO.

Will Sell Barber Supplies in the Southeastern States for Atlanta Firm

A new recruit to the ranks of Atlanta travelers this week is O. B. Hughes, who started Monday to cover Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina and South Carolina for the Brannen Barbers' Supply company.

The word recruit does not exactly fit him, however, for he has been eight years on the road with similar lines, the last four years traveling out of Cincinnati and the four years previous out of Wilmington, Del.

Mr. Hughes has enthusiasm to match that of the company he is joining, which was only recently organized. The new salesman is a hunting and fishing enthusiast. He carries his fishing tackle along in his trunk wherever he goes, and expects to use it as well as batting for customers.

D.-L.-R. CO. NEW BUILDING TO BE READY NOVEMBER 1

The Dougherty-Little-Redwine company's new home will be ready for them November 1. This is the date set for the contractors.

Excavation work was completed Friday and the construction work will soon be well under way. Haralson Bleckley is the architect and Donaldson & Pearson the contractors on the building, which will be one of the finest structures for a wholesale business in Atlanta.

The company will move in at once upon completion of the building.

LIVELY ELECTED SECRETARY OF THE TOOL COMPANY

Young Hardware Man Promoted to Important Position With Big Firm

E. W. Lively was elected secretary of the Tool company at the directors' meeting last week.

Mr. Lively, though quite a young man, reaches his new position after a long experience in the hardware field, as his entire business career has been in this line.

He came to the Tool company in February of this year from the Anderson Hardware company, and was with that firm for twelve years, during the last few years as manager of their retail department. He has risen steadily and surely and his new office is a deserved reward.

The Tool company is unique in the hardware field, specializing on tools of every description and not handling the general lines of hardware. Since their start several years ago, the business has grown steadily and shown the value of the idea of a store devoted to selling tools.

Albert E. Hill, president of the company, conceived the idea and gave up a lucrative position as traveling salesman for a big hardware house to try out his plan.

With the addition of Mr. Lively and the help of his thorough knowledge of the line the company is better equipped than ever for their particular class of trade.

Within Past Week He Has Sent Out Two Cars of His Company's Products to Big Jobbing Firms

C. F. Holt, sales manager of thne Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, is going some these days. He is making sales in carload lots and shipping them out rapidly from the big plant of the Dixie company on Marietta street.

Within the last week he has loaded and sent out two carloads of the Dixie brands of pickles, preserves, jellies and vinegar. One of the cars, containing twenty-three varieties of products, went to A. B. Small company, of Macon, Ga., and the other, containing twenty-six varieties, went to the Calloway Grocery company, of Athens, Ga. Both of the firms are among the leading jobbers of the south. He has another car booked for a Rome, Ga., firm.

The Dixie company since its founding has shown a steady growth and recently a new charter secured and the name changed from the Dixie Vinegar Works to the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company. Coincident with the reorganization, the plant has been enlarged by 10,000 square feet and number of products manufactured increased. The company does a wide business and its products are constantly increasing in favor with both the dealers and consumers.

Thne officers of the company are B. A. Hancock, president; R. W. Cameron, vice president, and J. M. Harrison, secretary and treasurer.

DEERE FORCE TO WELCOME THE CONVENTION VISITORS

Manager Stentz Advocates Organization for All Dealers in Agricultural Implements

The entire force of salesmen for Georgia of the John Deere Plow company will be here this week to assist in welcoming and entertaining the many visitors expected at the show rooms of the Atlanta branch during the days of the hardware men's convention.

The company's several hundred dealers in the state have been sent special invitations to make the company's place their headquarters while here, and all delegates to the convention will be made welcome.

T. K. Johnson, sales manager, and W. H. Stentz, secretary and manager, assisted by the salesmen, will see that the dealers have an interesting time.

Mr. Stentz is a strong believer in associations of the retailers, and believes that the work of the state hardware association should be supplemented by an organization to include all agricultural implement dealers.

"We are in hearty accord with the hardware dealers' association," says Mr. Stenz. "We also strongly favor the idea of an association of hardware, implement and vehicle dealers, working in harmony with the aims of the hardware association but giving an opportunity for active co-operation to the many dealers who handle agricultural implements but who are not hardware dealers and therefore not eligible to the hardware association.

"Records of our dealers show that only 50 per cent of them are hardware men. Of the rest 45 per cent conduct general stores and the remaining 5 per cent handle implements only.

"There are organizations of implement dealers in the north and west that are doing good work. I have assisted in the organization of such associations, and with the rapid development of the implement business in the south in the last several years feel such an association is needed here."

The Atlanta show rooms of the John Deere company are expected to be quite a busy place this week. The visitors will be especially interested in the lighting plant for country homes which is on exhibition.

Salesmen who will be at headquarters to meet the visitors are: J. L. Riddick, K. D. Brohston, E. P. Geiselmann, J. M. Jeffreys, A. T. Stevens and William Shoemaker.

In Atlanta visiting the John Deere Plow company and to attend the hardware show are:

SMOKER AND BIG PARADE PLANNED FOR GROCERS

At Taft hall on Tuesday evening, May 27, at 8 o'clock, there will be a grand rally and smoker for the retail grocers and butchers, their clerks and other employes; also all jobbers, packers, produce men, their salesmen and others interested in the Wednesday afternoon closing movement which the grocers have been working for and are soon to make a reality.

The speakers of the evening will be R. A. Broyles, E. L. Adams, W. O. Stamps, Johnbl. McCullough and Harry L. Schlesinger.

The following week the weekly half holiday custom will be started, and in celebration of this the grocers will have a great street parade on Wednesday, June 4, the first closing day. The stores will be closed every Wednesday afternoon in June, July and August.

The parade will be one of the longest ever held in Atlanta.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICES WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

W. B. Estes only started in his present territory for the W. S. Duncan company the first of this year but is reported to be already getting better results for that company from that section than have ever been secured before.

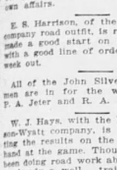
R. E. Sloan is back again in his Tennessee territory for the M. C. Kiser company after a year's absence and is turning in his customary good business.

E. A. Sewell, the John Silvey & Co. salesman acted as best man at the wedding of a Mobile customer the other day. They say at John Silvey's that the Alabama salesman is after pointing on such things but there is no light on the question of just how soon he will put this knowledge to use in his own affairs.

E. S. Harrison, of the S. P. Richards company road outfit, is reported to have made a good start on his new season with a good line of orders for the first week out.

All of the John Silvey & Co. salesmen are in for the week-end except P. A. Jeter and R. A. Sewell.

W. J. Hays, with the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, is said to be getting the results on the road of an old hand at the game. Though he has only been doing road work about a month he is already a well trained salesman from experience on the city firing line and at the retail end.



Mack Hirshberg, son of I. A. Hirshberg, is making preparations to start on the road about June 1. He will cover Florida for the Hirshberg company. He has a good training in housework back of him and goes out with a full line of samples and enthusiasm. The salesman brand new to the road has a concentrated course in the university of hard knocks waiting for him. This now old to the road is well armored with confidence and the goods, and at the Hirshberg company they say he will win a diploma from the university in quick order.

W. M. Darden writes from Hickman, Ky., that that city is under water due to the flood in Mississippi river. Mr. Darden says that business has been good with him on this trip and that after visiting Chicago he will return to Atlanta in about two weeks.

After a trip with C. C. Phillips, south Georgia salesman, W. B. Carlton, of the Capital City Tobacco company, is now on a trip through the north Georgia territory of T. R. Lewis, who went to Columbus to whoop things up wifa the U. C. T. throng.

W. E. Parks, popular city salesman for the Capital City Tobacco company, has been at his home ill for the last week. He is reported improving and will likely be around calling on his customers again this week.

Lawrence H. Moore and Jack W. Evans will be in charge of the exhibit of Atlanta Agricultural works at the auditorium next week. It would be hard to find two cleverer boys or better posted implement men anywhere.

R. J. McCowan, of the Warren Manufacturing company, has temporarily laid aside the cares and worries of a traveling salesman and assumed those of a farmer. He is putting in several weeks on his farm in Forsyth county, busy at getting a cotton crop started. Supposedly, he went there to take a vacation before the new season in his line starts next month, but his letters to the Warren office show that he is giving as much care to farm problems as he does the rest of the year selling neckwear and such to Georgia merchants.

"We've all been busy taking stock this week," said Jack W. Evans, of Atlanta Agricultural works, "but tell the boys to meet us at the auditorium next Wednesday. We will be on hand with an fine a display of implements as can be found anywhere."

Clyde L. King, president of Atlanta Agricultural works, was out of the city first shipment of which has just been received by the company in Atlanta, and is new to this state.

Will Montag, of Montag Brothers, is in from South Georgia to spend the week-end in Atlanta.

H. D. Lipford, with the Atlanta Paper company, is here for a stay of several days after a trip among the bigger towns along the Gulf coast.

The Atlanta Paper company sales records for last week will show blanks opposite the name of J. M. Giddens. There is a good reason. As chairman of the entertainment committee he had his hands full at the U. C. T. doings at Columbus.

P. J. Henderson, traveler for the Warren Manufacturing company, is vacationing at Sylvester, Ga. He will be back on the road in June.

G. L. Williams, of Americus, Ga., has an invention which is interesting the retailers and wholesalers handling laces and ribbons. The device is known as the Williams Narrow Fabric Measuring and Blocking System. Mr. Williams is now marketing the invention with success.

Harry Gottheimer, firing liner for Montag Brothers, is here for a few days after several weeks with the trade in Tennessee.

Bert Fox, with Montag Brothers, has just left for three or four weeks among his customers in North Georgia and will also make some points in Tennessee.

William Wolf, traveling for the Atlanta Paper company, is one of the oldest men—in road experience—on this company's big sales force. His name is always around the top on the monthly sales records.

J. E. Powell, secretary of Atlanta Agricultural works, has been busy during the past week coaching the traveling force in stock-taking. Mr. Powell says that if it was as easy to get the boys to do the work as it is for them to tell how it ought to be done, his labors would be considerably lightened.

Ed Montag, of Montag Brothers, has been out of the running for several days. He is at a hotel at Columbus, Miss., quite ill.

W. I. Abney, of the sales staff of the Atlanta Paper company, was in for a brief visit to headquarters a few days ago. This salesman is a heavyweight in more ways than one. Weighed on the scales of sales, he kicks the beam up considerably. Though it is not known exactly how high he does register in that respect when it comes to plain avoirdupois it is a certainty he could never train down to welterweight. Under his present training he is not far from 300.

for a couple of days during the past week in the interest of his firm. Mr. King's several connections keep him pretty well on the jump.

L. B. Robinson, house and sales manager for the A. M. Robinson Company, reports a good week's business from their entire road force.

All of the salesmen of the Dobbs & Wey Co. ave nowv finished their road work until the start of another season in their line about June 15.

P. W. Harris, who recently returned to the road as South Carolina salesman for the A. M. Robinson company has already shown he can still get orders as in his former days on the road.

C. B. Rosser, the war horse of the A. M. Robinson company road staff, has started off his new season in good shape. He has rounded off about twenty-five years on the road and still goes after them as briskly as ever.

J. L. White was mighty glad to get back on the firing line again, they say that the A. M. Robinson company. He is still on his same territory, southern Alabama and southern Mississippi, but has been off the road for six weeks doing some special work at the house.

Salesmen of the Huguley Oil company are going to have something new to the trade to talk about this week. It is imported white Russian motor oil, the

J. P. Womble, Charles Babb and B. S. Mattingly are in for the week-end at the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company.

J. A. Woodliff went after the orders with the aid of an auto last week. When the expense account reached the Silvey & Dougherty offices they thought at first he had bought the car instead of renting it.

All of the Dobbs & Wey company salesmen will be here this week to extend the glad hand to the delegates to the hardware dealers' convention. All are here now but E. L. Kerrison, and he will finish in plenty of time to be on hand to meet his friends of the trade Wednesday.

E. H. Janes, the Dobbs & Wey salesman, has been laid up for a week in Atlanta. He is out again now and feeling much better.

Garland M. Turner, with the Silvey & Dougherty Hat company, has been doing firing line work in north Georgia recently, but will be back in his regular territory along the Georgia road this week.

J. L. Yates, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company traveling staff, has been out lately covering some Alabama territory and is spending today in Anniston. He will continue to cover north Georgia, which has been his regular territory for years, and will also hereafter make a part of Alabama. His following has been growing steadily. The per cent of merchants from his territory who visit the house when they are in Atlanta runs high, always a good sign of how close a salesman is to his trade.

Morris Croft and J. A. Trammell, of the Ragan-Malone sample casers, after a week in Atlanta looking after house trade, will be back on the road this week. They go out with their full fall line, and other Ragan-Malone travelers will quickly follow.

G. H. Turnipseed, who has recently gone with the Silvey & Dougherty Hat company, is starting off the season with his new firm in good shape. He is covering northern Alabama for this company and has now been out two weeks. The territory is not new to him, as he worked that section a part of the time for the house he was with several years before going with Silvey & Dougherty.

L. L. McMullen turned up at the W. S. Duncan company yesterday looking fine after a week of good business down the West Point route, due largely to the optimistic feeling of the trade over the opportune coming of much desired rain.

United States and wherever he goes he makes the name of Atlanta known.

He has just arrived in Atlanta from one of his trips and will be here about two weeks before talking the road again. He attended the meeting of the publishers and associated press in New York the latter part of April and came to Atlanta after a business circuit of Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

"Everywhere I go," said he, "I find business conditions good. The only pessimistic place seems to be New York and New York is always more or less pessimistic. The rest of the country has full confidence in President Wilson and the Democratic administration and business is moving along uninterruptedly. Our sales have increased faster in the last six months than at any time in five years."

"I see practically all the progressive towns in the United States," said he, "but Atlanta has got 'em all beat. The town and the way it is growing never ceases to be a wonder to me. I talk Atlanta so, that everybody says 'Here comes that Atlanta talking machine.' They were about to throw me out of a hotel in Louisville, Ky., once because I kept singing Atlanta's praises."

What is a Real Business Man?

Why, he's the fellow that's right on the job day and night, looking after the leaks; getting ready for a rainy day; keeping the resources well within a safe limit; guarding the credit of the house; reaching out after new business. He's a regular conserver. He's a good man to pattern after—no difference what you undertake. He's the man that's sensible enough to apply business methods to his personal health. When is eyes begin to annoy him—give out easily, strain and will not permit him to do continuous, close work without unnecessary fatigue, he gets busy—has an examination made and gets glasses. That's simply good business. Suffice to say we've been fitting glasses for the southern people for fifty years, and—well, that's sufficient for a real business man to know.

GREETING:—You are cordially invited to call at our exhibit in the Auditorium-Armory during the Georgia Retail Hardware Convention (May 28, 29 and 30.) We wish to show you

THE ONLY RANGE WITH PATENTED COPPER BEARING ALUMINUM-FUSED FLUES.

The 1913 models of the South Bend Malleable Range has flues of American open hearth copper bearing keystone aluminum fused metal.

The South Bend Malleable is the only range in which this wonderful metal is used for insulating the flues. The process by which this metal is made is patented, and is controlled by only one firm in the United States. We have secured the exclusive right for flue construction for malleable steel ranges.

Sheets of this copper bearing keystone metal is thoroughly cleansed and pickled, then immersed in a bath of aluminum alloy, heated to temperature of 1,500 F. from three to fifteen minutes, according to thickness of sheet. Before adopting this metal we subjected it to severest tests by fire, acid and salt water, and sheet so tested was thrown on ground and left all winter exposed to snow and rain. After several months this sheet was found to be free from rust.

Other malleable range manufacturers have written the people who furnish us this metal, saying "How soon can you ship us a car of aluminum fuel sheets?"

We will display family ranges, both cabinet and on base. Hotel and restaurant ranges. Hotel and restaurant men especially invited to call and examine same.

Our Combination Gas, Coal and Wood Range suited for most palatial homes.

Respectfully yours,

The Malleable Steel Range Mfg. Co.

Congressman Clark To Be Opposed By A Man He Defeated

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. May 24.—When a man has the pulchritude there is no one who can escape it. Sam Hilburn has it. He came up to argue for the bill taking in the waterworks of old Palatka, and he made an impression.

Why? Sam's got the pulchritude.

There were those who were opposed to it. But the fact of the business was that Sam had all the argument on his side. He showed the committee that they had everything in the world in the old waterworks to make the water soft —out there; rats, and cats, and alligators, and other things that tend to make the water soft.

What water wouldn't be soft if it had all those things in it, and the people of Palatka Heights don't want to come in the city and be incorporated and Hilburn wants them to, and he will come mighty near to getting what he wants.

Why? Because he's got the pulchritude.

Now, Sam made a certain race against a certain gentleman for congress, whose name happens to be Frank Clark. It is well known that Frank Clark is one of the hardest political propositions in the state to solve, and so Frank won out; but it wasn't until after he had telegraphed to all of his good friends over the district that he had lost.

The matter was this way: Hilburn heard from all of his favorable counties first, and he didn't begin to receive the bad news until about two days after the primary was closed. Hence he thought he had everything cinched, and Frank thought so too. The proof of this was in the circumstances that Frank telegraphed to Joe Whitner, at Sanford, that he was defeated, and in the meantime Sam was enjoying the tenth heaven of political bliss, believing that he had the job nailed down—but then, about four o'clock of the afternoon of Thursday, after the primary was held Tuesday, the bad news began to come in, and Hilburn's feathers began to drop, but he was game withal that, and he says, says he, "If I don't win this time I'll win the next time," and so he is in the race, and he's going to set something stirring as sure as you're born.

ALLOWED BRYAN EXTRA TIME FOR "CROWN OF THORNS" SPEECH AND NOW ASKS FOR GOOD FEDERAL JOB

"UNCLE NAT" WALKER.

"Uncle Nat" Walker, Aged but Efficient Reading Clerk of Florida Legislature, Deserves Democratic "Pie," His Friends Say

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 24.—Like the man who had the hand that had shaken the hand of John L. Sullivan, so Florida has the man who was the original Bryan man, and since he has been a lifelong Democrat on the progressive side and is now in line for substantial reward there is nobody in Florida who would not like to see "Colonel" Nat Walker land something good under the Wilson administration.

"Colonel" Nat is a figure of interesting personality. He is reading clerk of the Florida legislature and has held that position twenty-seven years. In Florida the clerk is elected, and is not appointed as he is in some other states, so "Colonel" Nat has had to go up against a new legislature every time and he has never failed to win out, and it is agreed that there was never a better reading clerk in any legislature or even in congress, for Nat is a star.

He is a thorough "cracker" from Wakulla county, and is proud of it. He is now living within five miles of the spot upon which he first saw the light. His first political position was under the first Democratic governor of Florida as clerk o fthe court.

He read law in the clerk's office and later attended Georgetown university, and was elected reading clerk of the legislature in 1885. During that time, and those were the times that made the interim in his service as clerk he was a member of the legislature twice.

He attended all the state conventions as delegate from 1876 until the last one was held in Jacksonville in 1901.

He was a delegate to the Chicago convention in 1896, and it was then that he got on the Bryan band wagon first, and he has been voting for Bryan ever since, until Bryan dropped out in Wilson's favor.

Moreover he was the time keeper at that convention and allowed Bryan about thirty minutes overtime in which to make his famous speech, "The Cross of Gold and the Crown of Thorns," while the anti-Bryanites were sweating blood and wondering how much more time the Nebraskan was going to be allowed. If "Uncle Nat" as he is affectionately called, wants for anything from the Democratic administration there is no man in Florida who more richly deserves to get it.

Finlayson Is Real Regulator for Senate Of Florida Assembly

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 24.—Senator Finlayson is the real regulator of the senate. Step into the senate almost any time and you will find that body hung up on some constitutional question and Senator Finlayson is straightening them out. He keeps a copy of Thomas Jefferson's manual on his desk, and he keeps the senate straight. Lord only knows what the senate would do without Senator Finlayson. Now, there is Johnston, who is on the job all the time, railing against the cream of progressivesm, and there is Senator Calkins, too, who stands for the people in spite of all that may occur—but Finlayson—he got mad the other day because John Thrice of the Times Union said that he was an old man. As a matter of fact, Finlayson is not old; he is in his prime, and he is the watchdog—the real Dog Tray, who stands up and fights amid the storms of constitutional disagreements, and he generally wins. Which is mighty fine for Senator Finlayson, whom John Doggett, attorney for the Coast Line, says is the ablest man in the senate.

D. T. Singleton Dead

EATONTON, Ga., May 24.—Colonel David T. Singleton, aged 81 years, died at his home near Willard this week. In early life he was married to Miss Rebecca Griggs, who died several years ago. They are survived, by three children, Mrs. Stephen Marshall, Terrell and Philip Singleton. Colonel Singleton represented Putman in the legislature with distinction and ability. Colonel Singleton numbered a wide circle of relatives, among them Miss Annie Wallace, of the Atlanta Public library, later such a friend of Carnegie in securing the Atlanta Carnegie library.

REPUBLICANS SORE FOR WILSON'S INTERFERENCE

WASHINGTON, May 24.—President Wilson was sharply criticized by Republican senators in executive session last night for his reported interference in the senatorial fight in Maryland, where William L. Marbury is a candidate to succeed Senator John Walter Smith for the long term. Both are Democrats and the Republicans made capital of the fact that a Democratic president apparently had seen fit to get into a fight between members of his own party in a state other than his own.

The criticisms were voiced during consideration of the nomination of Sherlock Swann as postmaster at Baltimore. Swann is a declared supporter of Marbury, but Senator Smith in a speech asked his colleagues to vote for his confirmation. In spite of this viva voce vote was so close that the vice president declared himself in doubt. On a rising vote Swann was confirmed.

The criticism of the president tonight were the first made of him by senators in executive session since he entered the White House.

POISONOUS TABLETS Killed Brave Banker

PHILA. TELEGRAPH MAY-22,1913.

END COMES FOR BANKER AFTER WEEK'S FIGHT AGAINST SURE DEATH

Macon Capitalist Who Took Bichloride of Mercury Tablet by Mistake Never Lost Courage.

Macon, Ga., May 22.—Displaying heroic courage up to the time he lost consciousness, which was several hours before death, B. Sanders Walker, who took bichloride of mercury by mistake here last Wednesday, died at 1.30 o'clock this morning. His immediate family was at his bedside when he died.

For the last forty-eight hours he had been partly under the influence of opiates.

Displaying in his few conscious moments the courage which has characterized his week's fight with death from poisoning, the banker last night was expected by his attending physicians to die at any moment. WHAT THE STAGE HAS MEANT TO ME"

-GLADYS HANSON

BY ANGUS PERKERSON

"AND of course," said Mr. Sothern, "I'll want you to play heavy leads."

"Of course," agreed Miss Hanson.

Mr. Sothern bowed in that inimitable way, which is an inheritance as well as an achievement.

Miss Hanson forgot amenities in thinking of the nearest way to Daniel Frohman's office.

"What is it?" asked Mr. Frohman.

"Tell me what heavy leads are," begged Miss Hanson.

"Why?" asked Mr. Frohman.

"I'm going to play them with Mr. Sothern."

A month more, and she was the Queen in "Hamlet"; a year before, and she had been a pupil at Washington Seminary.

While she was yet in her 'teens Miss Gladys Hanson began her stage career by playing leading roles in Sothern's company.

Until Daniel Frohman told her, "heavy leads" had been an unknown phrase. But the parts were easy, though the name was strange.

Without the merest stage experience, she succeeded as the Queen in "Hamlet," and as all the other personages whom she played with E. H. Sothern.

WHAT THE STAGE HAS MEANT.

The stage has meant success to her from the beginning.

It has meant the friendship of men and women who are great artists.

It has meant the opportunity to do the work toward which she always has aimed.

And also the chance to surprise Daniel Frohman. This last, she says, was the greatest chance of all.

At the end of a road tour, Miss Hanson was back in New York in a role for which another had first been cast. The carpenter, who was a comfort-loving soul, thought to save trouble by leaving the other principal's pictures in the brass frame in the theater lobby, where stage convention requires that a principal's pictures must be shown.

Miss Hanson sought Mr. Frohman, who has any number of companies upon the road, moving picture theaters everywhere, and playwrights furnishing him plays and scenarios by the minute.

Except David Belasco, he is the busiest man in New York. And Miss Hanson asked his personal attention to the photographs.

"I am playing the part," she explained. "And it isn't fair. Is it?"

"I'll see to it at once," said Mr. Frohman.

"How was it," asked Miss Hanson a year later, "that you put up with me?"

"I was always waiting," said Mr. Frohman, "to see what you would do next."

She can afford to laugh at her little mistakes, because they were so little and her success has been so big. Miss Hanson, who is spending a part of the between-season months at the home of her father, P. H. Snook, of 103 Cleburne avenue, can look back over an experience, seldom before equaled.

Mrs. Fiske began in stock plays, Frances Starr, for years, had small parts in "stock," but Miss Hanson stepped into leading heavy parts at the beginning.

HER STAGE CAREER.

Often it has been said that she had the training of a dramatic school.

"But I didn't," she explained. "I went to New York to study languages and literature. I studied under private teachers, and I didn't even go to finishing school.

"I wasn't supposed to be there to study for the stage. But I had the notion in the back of my head that I would take up acting as a career. I had always seen the best plays; our family has believed in the theater as educative; and I have thought of acting as the greatest of professions.

"But I was to study the Queen in "Hamlet," not to play her. Yet, after I'd been in New York awhile, I went to Mr. Frohman. I told him I'd had little experience, but he didn't realize how little that was. I had never even been a member of a theatrical club. I know nothing of the stage except what you can see from the front.

"But I didn't feel that my vocation was social life. I told Mr. Frohman I wanted to act, and he said there was no reason why I shouldn't. But all he could offer me was a little bit of a part.

HER CAREER BEGUN.

"'Why,' he said, 'it won't pay your board.'"

"Why," I told him, "I don't expect to pay my board."

Miss Hanson was cast for this small part in "The Spoilers," but scarcely had the play been staged before it was withdrawn. Southern needed another principal for his leading heavy parts; Daniel Frohman told him that the girl who had no experience was better suited to such roles than any actress in New York; and Miss Hanson's career was begun.

Although she had not expected to pay her first year's board, she stepped at once into leading parts with Sothern, and continued as a member of his company for two years, playing these roles:

The Queen in Hamlet; "Lucy" in "Richard Lovelace;" "Doonla" in "A Fool Hath Said;" "Georgiana" in "Lord Dundreary;" "Kathrine" in "If I Were King;" "The Duchess" in "Don Quixote;" and "Julie" in "Richelieu."

Later, she was with Kyrle Bellew in "Builder of Bridges," "Scandal," and a revival of "Raffles."

She was with Mrs. Fiske in "The New Marriage," she played in "The Woman," which was one of Belasco's greatest productions; and last year had a principal part in "The Governor's Lady."

PEOPLE OF THE STAGE.

"But, perhaps," said Miss Hanson, "it would have been better if I had started at the beginning. If I had to play little parts, and work my way up bit by bit.

"But as it is I have had the instruction of Mr. Frohman and of Mr. Belasco, and I have won the friendship of the big men and women of the stage.

"Next to my work, their acquaintance has been as much to me as any part of my stage experience. Few people know the whole-heartedness, the charity, the fineness of the men and women of the stage.

"A great actor is a great man. If one has a quirk in his character, it will show in his acting. The women and women of the stage are children in a way. But those who are great as artists are great as individuals.

"The finest personalities I have known are stage

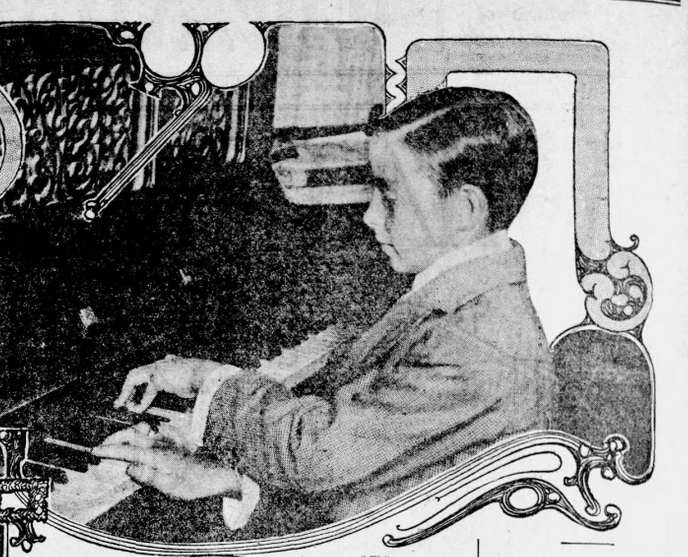
Genius at fourteen



FORNEY WYLY.

When He Was 4 Years Old Forney Wyly Played "Mr. Dooly", and Has Since Composed "The Grape Vine Tangle"--But His Music Has More of the Air of Chopin Than G. Cohen

Geniuses Are Usually Too Busy Being Geniuses to Have Time for Any Other Vocation---But the Little Boy Who Writes Eternal Triangle Plays at 14 Years of Age Mixes Baseball With Talent

WELL, if it isn't Mr. Dooly," exclaimed his grandmother.

She had expected him to beat a tattoo upon the keys, as any other four-year-old baby would. But here, at a post-teething age, he was playing this famous ditty.

The baby now is 14 years of age, and the other day he wrote a play called "The Revelation," which the Saturday Night club of his neighborhood gave a vivid rendition.

He is Forney Wyly, the grandson of Mrs. C. I. Peck, of 62 West Fourteenth street.

The evidences of his genius are many:

He plays.

He composes.

He writes.

And he has organized a neighborhood baseball league.

At four years of age he played "Mr. Dooly"; and no sooner could he scribble than he began writing poetry to his grandmother, sonnets, chiefly about nickels and dimes for which he could find convenient use.

Just before that surprising interpretation of "Mr. Dooly" he became acquainted with elaborate music, and grew able to distinguish between all the arias that he had heard.

His gift at composing was remarkable. Did a visitor prove interesting or curious, he had witty comment ready in music.

Once an uncle, who is a sailor, came home from the seas. It is family tradition that, while others met him with a welcome, Forney greeted him with an inspiration. The boy, who was only beginning to balance himself upon the piano stool, banged the bass keys until they rolled and thundered; and explained that the noise was a storm at sea to make his uncle feel at home.

GREETINGS TO A NEW HAT.

There is another tradition. An aunt returned home in a new bonnet, and others exclaimed over the pretty flowers, the paradise feather, and the pre-cubist knot of ribbon. He pressed the soft pedals of the piano and composed a sonnet in treble notes to the new bonnet.

He has interrupted his musical composition at this time to organize a baseball league known as "The Brutes." He retains an interest in ragtime, however, and recently took a day off from baseball to compose "The Grape Vine Tangle." It is played with the hands crossed, and is something of a tangle of notes. But it has more the air of the classical than the ragtime school.

"The Grape Vine Tangle" suggests Chopin rather than George Cohen.

His earlier productions had even more of this delicate, lyric air. But, as he says, you can't mix baseball and composition.

It was a question, when he was a baby, whether he would be a great composer or a great pianist. He himself is now wavering between a business career and the profession of a writer. Also he has a frank admiration for Ty Cobb.

He seems talented in all ways except as an artist. He can't draw, and he takes little pleasure in pictures.

MUSIC, PLAYS, AND BASEBALL.

But he is sufficiently musical, not only to play but to compose music.

He writes short stories and plays, usually about very deep subjects, such as Eternal Triangles.

He takes a real interest in the better sort of plays in preference to vaudeville. In fact, he is quite tired of vaudeville.

And he believes that, in time, he will acquire a batting position similar to Ty Cobb's.

This little boy comes of a family which was gifted in music and which has left him a heritage of musical taste and expression, and also an example of success in business and in public life.

Two of his great-uncles were General Henry and General John Forney, of Alabama. Both were leaders of the Confederacy, and the former was for years United States senator from Alabama.

But the boy, who is the youngest of their line, has respect for the memory and success of his family without a foolish pride in what his forefathers have accomplished.

He is also unspoiled by his gift at playing classical pieces and composing "Grape Vine Tangles." He is the sort of prodigy who has a talent, not only for music and for playwriting of a very serious sort, but also for baseball, which he takes still more seriously.

While his knack at playing "Row, Row, Row" or Rubenstein's melody in F. has been recognized, his family has been of the opinion that business as a profession is more suitable than music. He has been encouraged to play and to continue his compositions to returning uncles and to visiting aunts, but art has not been held up to his eyes as supreme.

He has been raised in the manner of other boys who seldom get beyond finger measures, and this training has given him all of their wholesome boyishness. He has an intimate acquaintance with the batting averages of the famous baseball players, and no small average himself in the neighborhood league.

BOTH GENIUS AND BOY.

At fourteen years of age he is the unusual combination of a prodigy and a boy. Usually, geniuses at early age or later in life, have neither time to be boys nor men. They are always geniuses.

Forney says that he doesn't much like his first name, that he would rather have it John or some such everyday name, and that ragtime is good stuff.

But there is very little ragtime about his music; and, in spite of his present absorption in baseball, his early promise of being a famous composer maybe realized.

Almost from the time he first touched the keys of a piano, he has played quaint airs of his own composition, surprising little pieces, delicate and vivacious, composed on the spur of the moment, and quite appropriate to the occasions which stirred him to music.

One of the most evident and important qualities of his compositions are their actual originality and their freedom from imitation. None has been a variation of other music that pleased his fancy. Each of his sonnets in music has been his own conception of what a compliment should be to a new bonnet or a greeting to a homing sailor.

TEETHING AND MUSIC.

He began to play when he had scarcely finished cutting his teeth, and did one almost as naturally as the other. Composing was just as much a second nature. When he had a notion to express, he sought the piano instead of words and picked it out on the keys instead of speaking it.

"Wait," he would say, and hurry for the piano. "And that," he would explain, as he finished his composition of the moment, "is because grandmother's got back, and I would like a dime."

Unlike other composers, he never pulled his hair and sought for ideas. He waited for an inspiration to come and seized upon it.

When he began to play, his chief difficulty was in tumbling off the piano stool. Walking wasn't such an old accomplishment, reading and writing were unknown to him, and keeping balanced while he picked out a few notes from a Wagnerian air was a feat. Someone at first sat nearby to catch him when he became unbalanced by a sudden burst of artistic enthusiasm.

At this time, when he was only four years old, and had not even begun up upon his A, B, C's, he could identify pieces of classical music. This discovery was made through a collection of phonographic records. Tell the baby what record was wanted, and without hesitancy he picked it out from all the others.

Later, such experiments were tried as laying a piece of cloth across the keys and blindfolding him; but he played accurately in spite of such handicaps. Even as a baby he could stand in one corner of the room, a key could be struck upon the piano, and he could cross the room and strike the same key without ever an error.

AN ARCHITECT AT SIX.

At six or seven years of age he took to building very wonderful houses from little stone blocks. One moment he would pile up the turrets of a wonderful castle; the next, he would tear down all the battlements and start upon a modern bungalow such as you buy by paying a part down and a trifle by the month.

Later he took to poetry, written upon the subject of nickels and dimes of which he found himself in need.

And, now, he is interested in baseball, box scores, and the proper way of standing at the plate.

But he also has found time for the "The Grape Vine Tangle," and play writing.

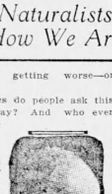
"The Revelation," which is his latest success, was written Friday afternoon a week ago, and was given its first performance the following Saturday night by the "Players' Club" of the neighborhood.

Members of this club are: Misses Charlotte Meador, Marion Stearns, Alice Stearns, and Sarah Schoen. Comer Howell, Harry Stearns, Cabell Hopkins, and, of course, the playwright, who is actor as well as author.

"You see," he explained, speaking of his production, "the first scene is a dinner party, given by a count. One of his guests in his fiancee, and another is a man who is crazy about the girl. Everybody goes off the stage, but the girl and the man who is crazy about her. The count drinks too much while he is away, and when he comes back he is tipsy and tells his past. He has a wife and seven children in California, so the girl marries the other man."

"A WORM STRIVING TO BE A MAN"

John Burroughs, the Most Noted of American Naturalists, Makes That the Title for a Very Remarkable Work Which Tells How We Are All Changing Visibly



JOHN BURROUGHS.

Is the world getting worse—or better?

How many times do people ask this question every day? And who ever answers it with satisfaction?

What do you think?

Is the world growing worse or better?

John Burroughs, the great American naturalist and— what always follows—a great humanitarian, in his new book of essays, "Time and Change," published by Houghton, Mifflin Co., gives his opinion, under the caption of "The Worm Striving to Be Man."

Listen to what this greatest of living American philosophers has to say of the progress of the race:

"The physical evolution of man is no doubt complete. He will never have wings, or more legs, or longer arms, or a bigger brain. The wings and the extra legs and the keener sense he has left behind him.

"His development henceforth must be in the mental and spiritual.

"He is bound to have more and more dominion over nature, and see more and more clearly his own relation to her. He will in time completely subdue and possess the earth.

"Yes, and probably exhaust her? But he will see in time that he is squandering his inheritance and will mend his ways. He will conserve in the future as he has wasted in the past. He will learn to conserve his own health. He will banish disease; he will stamp out all the plagues and scourges, through his scientific knowledge; he will double or treble the length of life.

"Man has undoubtedly passed through and finished certain phases of his emotional and mental development. He will never again be the religious enthusiast and fanatic he has been in the past; he has not worshiped his last, but he has worshiped his best.

"But his humanitarianism is a rising tide. He is becoming less and less a savage, revolts more and more at the sight of blood and suffering.

"The highly religious ages were ages of blood and persecution. Man's tenderness for man has vastly increased. The sense of the sacredness of human life has increased as his faith in his gods has declined. He has grown more human as he has grown less superstitious. Science has atrophied his faith, but it has softened his heart.

"His fear of nature has given place to love.

"Man never loved as he does now.

"He has withdrawn his gaze from heaven and fixed it upon the earth.

"As his interest in other worlds has diminished, his interest in this has increased.

"As the angels have departed, the children have come in.

"When the nations, too, cease to be savage and selfish, and become altruistic, then the new birth of humanity will actually have occurred.

"As an artist and a creator of beautiful forms, man has also had his day; he loved the beautiful, the artistic, or the ornamental long before he loved the true and the just.

"He was proud before he was kind; he was chivalrous before he was decent; he was tattooed before he was washed; he was painted before he was clothed; he built temples before he built a home; he sacrificed to his gods before he helped his neighbor; he was heroic before he was self-denying; he was devout before he was charitable.

"We are losing the savage virtues and vanities and growing in the grace of all the humanities, and this process will doubtless go on, with many interruptions and set-backs of course, till the kingdom of love is at last fairly established upon the earth!"

A FORGOTTEN FRIEND OF BEASTS

(New York Herald.)

It is a singular circumstance that in the history of legislation and organization for the prevention of cruelty to animals, John Lawrence, the first disciple of "the rights of beasts," is not even mentioned.

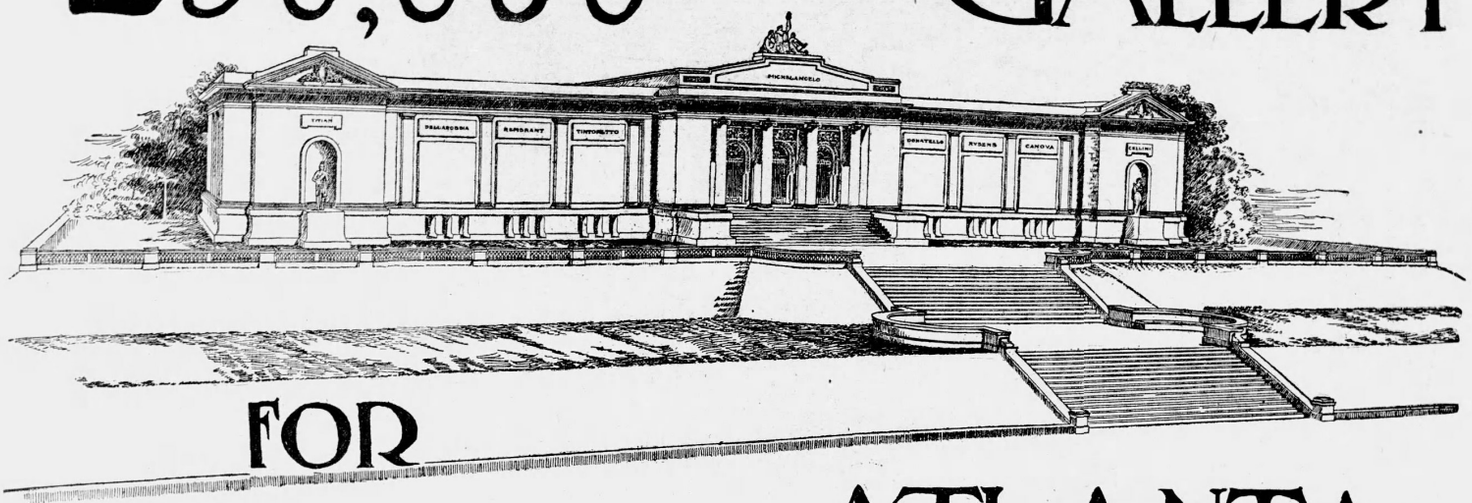
Perhaps nothing stronger or more admirable than his plea for justice to the brute creation has ever been written, yet his words, like his name seem to be unknown to those now identified with the movement of which he was the pioneer.

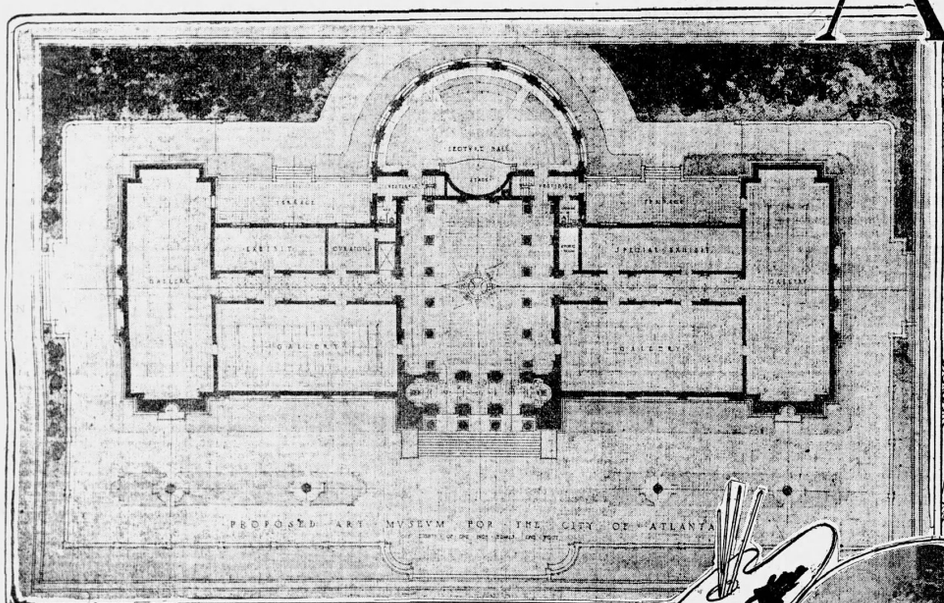
Possibly this may be due to the fact that his radical utterances in 1796 met with almost universal disapproval and ridicule. They were so unpopular and offensive, indeed, that the doughty old horseman, who seldom yielded to criticism, subsequently modified his language if not his views, and it is only in the first edition of his "Philosophical and Practical Treatise on Horses," now extremely rare, that they have been preserved.

To the influence of Lawrence's powerful writing is believed to have been due, in great measure, the growth of public sentiment in England which finally resulted in recognition of "the rights of beasts." But repeated attempts were made to give animals the protection of the law before the effort was successful. A bill to prohibit bull baiting alone was introduced in the house of commons shortly after the "Philosophical and Practical Treatise on Horses" appeared, but it was beaten out of sight.

It was not until 1822 that a bill for animal protection was "smuggled" through parliament, as Lawrence, still active and grown bitter in his quarter century of warfare, put it. The author of the successful measure was a Tory, Richard Martin, popularly known as "Humanity Martin," and Lawrence, in one of his many communications to the Sporting magazine, intimates that Tory votes put it through in spite of Liberal opposition.

$250,000 ART GALLERY FOR ATLANTA





SCENE IN TELFAIR ACADEMY—SAVANNAH.

These drawings by Architect Haralson Bleckley show the $250,000 art gallery, which is proposed for Atlanta by the Atlanta Art association. Plans for the interior arrangement of the building are also shown. The art association proposes to build the gallery upon a site deeded to the association in Piedmont Park by the city.

THE Atlanta Art association proposes that a $250,000 art gallery and museum be built in Piedmont Park on the site of the old government building.

The plot of ground formerly occupied by the government building has been deeded to the art association by the city as the location of an art gallery and museum.

Plans for the gallery have been drawn by Haralson Bleckley, the architect, and the association hopes, without delay, to put these plans into effect.

Mr. Bleckley has so arranged that the building may be constructed in sections, and that each section will be complete in itself.

In order to avoid delay, the association hopes to raise sufficient money to begin upon the gallery; and, as opportunity affords, to add to the building.

PLAN OF THE GALLERY.

The accompanying drawings show the proposed building. The vestibule opens into statuary hall, where sculpture work or the reproductions of masterpieces of sculpture will be shown. On both sides of this hall are galleries, and each gallery opens into special exhibit room. In the rear of the building is a lecture hall that will seat 250 people. Special rooms will be provided in the basement for classes. In the rear will be an uncovered porch.

Atlanta is one of a few large cities which lack an art gallery, but the Atlanta Art association purposes to supply this want.

The plans of the association are not in anywise indefinite, and the hope is well founded that they will succeed.

The site has been secured, the buildings has been designed, and the association expects soon to set about the construction of the first section.

GALLERY INTENDED FOR ALL.

The gallery is not proposed for the benefit of artists and of art lovers alone. It would be both a pleasure and an education to the city as a whole.

The art association believes that such an institution is as much needed as schools and civic buildings and that it is as practicable.

The establishment of an art gallery would be assured once a building was erected. Pictures and other works of art from such famous collections as those of the late Pierpont Morgan would be leant to the gallery, and in Atlanta there are now a few valuable paintings.

Among these is said to be an original Van Dyke, and five others that have much value. But they are hidden in private homes, and few, except the owners, know of their existence.

Mrs. S. M. Inman is president of the Atlanta Art association, and John M. Grant is vice president. Others who are equally well known are assisting in the project to build an art gallery and museum for Atlanta.

By Miss Virginia Woolley, an Atlanta artist, who has studied painting and drawing in New York and in Europe.

One of the greatest needs of this city of ours is an art gallery. Large sums are raised with little effort for other causes and still Atlanta has not even one room where paintings may be shown with justice to the artist.

The library has been used a number of times for exhibitions and the librarians have been most generous in the offer of their rooms, realizing with the art lovers of Atlanta the necessity of placing before the people things that are worth while in art. But the rooms are small and were not designed for exhibitions, and the paintings, therefore are not shown to the best advantage.

You probably hear the argument raised that there is nothing to put into a gallery or museum if we had one. Other cities much smaller and less progressive in every way have started their permanent collection of paintings years ago and have their annual loan exhibition which is a great event. Why can't Atlanta have the same thing?

VALUABLE PAINTINGS HERE.

Through an investigation by an interested lover of art a few days ago twelve splendid paintings were discovered in homes here in Atlanta—among them, a Van Dyke. I wonder how many have seen that painting or even knew it was in Atlanta—and how many people have perhaps all their lives wanted to see original paintings by the great masters and never knew they could have had the chance.

MISS VIRGINIA WOOLLEY

How fine it would be to have a gallery where such treasures could be hung for a few weeks at a time where everybody could have the benefit of it. And besides these loan pictures, a permanent collection can be started by the appropriation of a certain amount each year for the purpose of buying paintings, either of our own American artists or those abroad. With the purchase of even one good painting or piece of sculpture a year, it is easily seen how soon this collection would become invaluable to Atlanta—exhibitions would come here and artists would be glad to show their work.

GALLERY WOULD BE POPULAR.

There are plenty of people who would be happy over the prospect of having such apportunities of seeing the best in art. This fact was shown last summer when such crowds flocked to the Montgomery to see thrown on the screen reproductions of the greatest paintings in the world.

What a large city needs in art, as well as music is something good and free, so that every one can hear and see the best—free concerts and open museums where the people have a chance to hear and see these good things.

The cost of such a museum would not be great and even at any price would it not be worth while for a city like Atlanta to raise the money and be the proud possessor of something so great? It would mean so much to the education of her school children and the older people who have never had the opportunity of seeing or knowing the wonderful things an art gallery affords.

BY MRS. HENRY OSGOOD,
Drawing instructor of the Atlanta Public schools.

Every thinking mother and father realizes that their children pass through a state of savagery feudalism, despotism, commercialism, pedantism and so on, just as the race has done. With the proof in one's own family it isn't so hard to see that cities and nations do the same thing. America is at present in a most glorious state of commercialism, just beginning to border on the pedantic. Witness for the pedantic symptom, the wild effort of said parents to educate their children in the accomplishments rather than the necessities of daily life. Of course, they can't truly believe that the piano, violin, French, and painting lessons which worry the poor children to death will be useful to them as citizens or home makers, in after life.

If you pin an aspiring mother down to facts, she will either say that "the poor child has so much talent," or that "Mrs. B. sent Jessie to that teacher, and Mary wanted to go, so I just let her. The girls

Great Britain's Militant Suffragettes Less Dangerous Than America's Men

Why I Am a Suffragette

By Mrs. Mary L. McLendon

WE wage a peaceful war to secure equal rights with that other half of our common humanity, man. There is no good reason why women should resort to such extreme measures as the militants in this, the greatest republic in the world. However, we do read in the daily papers of the excesses indulged in by 'Mere Man' (American men at that), who shoot and cut and slay folks and dynamite buildings, both public and private, when they wish to show that they mean what they say in attempting to carry a point with the 'powers that be.' Really, they are more dangerous than the militant suffragettes of Great Britain.

"We need the ballot just as men found years ago that they required it to secure things they need most in the way of protection of life and the pursuit of liberty and happiness. There is no argument that can be advanced along this line in favor of man suffrage which will not apply forcefully in favor of woman suffrage.

"We are working always for the thing which will remove the stigma of disfranchisement from 'God's last, best gift to man—woman.'

"Georgia and Hawaii protect their girls until they are ten years old. We need the voting mothers to change this unjust law. The Georgia Woman's Suffrage association has secured the promise of one of Fulton county's representatives to try to change this flagrant act of injustice to Georgia's daughters.

"We have grown so weary of begging men to give us a 'square deal,' and then be refused with scorn and ridicule well mixed with amused contempt for the pitiful beggars. But there are better days in store for women and may God hasten the day of deliverance!"

The oldest suffragist in Atlanta and the youngest suffragist do not know each other. They have probably never seen each other or heard of each other. Yet they are united as only people are who stand and fall by the same slogan, "Votes for Women!"

The youngest suffragist is little Miss Elinor Pickett, aged nine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Pickett, of 4683 North Boulevard. The oldest, in point of service at least, is Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, of 139 Washington street.

Mrs. McLendon has been a suffragist for twenty years. little Miss Pickett didn't know what a suffragist was until a few days ago. They asked her if she was a suffragist and she was highly insulted; but they told her that one could be a suffragist and still be a very nice little girl.

"Don't you want to vote?" they said.

"Of course I do," she declared, "I want to vote just like my papa and I want to vote for Teddy Roosevelt," and now there is not a more ardent suffragist in Georgia than little Elinor Pickett.

She and Mrs. McLendon entertain the same ideas about the militants.

When the news flared forth recently that Theodore Roosevelt had been shot by an assassin, Elinor very nearly cried. All by herself she sat down and wrote a letter to her "dear president," telling him that she hoped he would get well soon.

The answer which she received from the ex-president's secretary is her most cherished possession, next to a woolly little dog with a tail that wags vigorously on all occasions. The letter said that the colonel appreciated the letter from the little girl very much, coming at such a time especially."

Mrs. McLendon is the mother of the suffrage movement in Atlanta. She is seventy-two years young. If you were merely judging her by her gray hair you would very rashly call her "an old lady" perhaps, but once you had talked to her and seen the twinkle in the bright eyes and watched her face break into a cheery smile you would wonder if there was a fountain of youth somewhere in the back yard of her home on Washington street. There she has lived for forty-seven years, not a day of which has passed without some effort on her part to bring the franchise to the women of Georgia, Atlanta and the south.

She was the first woman suffragist in Atlanta. When the "votes for women" movement was organized in Columbus, Ga., in 1890, Mrs. McLendon received a letter asking her to join. She joined.

When the national woman's suffrage convention met in Washington, D. C., in 1894, Atlanta was proposed as the next meeting-place, despite the fact that Mrs. McLendon was the only active suffragist in the city.

ORGANIZED AUXILIARY.

"This will never do," thought Mrs. McLendon. "We shall have to have an auxiliary here."

Alone she organized it, securing fifty members. When the convention met here in 1895 it was welcomed by the most enthusiastic audience in its history.

To use Mrs. McLendon's own words, "We certainly had a fine time. It was the best convention I ever attended!"

Now, nearly twenty years later, there are two flourishing organizations for women suffrage in Atlanta, the Civic league and the Atlanta Woman's Suffrage association.

Mrs. McLendon is a member of both, little Elinor Pickett is a member of neither.

But Elinor intends to join some day, unless, of course, the franchise is granted to women by that time.

Mrs. McLendon has written the following message to the suffragists of Georgia:

Woman suffragists in "the Empire State of the South" are greatly enthused, and correspondingly inspired to undertake unheard of things to bring about the enfranchisement of the women of this commonwealth and that right speedily.

"Now, do not understand by that statement that we are contemplating militancy." Far from it I assure you, for we wage a peaceful war to secure equal rights with that other half of our common humanity—man.

There is no good reason why women should resort to such extreme measures in this, the greatest republic in the world. However, we do read in the daily papers of the excesses indulged in by "Mere Man" (American men at that), who shoot and cut and slay folks and dynamite buildings, both public and private, when they wish to show that they mean what they say in attempting to carry a point with the "powers that be." Really, they are more dangerous than the militant suffragettes of Great Britain are reported to be by our American newspapers which are, of course, always strictly truthful, especially in dealing with anything pertaining to the woman's movement.

IN DEAD EARNEST.

We would, however, impress it upon the minds of every one that we are in dead earnest in trying to secure equal rights before the law with men, because, we need the ballot, just as men found years ago that they required it to secure the things they needed most in the way of protection of life and the pursuit of liberty and happiness. There is no argument that can be advanced along this line in favor of man suffrage which will not apply forcefully in favor of woman suffrage. Ex-President Roosevelt declares that women suffer from many injustices which can only be removed by the use of the ballot. We are sure he is correct, and therefore we are working always for the thing which will remove the stigma of disfranchisement from "God's last, best gift to man—woman."

We are realizing in some degree the wonderful change the women of Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington, California, Kansas, Oregon and Arizona have been able to bring about in those states by their use of the ballot. They have created a new atmosphere in the politics of those nine free states almost beyond belief. If space permitted I would gladly give a list of the great measures they have carried into effect, with the assistance of good men who are not jealous of the power possessed by the women voters.

MOTHERS ARE CO-GUARDIANS.

In those free states, mothers are co-guardians with their husbands of their own children, which is more than can be said of mothers in Georgia. Kansas has a splendid "white slave law." Women work only eight or nine hours a day, and a minimum wage bill and a teachers' civil service bill have been passed in states where women vote. Mothers are pensioned, and fathers, deserting their wives and children, can be put to work and their earnings applied to the support of their families. The age of consent has been raised in all the free states. How is it with Georgia? Well! it is just as it has been since Georgia became a state and copied the abominable old law from the statute books of England. Georgia and Hawaii protect their girls until they are ten years old. We need the voting mothers to change this unjust law. The Georgia Woman's Suffrage association has secured the promise of one of Fulton county's representatives to try, during the next two years, to change this flagrant act of injustice to Georgia's daughters. It was easy for the women voters of the nine free states to have good laws enacted and bad laws repealed. It is a very difficult task for a disfranchised class of citizens to get any kind of legislation enacted for the benefit of said citizens, therefore, we want "votes for women."

We have grown so weary of begging men to give us "a square deal" and then be refused with scorn and ridicule well mixed with amused contempt for the pitiful beggars. But there are better days in store for women and may God hasten the day of deliverance!

WOMEN ARE AWAKENING.

Women of Georgia, and of the south, are attaining to the political consciousness which is manifested by the women of the nation and of the world. The extreme conservatism of our voting population amounts to a grave and serious fault and should be rectified and removed entirely and immediately to enable them to keep up with the procession. The changed attitude of the press and of the pulpit towards the woman's movement has been little short of marvelous since 1890 when the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association was organized by Miss H. Augusta Howard, of Columbus, Ga.

Times change and we change with them, and it is right, else there would be no progress. I have a feeling remembrance of the time when we had to beg for space in the newspapers and it was not an unusual thing for pulpit orators to exploit themselves in the Lord's house on Sunday, accusing women suffragists of committing nearly all the crimes in the decalogue and plaintively complaining in this wise: "O Lord! what have we done that we should be afflicted by the coming of those long haired men and short haired women, suffragists! Was it not enough that we were overrun by Sherman and his vandals," etc.?

WOMAN AN ANNEX TO MAN.

They declared (and that settled it of course) that woman is an annex to man and her place is in the home waiting on their masters, forgetting that times had changed. That an army of women and girls had been compelled to work outside the home to support lazy men, thoroughly alcoholized and tobaccoized, and helpless, dependent children who would otherwise go hungry and naked, if the women did not go out and work for the wages which they did not receive for their labors while in the home. The newspapers, once filled with ridiculous statements and still more outrageous cartoons concerning woman suffrage and the suffragists, are now advocating and publishing splendid editorials about the marvelous progress of the woman's movement. The reporters attend our meetings and seem to enjoy the plain, common sense talks they hear, for men know that the ballot is a wonderful weapon, or tool, with which the possessor can accomplish wonderful results. That the possession of the right to vote and hold office is the distinguishing mark of the free man or free woman from the slave, the idiot and the criminal.

A DIFFERENT WORLD.

Oh! it is a different world today for women than it was seventy-five years ago when they did not own their clothing even. A woman was transferred from her father to her husband much as the negro slaves and other property were handed over to him, to use or abuse as he might see fit. We are so glad that the pioneer woman suffragists started the ball to rolling in 1848. The forces that make for righteousness are at work today as they were on that memorable occasion, but are curing better results for the same amount of effort expended.

The missionaries claim that to the efforts of the church the women of China are today voting and helping make the laws to govern the people of that land. We old time folks remember how easy the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the United States constitution was adopted in 1868 and in 1870 which made the negro men the political superiors of the women of the United States. And just a few weeks past the papers informed us that the legislature of the territory of Alaska had granted the women of that cold region full suffrage, while down in Dixie all women are denied even a small scrap, such as voting on bond issues and sitting on school boards, although they pay taxes and a larger number are teaching the boys and girls than men who once monopolized that business.

THE GOOD NEWS.

Here is another encouraging feature to gladden the hearts of woman suffragists.

Constitutional amendments are now pending and will be submitted in 1914 to the voters in the following states: Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

The states where amendments have passed one legislature and must pass another are Iowa, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

If these amendments carry there will soon be eighteen free states and one free territory where no discrimination is made on account of sex. This is slow work therefore the friends to woman suffrage introduced on April 7, 1913, in the senate of the United States a joint resolution proposing another amendment to the constitution of the United States which will extend the right of suffrage to the women of this republic, as it extended it to the negro men slaves of the south after the race had been emancipated.

This amendment which is to enfranchise all women in the United States has been read twice in the senate and referred to the committee on woman suffrage and reads this way:

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein) that the following article be proposed to the legislatures of the several states as an amendment to the constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of the said legislatures, shall be valid as part of said constitution, namely:

ARTICLE —.

Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

Section 2. The congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to enforce the provisions of this article.

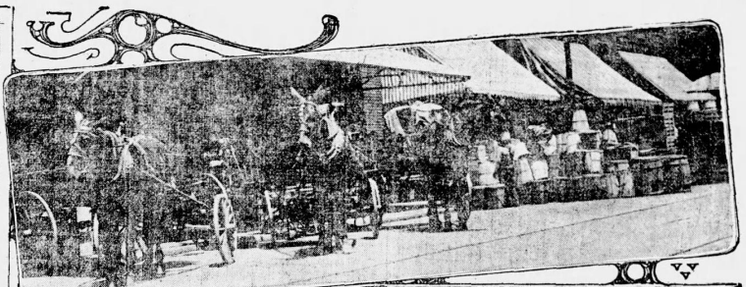
The first organized demand for the rights of women, which was made at the first woman's rights convention held in the world in 1848 at Seneca Falls, N. Y., asked for women the right to have personal freedom, to acquire an education, to earn a living, to claim her wages, to own property, to make contracts, to bring suit, to testify in court, to obtain a divorce for just cause, to possess her children, to claim a fair share of the accumulations during marriage and last but not least they asked for the franchise, the ballot, the right preservative of all rights.

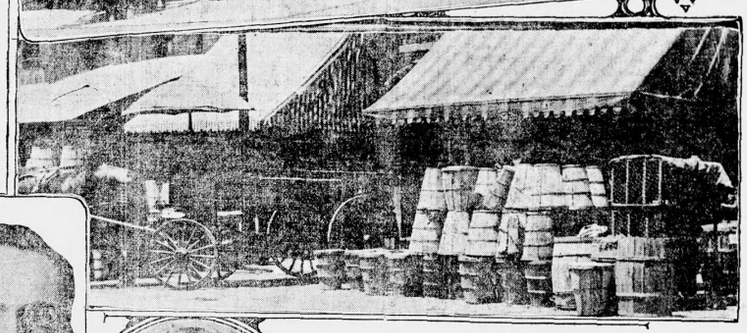
THE STORM BROKE.

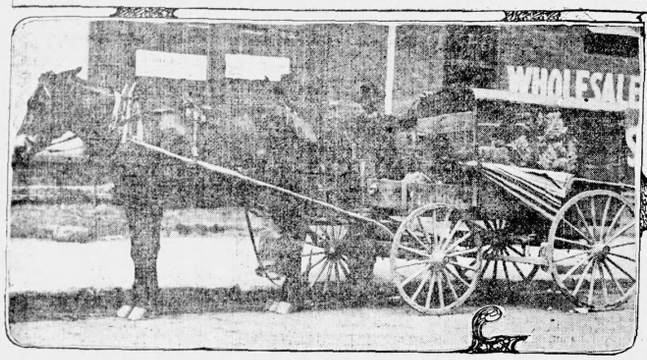
The storm broke on these devoted *women and they were almost over*whelmed by the slanders and vituperations poured upon them. As a rule women possess an immense amount of "stickability," and so it was with Lucretia Mott, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lucy Stone and the scores of other brave women who have long since passed away. Today the small body of Georgia woman suffragists, looking backward to the days that tried the souls of those pioneers, are filled with gratitude to them that they have smoothed the rugged pathway for us and made the world a better place for women to live in. The Georgia Woman Suffragists will have a bill introduced at the next session of the legislature which convenes in June to amend the constitution of the state and submit it to the voters, all the while hoping that the congress of the United States will soon pass the resolution as above stated and submit it to the legislature to be acted upon.

Ex-Governor Folk of Missouri told the Mississippi Valley conference of woman suffragists which was held in St. Louis lately that within ten years women would have the ballot in every state in the union. He also said: "The mightiest force in the world today for better things is the influence of good women. The more interest they take in public affairs, the better public affairs will be. With women added to the army of peace, we may hope to see the day when the purification of politics will cease to be an irridescent dream." When such Georgia men as Mr. Samuel Inman, Rev. Hugh Walker, Rev. Frank Siler, Dr. James W. Lee and scores of good men are not afraid to endorse the woman's movement, why should anybody hang back and give it the cold shoulder? The Georgia Woman's Suffrage association will hold its annual meeting in Atlanta while the legislature is in session. You are cordially invited to be present.

Public Market Proposed for Atlanta To Decrease the High Cost of Living







A. J. ORME

The wagons of hucksters are one of Atlanta's present substitutes for a public market. The crates shown here are shipments of vegetables received principally from Forida. It is said that the establishment of a public market in Atlanta would cause the development of a great truck gardening industry in farm lands adjacent to the city, and would not longer make it necessary for Atlanta to look to Florida for produce. The truck gardening industry of the suburbs would be increased many times over; and vegetables would come to the city fresher and at a lower price.

WILMER L. MOORE.

A. J. Orme, chairman of the public market committee of the chamber of commerce, and Wilmer L. Moore, president of the chamber. Mr. Orme proposes that the city issue $500,000 in bonds with which to erect a public market, Mr. Moore advocates an underwriting company, which shall subscribe $250,000 for the erection of a market.

A plan proposed to secure a site for a public market is that authority be secured from the legislature to build a platform over the railway tracks below Forsyth street bridge.

PRESIDENT WILMER L. MOORE, of the chamber of commerce, suggests that an underwriting company be formed in Atlanta to build a public market place, which shall cost about $250,000.

A. J. Orme, chairman of the public market committee of the chamber of commerce, advises an issue by the city of half a million dollars in bonds, with which to buy a central lot of about 200x300 dimensions and there erect a public market place.

A third proposal is that authority be secured from the legislature for the city or for an underwriting company to bridge the railway tracks below Forsyth street bridge, and upon this platform to prepare a place for a public market.

Probably a deeper interest is felt in the establishment of a public market for Atlanta than in any other of a series of public plans recently proposed.

President Moore addressed to each member of the chamber of commerce a list of undertakings upon which he thought that the city should engage and asked each member's opinion of the advisability of these plans.

More answers were favorable to the building of a market than to any one of the other undertakings proposed.

The women's clubs are interested in this project, and citizens as a whole believe that it is a most important plan.

DECREASE COST OF LIVING.

The opinion of both Mr. Moore and Mr. Orme is that a public market would decrease the cost of living, and would do much toward solving the problem of debt.

They do not believe that it would be an injury to grocers or to any other class of business men. On the other hand they believe that it would build up a new industry in the form of truck gardening.

The advantages they see in a public market are:

Cheaper vegetables.

More wholesome vegetables.

Convenience for the housewife.

And the development of the farm lands adjacent to Atlanta into truck gardens.

In the opinion of Mr. Orme an item of $500,000 for the erection of a public market would accomplish more than any other provision toward carrying the proposed bond issue.

Mr. Moore believes that an underwriting company would be entirely practicable, and would assure establishment of a public market.

"The enquiries which I sent out," said Mr. Moore, "show that more people are interested in a public market than in any other public undertaking for Atlanta.

"But I don't believe that the city will issue more bonds just at this time, and it seems to me that an underwriting company is the most practicable means of providing for a market.

CITY TO TAKE OVER MARKET.

"My plans for such a company are that after a time the market would be taken over by the city. The company would be the builder, but eventually the city would become the owner.

"Four branch markets would be better than one public market. But they would cost too much. The cost of one central market would be about $250,000. It should be built of brick. It should have marble counters and tile floors, and should be carefully screened.

"But the expense would be repaid in more ways than one. If it did nothing else but build up an important truck gardening industry—which it assuredly would do—such a market would be well worth while.

"Lands around Atlanta, which are now put to little use, would become valuable for gardening purposes; this city would become a market from which produce would be shipped to other cities; and a new business would be fostered.

"There is no question whatever about such a market saving money for the people of Atlanta, nor can it be doubted that the quality of food would be improved and that marketing would be made much easier.

ALL MARKETS IN ONE.

"As it is now, the housewife can see only a part of what the part affords. Even though she goes marketing, she can visit only one or two stores, and must depend upon what they have in stock and what prices they offer. But, on the other hand, if Atlanta had a public market, all that the market offered would be collected in one place, and the purchaser could chose not only the best but the cheapest.

"A public market would mean: cheap food, clean food, fresh food, and properly inspected food. And, in addition, it would mean the development of a great truck gardening industry."

Mr. Orme believes that a public market would pay for itself immediately, that the individual citizens would be benefited greatly, and that the truck industry of which Mr. Moore speaks, would add much to the importance of Atlanta.

"No expenditure," he said, "could appeal more to the people than a bond issue of $500,000 with which to erect a public market. Such an item included in the proposed bond issue would do more to get votes for such a public movement than any other plan of development.

"A public market is a project that would benefit the city as a whole and the citizens as individuals. Unlike most public undertakings, it would begin at once to repay the city, and soon would be a source of profit rather than expense.

"The city would get its revenue from the rent of stalls into which the market would be divided. This rent would be made low for the purpose of aiding the produce men, but it would be sufficient to more than repay the city for its investment.

"The chief difficulty is in getting a suitable location. Central property in Atlanta when you buy it by a frontage of 200 or 300 feet, comes high, and a market that was not centrally located would be of no use, unless we had three or four in various parts of the city.

"I think that a bond issue of about half a million dollars would be necessary to secure a central location of sufficient size. But I do not believe that $500,000 could be spent more wisely or more profitably.

"A public market can be built in Atlanta, and it will receive the support of the people more than any other public undertaking. Such a market would be of vital importance to them. Particularly would it benefit the man and woman who must economize. It would give them the means of greater economy, and at the same time would offer them better food.

RESULTS OF A PUBLIC MARKET.

"A public market would mean cheapness, sanitation, better quality, and freshness in food.

"The small grocer thinks that the public market would put him out of business. It would do nothing of the kind. It would simply cause him to move his business to the public market.

"If the city could get authority from the state to bridge the tracks below Forsyth street bridge, and there build a market, the problem of a site would be solved. The market would be in the heart of the city, and would offer sufficient room for all the food supplies that would there be sold.

"But whether the city could get such authority from the state is a question. The only way by which we could secure permission to bridge the tracks would be through the legislature.

But, in any event, a central site could be secured; and with an issue of bonds, the market could be built."

A. W. Farlinger, who formerly was in the grocery business and who has studied the workings of the public markets in Europe, believes that such a market in Atlanta would be the greatest undertaking to which the city could give its attention. He particularly stresses the truck gardening industry, which would be built up through such a market.

CITY'S GREATEST NEED.

"It is one of the greatest needs of Atlanta," he said. "It would make food cheaper, it would give the people better vegetables, and it would make the suburbs rich in truck gardens. I don't believe that anything could be added to Atlanta that would be of greater benefit than a public market.

"The regulations governing such a market probably would prohibit peddlers from being on the street before 11 o'clock in the morning. The usual regulations are to permit them to sell their wares after that time.

"The present system of handling foodstuffs in Atlanta is very costly. People pay much more than they would if a public market were established. The cost of living is higher than it should be.

"Everyone would be benefited by a public market and no one would be injured. The grocers themselves would simply stop handling products in which they had best not deal. Atlanta by all means should provide for a public market."

R. L. Foreman, who, as a member of the chamber of commerce, has studied the question of a public market, says that such an undertaking would have only advantages and no disadvantages.

"I have three reasons for advocating a public market," he said. "First it would be a great convenience; second, it would enable the city to inspect foodstuffs more carefully; thirdly, it would offer people a means of economy.

INCONVENIENCE OF MARKETING.

"Under present conditions it takes a woman's whole morning to really market, and then she can visit but a few stores, and see only a part of what the market offers. A public market, however, would be a place where all the produce would be gathered under one shelter, and the housewife could choose what was best and what was cheapest."

The chamber of commerce has made an investigation of the subject of public markets, and has found that among the cities in which such markets are in effect are:

Baltimore, which has eleven public markets; Washington, D. C., which has six public markets; Columbus, Ohio, which has four; St. Louis, Cleveland, and Pittsburg, which have three each; Dayton, Richmond, and Detroit, which have two each; Kansas City, Indianopolis, Denver, Newark, Nashville, Syracuse, Boston, Toledo, and St. Paul, which have one each.

In most of these cities the markets are open from daylight until noon. In a few, they are open throughout the day. Butchers, hucksters, and grocers, all sell their goods at these markets. The rent for each stall of the markets varies from $10 to $30.

MARKETS OF DETROIT.

One of the most interesting replies to the chamber's inquiries was from the Detroit chamber of commerce. In writing upon the public markets of Detroit, the business manager said:

"When this town was first incorporated more than a century ago, a public market was established and the same policy has been maintained ever since. The advantages, even the necessity of such marts are universally recognized. The present method of conducting them is as follows:

"The city has provided in the eastern and western sections large areas which are paved, sewered and protected by roofs supported by pillars. They are open for occupation by farmers' and market gardeners' wagons from 6 p. m. till noon the next day. It is the custom of many farmers to arrive in the evening, put up their horses, and sleep in their wagons.

"Up to July last there was a uniform charge of ten cents a day for each wagon. Then a change was made under which the farmer could secure the space for a year at $50.

"To almost the full extent of their operation the markets fulfill their main purpose of bringing the producer into contact with the consumer or small dealer. It is here that many of the retailers go for their daily supplies and here hundreds of householders provide for their tables. The markets are not only a great convenience to the public, but serve a useful purpose in regulating prices."

MAN OF THE HOUR

BY WALT MASON.

"I hope Woodrow Wilson will make good in the White House" observed the assessor, "but, like a good many other taxpayers, I can't help thinking that it's a sin to mention him or any other recent president on the same day with Abraham Lincoln."

"Abraham Lincoln was a great man," replied the village patriarch, "and I'd administer severe chastisement to any man who held to the contrary; but we shouldn't forget his opportunities. I often wonder how Lincoln would have stacked up had a balmy peace been waving her white pinions over this country during his administration. Had he been compelled to devote all his time to appointing postmasters and shooing hungry patriots out of the front yard, would his great qualities ever have been discovered?

"There used to be a no-account man named Jake Trap in this town.

"Jake had hung around for years, and there wasn't a man in town who would have traded a yellow dog for him, and if anybody had said that he had the germ of greatness in him there'd have been a horse laugh. But his opportunity came at last. One day he went down a well to see what was polluting the water and the well caved in on him. Fortunately some rocks formed an arch over him and kept the fallen earth from crushing him.

"For ten days he existed down in that hole while a rescue party worked to dig him out. The news of his misadventure was telegraphed all over the country and multitudes of breathless people bought the newspapers to read the latest bulletins about him. When he was finally dug out the landscape was black with photographs and reporters, and he was the boss hero of the United States for several weeks.

"He placed himself on exhibition and the money fairly rolled in. He wrote articles about his experience for the magazines and got checks by every mail. His wife, who used to a wear a secondhand horse blanket, came swelling down Main street in silk and his kids all became Little Lord Fauntleroys in the twinkling of an eye. Jake went ahead coining money until a man who had gone over Niagara Falls in a pine coffin or a revolving churn or something attracted public attention and then he came back home and bought a farm and has been prosperous ever since. If that well hadn't caved in on him he'd be skirmishing around the town today wearing somebody's cast-off rags and looking for a handout.

"No man can be great unless he has a chance, and the same chance won't do for everybody. I feel sure that Woodrow Wilson will prove to be a great man if the conditions are favorable, but if he has to spend all his time choosing postmasters and internal revenue collectors he may not be classed with Washington and Lincoln."

Where are the Pickles of Yesterday?

THE day of the pickle and the olive is gone.

The High school misses who used to have them for breakfast, dinner, supper and as tidbits between times, have gone in for a new fashion.

The pickle and olives have all the savor of old, but they are no longer fashionable.

The new style is to eat ice cream out of a cornucopia design. It is even more fashionable than "hot dogs."

But High school maids find that cones of ice cream are an unceasing delight. They eat more of them than they formerly did of pickles and olives. This is the highest possible proof.

They also have made the fortune of a little shop near Peachtree street. In the checkered lights and shadows, not twenty yards from the glare of Peachtree, stands this little shop. It is the land of the ice cream cone, where the price of entrance is but a nicket.

LAND OF THE CONE.

All conditions of humans go to the land of the cone. From seven schools there is a steady stream of customers who pause daily between the hours of twelve and three to pay their way into this gastronomic heaven; small boys revel in huge bites of cream; little girls hide their rosy faces behind chunks of cream; high school lasses throw the dignity of a senior to the winds and sink their teeth into frozen mounds of cream. Even their elders are not averse to a cone or so a day.

The man behind the counter says that the average sale of a hot summer's day is at least eight hundred cones. The hours of recess and dismissal for the schools mark the briskest moments of trade. But the shop does a rushing business when the city sends out its workers at evening on their homeward march.

Then the shop-girl forgets yards of ribbons and bales of cloth in one small taste of "strawberry and vanilla mixed."

The shop stays open for the very purpose of catching this band of weary workers. Sometimes it does not close util even later, for very often theater-goers and belated dancers find the cone counter a sort of midsummer night's dream.

MYSTERY IN THE EATING.

There is nothing to be ashamed of in an ice cream cone. But the deliciousness is enhanced ten times by the fact that there is a certain secrecy and mystery in the eating. Now, in "hot dogs" there is also a mystery, but it is not concerned principally with the manner of the eating, but more with the morsel itself.

Grown-ups are very much like children, and citizens with gray whiskers visit the little shop. This is where the secrecy comes in. It doesn't comport with one's dignity when one wears a dress suit and a silk hat, to eat ice cream cones not twenty yards from Peachtree.

But ask the man at the shop.

Prominent citizens come there slyly, eat a cone or two, and depart in hurried satisfaction.

The only danger which hovers about an ice-cream cone is the chance that the consumers are very likely to become great hypocrites. For instance:

It chanced one afternoon that the housewife and the gossip were townward bound on the same street car. As they sped by the little shop around the corner who should emerge but the Butterfly, casually nibbling a cone.

The nose of the housewife tilted skyward, paralleled by the nose of the gossip. They sniffed.

"Rather low, I call it," declared the housewife. "But just what one might expect of a girl that married a barber."

"And on the street, too!" said the other.

Time passed. It was another summer's day and the little shop around the corner was doing a rushing trade. A woman hastily glided in the door.

As she left another shadow entered. They turned and the housewife and the gossip were face to face.

A car whirled by and the scornful face of the Butterfly gazed upon her. Her nose tilted skyward and she sniffed.

KING MANUEL AND FIANCEE

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 24.—The news of King Manuel's engagement came rather as a surprise. However, we admire his taste. The lady is pretty, with exquisite fair hair, a peach complexion, and a face which would pass for a typical English flapper of the most refined instincts. The papers do, of course, dub the arrangement a "love match" and we hope it is, but the hand of the designing Bourbons can be easily traced in the betrothal. The lady is a daughter of Prince William, of Hohenzollern, who is head of the elder and Catholic branch of the Hohenzollern family.

Of this stock were drawn King Carol of Roumania, and the famous "Red Prince" (that late Prince Leopold whose candidature for the Spanish crown resulted in the disastrous Franco-Prussian war). The prince, though he failed to secure the Spanish crown, lived to wear that of the sister country, however, for he married an infanta of Portugal. And as that lady's mother was no less than the famous Donna Maria da Gloria, who for eighteen years was queen of Portugal, it will be seen that, from a purely dynastic point of view, the fiances had a sort of right to be considered by King Manuel before he fixed his affections elsewhere. That his future wife should have an almost equal aspiration for the recovery of the Portuguese crown with her future husband makes the engagement quite a romantic one, and symptomatic of future developments in the way of Lisbon.

DAINTY GOWNS FOR THE GIRL GRADUATE

THIS is a season of delightful expectancy to the young girl about to graduate. She has spent many years in careful preparation for this event and welcomes the broader sphere of action to which graduation is but the brief prologue. She longs for the opportunity to test the theories formulated during the student days and bravely faces the future, whether its path leads to a college, a home or the business world.

The girlish heart flutters with excitement as she accompanies mother on a shopping tour to select the materials for her graduation frocks.

The all-white gown continues to be the favorite for the graduation ceremony, and the shops display many attractive materials suitable for this purpose. They are sheer and soft, requiring little trimming to produce an effective gown.

The dainty French crepes have come with the approval of fashion's center stamped upon them and will be extensively used for the graduation frock. Voile, sheer linen, batiste (plain or embroidered), swiss and silk crepon are equally popular.

This collection of drawings illustrates the loveliest models recently displayed at a salon on the Place Vendome. Simplicity is the keynote of each frock, and they should appeal to the girlish idea of beauty in line and trimming.

Extremely pretty and becoming to almost any type is the frock with the tucked panel trimming the front. The material is sheer white linen, with the tucked panel extending into the bodice, forming a point at the base of the yoke of cluny lace. Bands of cluny lace insertion outline the panel and adorn the sleeves. The full sleeves are gathered into the stopped shoulder seams and a tight cuff or the lace confines the fullness below the elbow.

From beneath a softly crushed girdle of white satin falls the gathered skirt, the tunic portion meeting a plain underskirt. Cotton voile or French crepon can be used for this model and valenciennes or Irish crochet lace substituted for the cluny.

The lovely frock with the double-pointed collar of lace is fashioned of silk crepon. Above the girdle a broad band of embroidered net is stitched, and over this falls the double collar of softly gathered embroidered net. The short sleeves are finished with a narrow frill of the net and a band of satin tied in a soft bow at the top.

A girdle of the satin defines the waist line, and from beneath this the skirt falls in straight, graceful lines.

A wide flounce of the material, bordered with a band of the embroidered net, adorns the skirt. If preferred, cotton crepe, voile or batiste can be successfully used to duplicate this model. Bands of embroidered batiste and cluny lace are suitable trimming.

Soft white batiste is used for the confiding frock with a deep, round face formed of bands of puffing and lace insertion. This yoke extends well over the shoulders, meeting the full, elbow sleeves, and frills of the material, edged with the insertion, fall over the forearms. The skirt is perfectly plain, save for three bands of puffing trimming it at the knees. A girdle of white satin, with long sash ends edged with fringe, encircles the waist line.

This design is unusually inexpensive to duplicate, and any woman who can sew will find it an easy task. Bands of the fine, embroidered net, in some simple design, can be substituted for the lace. Other materials appropriate for this model are crepe de chine, crepon, swiss and linen.

The model pictured wears an exquisitely simple frock of white crepe de chine. A deep, shaped yoke, formed of finely pleated frills of lace, adorns the bodice. Each frill is trimmed at the top with a narrow band of white velvet tied in a tiny bow.

The short sleeves are formed of two scant puffs set in at dropped shoulder seams. A double flounce of the material forms the straight-gathered skirt, and a waist belt of white velvet completes the costume. This dainty frock would be attractive if made of chiffon, French crepe, shadow lace over a foundation of silk, batiste or linen. It is simple in construction and any mother who sews could fashion a frock of this type.

The last design of this quintet is made of mousseline de soie over a foundation of white satin. Alencon lace is used for the sleeve cashings and the insets above the narrow cuffs, formed of ruchings of the mousseline de soie.

The yoke folds over surplice fashion and is trimmed with scant frills of the mousseline de soie. From beneath the folded girdle of white satin the straight skirt falls in graceful lines. A broad band of the alencon lace is stitched sixteen inches from the bottom.

These frocks are artistic examples of the class from which your daughter may make a better selection. Consult your daughter and, when she has chosen the model which appeals to her individuality, purchase the materials and fashion her graduation frock. The eventful day is but a few weeks distant, and do not have her worried at the last minute for fear that her frock will not be completed in time; nor should you have her harassed with fittings when she requires rest.

There is much to do during the week or two preceding graduation day, so prepare the graduate's wardrobe as soon as possible.

Hats for Bridesmaids

IF THE attendants of the bride are wise, they will choose hats that are slightly different from the small shapes that are gracing shop windows or pretty heads on the street.

Bridesmaids' hats should complete the dainty costumes planned for the wedding. The newest ones are of the garden party type, large, becoming and trimmed with lace, flowers and ribbon. They are made in such sweet variety that the only difficulty that confronts the interested young woman is the choice from a great number.

One exquisite hat is of leghorn, with drooping brim, faced on the under surface with pink maline shirred on cords at the upper and lower edges. Around the flat crown is a pleated frill of pink maline. Tiny yellow roses in two varieties are placed on the maline.

In pale blue hemp a large flat hat is shown, with a refreshing combination of silver gauze. This is shirred on the upper surface of crown and brim, extending in a full hem over the edge. Silver metallic ribbon brocaded in blue flowers is tied around the crown, passing through two slots on the back and tying in a full bow under the brim.

In yellow hemp, a hat that suggests a sloop, sweet pea trimmed with yellow-and-white daisies in a simple wreath on the brim. Underneath is a shirred facing of yellow chiffon flowered in daisies that look like shadows on the straw. Daisy hatpins, by the way, accompany this model.

The rose hat for a bridesmaid goes without any advertising. It is one of the expected things, on white tagal straw there is a wreath of small circles formed of pink roses twined over green wire. Green velvet ribbon forms streamers that pass through slots and are tied in loops that are caught on one shoulder.

Green net, combined with white tulle or maline is shirred over a white straw, and bunches of pale green and white grasses are caught at each side of the front, pointing back. Pearl and green buckles hold them in place. The effect is refreshing in its simplicity and coolness.

Forget-me-nots are scattered in tiny bunches over crepe chiffon, which is stretched on a leghorn shape. On the under surface are stenciled forget-me-nots in clusters, and velvet ribbon to match the blue bands the crown and hangs in long loops over the back brim.

The all-white hat with color introduced in one rose is always appropriate for a bridesmaid. This is covered with shirred maline, which is gathered around the crown on a wire. The pleated frill is edged with a rose quilling of maline, which gives a fluffy thistle-down effect. At one side a large pink rose nestles in the maline. It can be on the under or upper surface of the brim.

These are suggestions that should place on every bridesmaid's head a becoming hat that will be as lovely after the wedding as it looks in the interesting procession.

What the Dressmaker Wants to Know

THE question of fabric will be unusually perplexing to the dressmaker this fall, as Paris has recently instituted some advance styles which will appear later in the season, for which silk will be the employment of a great deal of lace.

It is always the entirely new which is of the most importance in fashions, and to the dressmaker it is of moment always to know what silks will make it possible to use materials which the customers has on hand, as there is nothing so costly as lace it is especially advisable. There is no doubt that lace will play a very important part in the coming season, but it will appear in only such quantities as, but allover will be used as a fabric, many of the most beautiful of the dresses and evening models of the season can be assured of using almost any style and any material.

The indispensable guide to the purchase of silks will be the manner of its making, and as this will be specified in three styles, to make a broad statement, it is quite possible to purchase far enough ahead to make choice of pattern and quality, and also to provide sufficient quantity to make a dress.

The first style to be noted is the tunic or dress that effect, which is obtained by using a deep lace flouncing in straight lines from the shoulders well down over the hips, and either loose or belted and in decollete or high neck. Black is used over white and white over black, and the favorite laces are filet, venise, chantilly, Bohemian, Spanish or the combination designs. Those with a fancy picot or distinctly scalloped edge are favored.

The second style is the dress foundation of messaline, charmeuse or whatever is desired, with an entire overdress made of lace flounces. Various widths are used, from 20 inches forming the entire skirt in two rows, and draped to form the fichu and sleeves, to four or five inches with pannier or tunic draperies of allover to match. Chantilly, shadow, Bohemian, net top or Parasguay laces are first favorites, and white is best thought of for these styles.

The third class of model is the tailored or demi-tailored, in which the heavy laces are used as coats and other trimming. Already many of the most exclusive Parisian houses are making fall models in this class; for example, a navy-blue charmeuse calling costume with draped skirt in high-waisted style has a blouse of cream shadow lace with ruffles of baby irish and touches of scarlet and emerald in the lining, while a coat of heavy handmade bliche lace is trimmed with bands of skunk an inch wide. Lace blouses will be pre-eminent as the dressy costume waist, and so far it seems as if the favorite laces will be light weight in these dainty models. Gold lace blouses are very chic, and it must be borne in mind that when "blouse" is spoken of it means the blouse made into the dress in all high-class models. The three-piece dress is the strongest feature in high-class ready-made garments, and it has its counterpart in the dressy lace blouse in the custom toilette.

One might go on to the very marked use of allover lace for negligees, house gowns, etc., and also cite the use of lace ruffles, bands and motifs in all possible effects. Lace is to be the most fashionable of the fall trimmings, and the safest styles to buy will be shadow, Bohemian, binche, heavy filet, torchon or cluny, combination styles, chantilly and net top. Irish will be best in the baby designs.

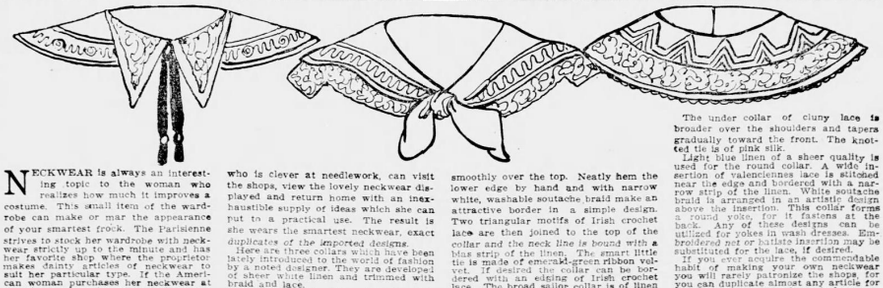
THE BRAID-TRIMMED COLLAR



NECKWEAR is always an interesting topic to the woman who realizes how much it improves a costume. This small item of the wardrobe can make or mar the appearance of your smartest frock. The Parisienne strives to stock her wardrobe with neckwear strictly up to the minute and has her favorite shop where the proprietor makes dainty articles of neckwear to suit her particular type. If the American woman purchases her neckwear at the shops where imported neckwear is sold it costs her a small fortune to keep apace with the modes, for they are constantly changing. Her fortunate sister, who is clever at needlework, can visit the shops, view the lovely neckwear displayed and return home with an inexhaustible supply of ideas which she can put to a practical use. The result is she wears the smartest neckwear, exact duplicates of the imported designs.

Here are three collars which have been lately introduced to the world of fashion by a noted designer. They are developed of sheer white linen and trimmed with braid and lace.

To duplicate the collar with the pointed corners first cut a pattern from paper. When it fits perfectly use this as a foundation, basting the linen smoothly over the top. Neatly hem the lower edge by hand and with narrow white, washable soutache braid make an attractive border in a simple design. Two triangular motifs of Irish crochet lace are then joined to the top of the collar and the neck line is bound with a bias strip of the linen. The smart little tie is made of emerald-green ribbon velvet. If desired the collar can be bordered with an edging of Irish crochet lace. The broad sailor collar is of linen and cluny lace. Cut the top collar from pale pink linen and use pink soutache braid for the border, stitching it entirely by hand.

The under collar of cluny lace is broader over the shoulders and tapers gradually toward the front. The knotted tie is of pink silk.

Light blue linen of a sheer quality is used for the round collar. A wide insertion of valenciennes lace is stitched near the edge and bordered with a narrow strip of the linen. White soutache braid is arranged in an artistic design above the insertion. This collar forms a round yoke, for it fastens at the back. Any of these designs can be utilized for yokes in wash dresses. Embroidered net or batiste insertion may be substituted for the lace, if desired.

If you ever acquire the commendable habit of making your own neckwear you will rarely patronize the shops, for you can duplicate almost any article for about one-half the price asked.

Purchase the materials and copy one of these attractive collars; the result will tell its own interesting story.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, May 15.

THE children of Paris welcome joyfully the first warm days, which are the harbingers of many more to be spent out in the sunshine.

They play at hide-and-seek among the trees of the Champs Elysees and, when they tire of this, visit the Theatres Guignol and the Marionettes.

The French children, even at play, always appear smartly attired, and the little frocks of cream or white serge, with their coats to match, are especially attractive. Many of these have collars embroidered of silk of brilliant colors and others are braided with narrow silk soutache.

The smocked frocks of challis and crepon are also much in evidence, and the dainty models of embroidered linen, voile, batiste or crepon have the hallmarks of the grown-up fashions.

Children's millinery this season has reached a perfection hitherto unknown. The hats are not overtrimmed and are artistic from every point of view. For street wear there are smart models of milan, hemp and chip, trimmed with ribbon, bands of Bulgarian embroidery, flowers or velvet. The dainty hats for best wear are shirred mousseline de soie, chiffon, crepe de chine, flowered taffeta or embroidered crepon. There are other models of shadow lace, net, point d'esprit and mull. One lovely hat is formed entirely of narrow frills of valenciennes lace, and pink satin roses are used to trim it.

Paquin has adopted contrast rather than harmony as the keynote to color schemes, and most of her creations emphasize this fact. One of the most successful models of this season is a street costume of blue serge. Over an underbodice of silk, showing brilliant red and blue flowers on a tan background, the bodice of serge, elaborately embroidered with blue braid, is arranged to form a modified bolero jacket effect. The skirt is braided to form a yoke about the hips and a border at the hem. About the waist is drawn a belt of brilliant yellow patent leather, fastened with a steel buckle. A touch of daintiness is contributed by the collar and cuffs of white batiste.

While Premet believes in vivid coloring, he prefers to soften the effect in some original manner. A handsome gown of soft blue silk in a flower design of red, tan and blue has an oddly shaped tunic drapery of blue chiffon. Frills of cream lace soften the V-shaped neck line.

Drecoll is responsible for an extreme coat suit of dark blue brocaded silk with a contrasting coat of biscuit colored duvetine. The coat has an eight-inch girdle of the brocade buttoned up the side front with flat biscuit-colored buttons, and the sleeves are cut in one with the coat.

Many handsome coat suits have loosely draped jackets of flowered silk in brilliant colors. Sometimes these are caught about the waist with prelate sashes of a contrasting color.

The very newest sleeves fit the forearm closely, coming well down over the hand, where they are finished with bell-shaped or mitten cuffs. From the elbow upward the width increases and, being a continuation of the kimono bodice, there is no seam at the shoulder.

In most of the spring gowns the vest of fancy material is a prominent feature. These do not resemble the mannish waistcoat, but appear in odd designs, and are fashioned of brocaded and printed flower materials.

At the blouse shops are sold separate vests of striped or flowered silks, and a few models are fashioned of handsome oriental embroideries.

The sash continues to be one of the marked features of the modish gown, and its phases are innumerable. A charming model of dull green tussore has an oriental sash of black satin embroidered with bright silks in a floral design arranged about the hips. Embroidered batiste collar and cuffs complete the gown.

The newest lingerie blouse is finished at the neck like a Japanese kimono; the double facing of material gives an unusual touch to the blouse.

For the strictly afternoon costume silk is used, and the varieties favored are crepe de chine, poplin moire, moire taffeta, patterned silk and crepon.

With the slashed skirt Parisiennes are wearing sandal slippers laced with ribbons and tied in bows or fastened with tiny gold or brilliant buckles.

Anklets of brilliant silk are worn by the fashionable women.

Black-and-white silk stockings have insets of lace over the ankle and instep, and vary in price according to the quality of the lace used.

The fashionable glove of the moment matches in color the gown worn. There are to be had in all lengths, and are usually embroidered and stitched with the same color.

Separate sashes to wear with lingerie frocks are made of ribbon bordered with ribbon velvet or trimmed with flat flowers and bowknots formed of narrow taffeta ribbon.

Corsage bouquets of tightly swirled roses of mousseline de soie in pale or vivid colors, with a setting of foliage, are fashion's latest caprice.

The Bulgarian note has now invaded the realm of footwear, and smart shops are displaying low shoes of silk crepe or brocade in the Bulgarian and Persian designs. With these are worn stockings matching the predominating color used in the silk.

The quill-trimmed hat is the latest offering of Parisian milliners, and Jeanne Lanvin, Georgette, Marie Louise, Doucet and Caroline Reboux adorn many of their smartest models with stiff, jaunty quills.

Jewelry of platinum continues to be in high favor, and the oddly shaped watches of this metal are worn on chains about the neck or are mounted in bracelet style upon ribbon or pliable links of platinum.

A pendant, which has superseded the plaque, is made to represent a tiny lantern. These are shown in a great variety of styles, and it is easy to imagine the beautiful ornaments framed, delicate openwork designs, carvings and exquisite jeweled settings used to make these dainty trifles.

One Rue de la Paix jeweler shows a wonderful collection of oriental jewelry. There is a craze here for serpents of carved or hammered gold richly incrusted with colored jewels. These are clasped about the neck or arms or crawl among milady's tresses.

White pearls and diamonds are no longer enjoying their former favor. The jewel of the present, like everything else, must be tinted.

CHOOSING RIGHT CLOTHES FOR SUMMER IN EUROPE

It Is Not Always Easy to Decide on the Proper Clothes for the Steamer and Trains and One Must Work Out the Question of Luggage With Care and Counsel

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

IT IS very simple to talk of serges and brocades of crepe de chine and satin cloths when there is a modicum of chill in the air and summer has not really come. It is the rare one who realizes in May what July is really like; years of experience teach her that midsummer and sometimes the whole summer is rather unbearable below Boston, south and west. Yet the knowledge seems to be confined to theory with the majority, because each year one continually hears the same belief expressed, that possibly a thin serge suit will really serve through summer.

The truth is that any fabric with a thread of worsted in it is bound to be uncomfortable on any warm day, no matter whether it comes in May or October. It is all very well to talk about using a cloth coat suit abroad, because one can do it nearly all the time except in those rare summers such as Europe had two years ago when the heat was as intense as ours.

But in America, to the majority of women a cloth suit is only for the occasional day. It usually hangs in the closet from June until October, with an infrequent glimpse at the outer world. The woman who has put a good deal of money into it and sacrificed several thin gowns because of it is apt to feel thoroughly disgruntled with her judgment. These are the days when every woman considers that every other woman buys apparel more wisely than she does. The only comfort about this belief is that it is universal.

Now is the time for decision. The warm weather has already been felt, but there are three months and possibly more of it to be gone through with. We do not have the comforting assurance that Europe has of intermittent heat with long spells of coolness, nor do our resorts offer any surcease of heat although they are better on the New England coast than anywhere else. Even Bar Harbor has strong heat during the day, and the entire range of resorts, from Newport to Atlantic City, does not offer a continuance of cool days.

If a woman has bought a lightweight worsted suit she has already had some comfort with it and she can not look forward to getting much service out of it unless she is sailing the sea for cooler climes, and that is the subject that is worth while discussing right now.

CLOTHES FOR EUROPE.

But are you going abroad or are you going to spend your summer in America? On this decision hangs the whole problem of your wardrobe. Suppose you are going to Europe. What clothes shall you take, and how many, and how shall they be packed? It is impromidic to say that luggage on a foreign trip is almost as important as the ticket and next in importance to your frame of mind. It might be added that the latter is often governed by the first, for many a woman has been irritated by the expense of excess baggage to see the beauty of the Irish lakes and too nervous because of a missing trunk to laugh at the latest gaiety comedy in London.

When luggage is as vital as this it can not cease to be of interest, and the experience of those who go often must surely be helpful to those who go seldom or who are making the trip for the first time. In the more economical and more expensive days, when a trip to Europe was such an event that the neighborhood took a part in the preparations, the luggage was begun six months before, and it might be safely said that three-quarters of the travelers took the wrong things with them.

Now that the ocean lines have made prices so reasonable and offer such a vast variety of prices because of the ships that cater to and fro every day, a trip to Europe has become the vacation looked forward to by all the workers of the world as well as those who play.

For this reason the question of the right kind of clothes as well as their quantity does not appeal merely to the rich and leisure class, but to the masses who like another's experience to help them along.

THE NECESSARY COAT SUIT.

One must have a dark worsted suit to bear the burden of the season. It would not be necessary for an American trip, though one knows it is cool. The same condition rules a linen suit. French women do not care for linen suits of any kind, and their verdict has influenced the whole of Europe, and one somehow never feels properly dressed over there in a plain white wash coat and skirt unless the day is exceedingly hot and one is at a summer resort and not in the city.

Again, linen is a debatable material for traveling usage, because of its almost malicious desire to wrinkle and crush at a touch. It needs constant ironing, which is the one especial thing that must be avoided in Europe; it is quickly done, but it is very expensive. And keeping a worsted suit in good condition when traveling is enough tax on one's purse and time.

It is difficult to find a better choice than dark blue serge, which goes in and out of first fashion all the time and yet remains in fashion through the decades. At present it is one of the first fabrics of the day, provided it has a slight cord and is not too much satinized, although the tendency of the day is toward a satin serge that is good to look at, but shows up every slight defacement. It is not as serviceable for everyday wear as the kind that has a slightly rough surface.

The fashion for making it must be decided by the individual, but the severely plain type of suit is more serviceable than any other kind, unless one objects to it because of her figure or style. The suit of the day, which has a fancy jacket and a draped skirt the former touched with a belt, a collar and cuffs of vivid colors, is all very well for the suit that is to be occasionally worn, but when one is to be in it day in and day out one is apt to tire of its convolutions.

Even the most fashionable dressmaker does not object to a plain suit in blue serge, although it looks better with a fancy fastening down the front and possibly a few folds at the left knee, which are held in at the seams and then fall free.

It should be made with an extension waist line and be loose and easy for the convenience of the tired traveller who may not like pulling in a corset to suit a waist belt that has been made to keep one trim; fortunately, however, the day of the huge waist makes for comfort in every kind of skirt.

The best kind of coat is single breasted and cut away in front, the length and the width of the cutaway depend entirely on the figure of the wearer. One has to be extremely slender to open the coat below the waist line in a reckless manner; it is far better to keep it upon a slightly bias line from waist to hips to give length rather than thickness.

If one wants to make this suit serve for many hotel dinners when traveling, it is wise to have a blouse made of the same material as far as the bust, and then a top of self-colored crêpe silk or satin, cut like a yoke with lowered armholes and a V shaped opening at the neck, outlined by a detached collar of white organdie, crepe de chine or lace.

By the way, the first principle in having comfortable clothes and being ready to meet any emergency when traveling in Europe is to take plenty of accessories; these weigh little and can be snugly tucked away without making bulk. If one will get a pillow shaped holder of flowered satin or silkoline, line it with sachet and china silk, put three clamps to fasten it and then fill it with collars, thin waists, neck ribbons and tulle in flat layers, and put it at the top of the trunk, where it can easily be reached, it will prove a boon and a blessing.

COOL CLOTHES FOR WARM DAYS.

It is unwise to depend on a serge suit for every hot day. One would be uncomfortable and unhappy in being without a very thin coat and skirt, or a one-piece frock in a dark color for stuffy weather. Don't be tempted by the alluring offerings in tan and pale brown, light blue and white fabrics for such suits. They are all very well for a woman who knows Europe, who has many social obligations and who may be visiting in houses instead of staying at hotels; but for the average woman who wants to be well dressed and with a minimum effort of time and money, the pale colored coat suit is an extravagance.

Possibly a second suit is a mistake; a one-piece frock is better and unless a woman is seriously tired of black or dark blue satin, she will find it one of the most attractive and wisest choices to make for a one-piece frock that is fastened in the front and can be worn with separate white gulmpes of lace or net. These are easily laundered in one's room.

Black voile or marquisette is also admirable and advocated by the best dressmakers to whom women go for a serviceable traveling frock. It is more expensive than satin, because it needs a satin lining, but it can be worn for so many different hours that it is very much approved.

It is possible that the better choice is a short frock of dark satin in black, blue or dark gray with white accessories, and instead of getting a black voile, choose a white one for dinner wear at any smart hotel where one stops. When one is in London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna, one must have a dinner gown, unless one intends to see the life of the smaller restaurants by dining there every evening.

This is especially the case in Paris, where the boulevard restaurants are so enticing to strangers who like to eat in the open and watch the multi-colored street crowds instead of dining at a restaurant that is a counterpart of our own. One does not wear a dinner gown for such sightseeing, so the white marquisette may be kept in the trunk for more formal moments.

It should be made over a thin white satin lining and have a colored girdle, some white lace and somewhere a brilliant flower or a bunch of small ones.

WHAT TO WEAR ON THE SHIP.

There has been a revolution in dressing aboard ship since seagoing hotels are run by turbines between the continents and seasickness is not to be anticipated as a matter of course. There are some travelers who stoutly defend the methods of dressing of a decade ago when one's old and shabby clothes were put on for the sailing hour and taken off at the retiring hour. A few may continue to do this even on a luxurious liner if one is more disposed to like by conviction than to follow the customs of the hour.

The majority of those who travel today do not appear in shabby clothes on any of the big liners any more than they would do so at a fashionable hotel. There is no reason for it. The decks are immaculate promenades, the dining room is brilliant and expensively decorated to offset attractive clothes, and the salon, private reception room and tea rooms have the same atmosphere as those on land.

It is in bad taste to overdress on a steamer as some very wealthy people do, but it is a mistake to be shabby and to try to get another week's wear out of every leftover in the closet. The blue serge suit should be put on every day with a fresh white blouse and a small hat which fits down on the head and has a minimum of trimming which must not consist of feathers or quills.

It is usual to run through warm weather in the gulf stream for three days out, and a serge suit may be uncomfortable. The one piece frock should be ready to wear, and right here is the only time you really have a chance to wear white wash skirts with blouses and white shoes. They are useless and expensive for Europe and should not be taken, but they serve admirably on the ship.

There is no way of getting them soiled, and so one does not have to take more than two skirts. Colored linen coat suits and frocks are also available the whole way over if the weather is moderate, and even when it is cold, one looks smart and is comfortable in short white skirts and light frocks of wash fabrics covered with a loose top coat of heavy tweed or homespun.

If one wishes to wear these clothes on the steamer and not be bothered with them in Europe, they can be packed in a suit case or a heavy box, and left in charge of the company on the ship. The disadvantage is in not returning by the same line, but even that can be managed.

CHOOSING THE TOP COAT.

No matter what else is dispensed with on a trip abroad, the top coat must be carried along from start to finish. Its uses are many, for it serves as a pillow and a blanket as often as it does a covering to a gown. It should be warm, light in weight and well cut. As it must be steadily worn it needs to be an addition to a gown and not a makeshift.

The so-called polo coat, which swept over the country two years ago is no longer favored, and the short raglan with its back belted or loose and covered with capacious pockets is the choice of the day. It is a good idea to make all topcoats short instead of long, as they are not so heavy to carry, and this means a good deal when one wears such a coat through ten hours of sightseeing.

Any kind of thin coat is useless, but a woman should try to take a cape such as has become very fashionable in the last two years. It may be of satin, or black and white check silk, or thin worsted, made with a half mandarin sleeve and a high rolling collar; this is of the greatest service in the evening, when one does not want to wear a rough coat over a light gown. It also serves for driving in the afternoon and for the many occasions which crop up through the summer.

It is much wiser when choosing a topcoat not to get it of any one color, and white should be especially avoided because of its ability to soil in a day. The mixed English fabrics which are neutral in effect are the best. They go with any kind of costume and never show dust or soil.

WHAT KIND OF LINGERIE.

The problem of the right kind and quantity of underwear to take on a trip abroad is not only puzzling to every one, but is never settled by any one. Even the experienced traveler changes her method every year. Naturally the question is not so serious now that women are disregarding underwear more and more and reducing it to a pair of silk combinations and an envelope chemise.

Another advantage that underwear has today is its exceeding sheerness; it can be folded into tiny packages and laid away in all crevices, and its bulk adds next to nothing to the trunk's weight. Some women make a rule of taking over their old underwear, discarding it in Paris and buying new, which is a plan to be commended if one is thoroughly warned beforehand how difficult it is to get French underwear that fits an American figure. It can be made to order better and cheaper there than anywhere in the world, but it can rarely be picked up at the shops.

The only kind of petticoat that is necessary is of Jersey silk with a knife pleated flounce of messaline. One of white and one of black serve the purpose. If one prefers woven wear to linen chemises, then it is best to buy the kind with the Italian silk tops and the knitted lower parts. They are cool and well, and the silk looks much better under a thin gown than does the ordinary stuff of which underskirts and combinations are made.

One wishes to take plenty of corset covers, no matter what they are made of, so one will not be dependent on laundry, and a good suggestion to follow out is to have a kimono corset cover with two-inch sleeves and a high waistband made of rather thick all-over lace. This can be laundered over night and does not need starch as muslin does.

THE SHOES ONE NEEDS.

It is not wise to economize on shoes when one travels, which is a serious handicap because leather is heavy, and you cannot find any comfort in European shoes even when made on American lasts. So take enough if you would not be footsore as well as weary. Do not regard this warning lightly. Many have done so and suffered.

White shoes are good for the steamer and can be worn with the white evening gown on land as well; a comfortable stout pair of boots is needed for bad weather on the steamer and on land; a pair of black evening slippers is necessary and one should always have a pair of oxford ties unless one wears pumps with entire ease. The majority of women find that the latter kind of shoe produces weariness by reason of its slipping off the heel.

Have enough shoes to change at any hour of the day. Two pairs are not sufficient. Economize on something else in your baggage, but make at least half a dozen linen squares to wrap half a dozen pairs of shoes in.

And by the way, make your squares in the color of the shoes, or if this is not necessary embroidery in cross-stitch the kind of boot or slipper that is wrapped up in the linen square, so you can pick up the exact pair that you want without unrolling the others.

The gown on the left is of elephant gray satin, with a skirt slightly draped in front, and the jacket blouse fastened down the front and belted with king's blue velvet. The elbow sleeves are corded into a lowered armhole and the neck finished with a turnover collar of white lace. The hat is of gray straw with a king's blue satin crown and a blue feather curling up from back of brim.

On the seated figure is a skirt of white moire poplin that is draped up in the back and not in the front. It is without trimming and has a high waistline. Over it is a fanciful Russian blouse of hunting pink satin with a slight belt of white satin. The shoulder drapery is of white Arabian lace lined with pink net and the sleeves are of pink satin. The odd little bonnet is entirely of white satin with a crown band of pink taffeta, and a huge butterfly bow of it at the back.

The third suit is of tan-colored moire poplin made with a cutaway jacket and a white skirt fastened in front. The lower part of the skirt and the two bands above it, as well as the revers on the coat, are of bright-colored Scotch plaid taffeta. There is a sash of plain tan ribbon that shows on the left side of figure. The chemisette is one of the new kind made of tucked white chiffon over spring coats that are not to be removed.

The fourth figure shows a coat suit of navy blue satin serge, which is the softest serge made. The lower skirt is knife pleated and the long tunic is draped up at the hem and pleated in the middle of back. The jacket has the new short-waisted front, which is difficult to wear, but which is in keeping with the very new silhouette. The revers and the lining to sleeves are of Moman ribbon and the chemisette has a high fluted collar of white wash tulle attached. The hat is of black straw with wide open crimson roses wired to an upright stalk.

WEEK-END WARDROBE IN A SUIT CASE

THE small week-end trunks are such marvels of convenience and smartness that the woman who must make a week-end visit in a suit case feels herself a victim of misfortune. But let a cheer be given with the thought that this year, when diaphanous materials and scant styles and absence of petticoats rule the day, she can carry more clothes in a suit case than ever before.

The woman who wants to get as much as possible in her case and who has also the heaviest and most bulky clothes for instance, suppose she wants a coat suit and a ball dress, suppose she should wear them; or suppose she feels that she must have her new afternoon crepe, the kind that is modelled on the cut of army capes and boasts a lining of gay plaid silks, she should manage to wear that over a thin wool, silk or cotton one-piece frock. Under no circumstances should wear the heaviest shoes and the bulkiest clothes which she wants to have with her and so leave more room in her suit case.

Present day underwear does not take up much room. The necessary changes can be packed in a very thin layer in the bottom of the case. A thin silk petticoat or one of crepe de chine or wash net spread the full length and breadth of the suit case takes up only a fraction of an inch. Stockings are never seriously inconvenient, for they can be tucked in corners or inside the shoes.

As to shoes, if walking shoes are worn a pair of house shoes and a pair of evening slippers are all that are needed. Shoes at best, even in this year of thin kid and French heels and pointed toes, do take up a lot of room, and the packer generally breathes a sigh of relief when they are safely disposed of.

Nightgown and negligee, of the slimmest sort, take up another bit of necessary room, but when begrudging them their space think how much worse it would be were the gown made with long sleeves and high neck, frilled and puffed and ruffled in heavy muslin, and the negligee made over a lining of cashmere or starched lawn?! Such things were once a necessary part of every suit case wardrobe.

THE GOWNS.

A few layers of tissue paper will be found convenient in packing the suit case. They are as effective in keeping frocks free from dust as muslin cases, and certainly take up less room.

Spread one layer over the underwear and nightwear, and wrap each shoe separately. Then put in the evening dress chosen. Stuff the sleeves with paper if it is necessary to keep them without wrinkles, and put a heavy roll of paper under the crease in the skirt where you fold it. Lay the dress in flatly and neatly and cover it with another sheet of paper.

If you wear a suit a couple of shirtwaists or fancy blouses must be carried to go with it, and these, like the evening gown, can be done up in tissue paper and stuffed with it. An afternoon frock of voile or silk will take up more room perhaps than any other frock, but you can find plenty of space for it as well as for a morning frock of some cotton or linen material, perhaps crash or sponge. After all these things are in there will still be room for toilet articles, handkerchiefs, a case of folding clothes hangers and the possible little gift you are taking to a child in the house. And even then the suit case won't need sitting on to make it close. It is really wonderful the number of flimsy, thin clothes that can be neatly stowed inside a capacious suit case.

There is one big consolation in the present fashions when it comes to packing; there are not half so many accessories of a detached sort as there used to be. Belts, for the most part, are attached to skirts or frocks; collars, too, with the exception of chemisettes and jabots, are complete and attached to waists, and an evening gown nowadays isn't an evening gown unless it is all in one piece.

NEW WAISTS OF OLD PATTERNS

Most of the stamped patterns for embroidered waists pre-suppose a back closing, and most of the waists this year are made with a front closing. The problem which confronts the woman who buys two or three stamped shirtwaist patterns for pickup embroidery in the warm weather is how to make a front closing right through the center of the embroidered design.

Sometimes the pattern will be so open and loose that it will not be difficult to cut the waist from top to bottom either in the center front or else on the left side for a closing there. Many of the prettiest of the new waists have side closings, which run either straight up and down or diagonally from shoulder to waist.

An applied hem of the material of the waist can be put on for the buttonholes and a facing or underlap can be made for the buttons. The hem can be in the form of a narrow, stitched box pleat.

An applied hem can also be made of contrasting material. If the waist is stamped and embroidered on white voile, plaided, striped or figured voile can be used for the hem and for turnovers on collar and cuffs, if long sleeves and high collar are used, or frills about the flat, turnback collar and at the ends of the sleeves.

Ruffling suggests itself as a form of covering for the meeting place of the embroidery when the pattern cannot be neatly cut and must simply be slashed regardless of matching leaves and flowers and stems or circles, squares and twirls. Fastened under a narrow box pleat opening and turning away from it ruffling of any width can be used. If it is used on the front of the waist, it forms also a good finish for the sleeves.

There is some difficulty in making long sleeves which look really well. Those made by the best dressmakers are often somewhat baggy over the top, due to the hand sewing need not try to make hers wrinklcless. They can end in frills or end in a little shirred ruffle which is cut with the sleeve and shirred in at the wrist with a narrow smocking stitch. If the sleeve is plain and comes down to the hand it can be ended off with picot edge of Irish lace sewed on by hand. This costs only 15 cents a yard in the correct width and half a yard will exactly do two sleeves. If it is used on the sleeves it can be used to edge the collar.

Most of the new waists are made with a suggestion of color about them. This color can be introduced with small glass or china buttons used as trimming as well as for the closing. They can be applied to the ruffle in a row from top to bottom and at the corners of the flat collar.

Since the new waists are supposed to be worn blousing slightly over the belt it is well not to belt them permanently, for no one knows how much an edict will go forth saying that they must be worn smooth and taut about the waist, perhaps even before the embroidery is finished. Very satisfactory rubber belts can be bought for from 10 to 25 cents which after they are once fastened about the waist seldom slip from their place and so hold the fulness wherever it is arranged.

Stenographer Prettiest Girl in California

Miss Emma Devalasco, stenographer for a large lumber firm of San Francisco, is officially pronounced the prettiest girl in California—as officially as can be done by the Portola festival committee. And the Portola festival is an important institution in the state.

The prettiest girl in California which ever since the placer mining days has been noted for its beautiful Women means something. Hundreds of photographs of pretty girls from every section of the state were submitted to the committee, and she won. She will not only receive the $100 prize, but will be the poster girl of the festival, which is to take place October 22-25. It will celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific ocean by Balboa.

Miss Devalasco is twenty-five years old. She was born in Los Angeles of a family of Spanish extraction, as her name indicates, and in 1905 she moved to San Francisco, where she was educated at the Santa Monica High school.

She is not only pretty, but a musician of some ability, and has sung at many private concerts.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

It Keeps the Hair Light and Fluffy

WHAT A LEMON WILL DO FOR YOU

THE next time any one hands you a lemon, do not feel offended, but join the laugh on your aggressor and bring the lemon gracious-ly along to improve or add beauty to your charms.

If you are a blonde you will find the lemon useful when shampooing your ones around. After you have rinsed your hair with soap and water, squeeze strained lemon juice into the second rinse water. If it is necessary to rinse the hair with after this. The lemon will keep it light and make it fluffy. Let me say right here that whenever any shampooed the work should be carefully completed until the hair and scalp are dry. Too many girls grow tired and let the water get out of the hair as soon as it may produce rheumatism of the head and shoulders. If you do not the strength to give the shampoo yourself, ask your sister or some kind friend to help you out, and offer to return the favor.

Brushing the hair will keep it fluffy, and will add a sheen which is always admired. One should not fail to brush the hair at least once a day, and twice a day is much better. The brushing will also remove the dust, which cannot help but collect on the hair during the day, and it furnishes valuable stimulation to the scalp.

For removing stains from the skin and for bleaching it there is nothing to equal a lemon. The lemon can be rubbed over the skin or the juice may be extracted from it, strained and then applied to the skin. If the skin has any abrasions the juice must not be used. In such a case buttermilk may be substituted.

The manicure will find a lemon useful in her work. A little juice should be added to the bowl in which the finger tips are held. In this way the skin around and beneath the nails will be well cleaned.

Persons troubled with indigestion may find relief by drinking every morning a glass of hot water to which the juice of a lemon has been added. This should be taken half an hour before breakfast is eaten. A half hour before the other two meals of the day the hot water, without the lemon juice, should be drunk. This will wash the stomach and prepare it for the food which it is to receive.

In cases of nausea, lemon juice in a glass of cold water will prove a cure. There are some persons, however, to whom the sight or smell of a lemon is sickening, so that this cure would not do for them. They should use the old-time aromatic spirits of ammonia.

It is advisable to carry a lemon when strolling through the woods, for one can never tell when one will be stung by a bee. For this the juice of a lemon is recommended, for it is a splendid thing to mitigate the pain which a sting causes.

Every one should know what to do for stings, for, if neglected, they are liable to become most painful. Honey water will often calm the irritation. Put one teaspoonful of honey in a quart of boiling water. This should be used while warm.

Flour applied to the skin will dispel the redness and remove the itching, burning sensation. Another good and easy remedy is to cover the sting with a little moist soap, allowing the lather to dry on the skin.

A solution of menthol in small quantities, in alcohol, is excellent as a lotion, and is good in case of stings of wasps, bees, mosquitoes or nettles.

Chloroform is prescribed for mosquito bites, but one should use this with discretion, and the bottle containing it should be distinctly marked. It reduces the swelling and relieves the itching and pain.

It is well to know the various cures, for sometimes one is more available than another.

The fruit under discussion is splendid for callous feet. Slices of it should be rubbed over the hardened skin after the foot has been bathed and dried. To prevent having callous feet, one should select properly fitting shoes and buy those of good leather. It is necessary to keep several pairs of shoes on hand, so that the same pair need not be worn two days in succession. Such a habit will keep the feet from growing tired.

There! You see how helpful the homely lemon can be.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams most cordially invites her friends to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time.

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

A CHURCH CEREMONY

I AM going to give just a few of the important points of the church wedding ceremony. You may vary the idea according to your liking.

The bride decides on the music to be played at her wedding, and discusses it with the organist. The florist is also consulted, and arrangements made for the awning and carpet, and a man in livery to open the door of each carriage, give checks and call for the vehicles after the ceremony.

The white ribbon is almost a tradition in a church wedding. It is used to mark off a space for the relatives and very dear friends of the bride and groom. The first four, six or eight pews are reserved for this purpose.

A white ribbon is stretched across the central aisle. This barrier is let down when the wedding procession comes.

The bride, with her father or relative who will give her away, and the bridesmaids assemble in the entrance and the organist plays the wedding march as soon as the doors are open at the rear of the church.

This procession is arranged and practiced beforehand. The bridesmaids and ushers precede the bride, of course. At the top of the aisle the groom and best man meet the wedding party.

The father steps aside at the foot of the chancel, where he places the bride's hand in the groom's. She is led before the clergyman, her father standing at one side behind the maid of honor, who should be near her, to take her bouquet or to lift her veil. When the question, "Who giveth this woman to this man?" is asked, the father steps up, places the daughter's hand in that of the groom, and says, "I do." He then should leave the party and join his wife.

After the final blessing, the bride takes her bouquet and gloves, which the maid of honor has held, and placing her left hand on the arm of her husband, she walks slowly with him down the aisle. The ushers and bridesmaids follow the maid of honor and the best man.

The carriages for the wedding party should be waiting; they should be allowed to depart before others are called. The family of the bride should be allowed to go before other guests. Music should be played until the last guest has gone.

The sweet dignity of a bride should be preserved. She does not acknowledge any one on her walk to the altar. On the arm of her husband, she is privileged to bow or smile to her friends whom she recognizes among the onlookers close at hand.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

A Home Wedding

DEAR Mrs. Adams:

Will you kindly give me full details through your column as to carrying out a home wedding? The bride is to be given away by her father and attended by a matron of honor and a bridesmaid. The groom will be attended by a best man. E. D.

In preparation for the home wedding the lower floor or living rooms of the house are garnished with flowers and a floral arch or a temporary altar is erected in that room where the ceremony is to take place. The bride's mother, assisted by her husband or some of her sons or daughters, receives the guests. When the bride is ready to proceed to the altar, a message to that effect is conveyed to the groom, his attendant and the clergyman, and they then go at once to the drawing room and stand waiting for the bride. At the head of the stairs the bride is met by her father, who gives her his arm, and, with the maids preceding them, they descend and enter the marriage room. At this point some brides arrange to have white satin ribbons drawn through the crowd of guests by her younger brothers or sisters or by little pages so as to form a lane reaching from the door to the place where the minister, groom and best man stand awaiting her. This is in order to form an aisle for the bridal procession. When the ceremony is over the ribbons are rolled up. The clergyman congratulates the couple and slips from his place. The bride and groom and their attendants face the company and the reception proceeds.

Dinner Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams,

I am going to entertain six friends at dinner. Is it necessary to send out engraved invitations? I do not care to go to that expense. A READER.

When inviting just a few friends it is better to write brief friendly notes. When a married couple is invited the note should be addressed to the wife.

The Groom and the Best Man

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Does the best man dress like the groom when the wedding takes place in the afternoon? E. D.

The best man should dress as nearly as possible like the groom he attends.

Received No Thanks

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Here is a question I have been anxious to ask you for some time. I called a woman's attention to the fact that she was losing a pin. She glared at me, securely fastened the pin and never offered me a word of thanks. Was it wrong of me to do this? R. Y.

You were quite right in doing what I should consider your duty, and even though the woman seemingly resented the courtesy you have the satisfaction of knowing that you did the right thing. Possibly the next time you will receive a sweet smile of approval for your trouble.

Leaving Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it necessary for a man to leave cards when calling on a woman's day at home? E. K.

A man need not leave his cards when calling on his hostess on days unless he is calling after some entertainment offered by his hostess or unless it is his first call on her for the season.

A Man's Duty

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Should a man try to talk to all the women sitting at a table during a formal dinner party? STELLA A. ALFRED.

A man should address himself to each of the persons beside him, whether or not he knows them, but his chief attention should be given to the lady seated to the table. At formal dinners, talking across the table, or at a distance from your seat, is not good form.

Rising

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it proper for a girl or boy to rise when a woman comes into the room? ANNA.

There seems to be a great failure upon the part of young girls of today along this line. The custom of rising when one's elders enter the room dates far back, and it is a conventional rule which deserves support.

This rule applies as much, if not more, to the boys as to the girls. A man should always rise when a woman, younger or older than himself, enters the room. It is a respect which every woman deserves.

In the Bridal Procession

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Does the bride lead the procession down the aisle when entering the church? Do the ushers lead one by one? D. D.

The bride, leaning on the arm of her nearest male relative, is at the last of the procession.

The ushers usually walk in twos to the altar.

Raising His Hat

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Should a man raise his hat when meeting and bowing a woman on the street? S. P.

What is the proper time to hand a luncheon? S. P.

Yes!

Any hour from 12 until 2 o'clock. A ceremonious luncheon is held at 1, 130 or 2 o'clock.

The Middle Age

Dear Mrs. Adams,

What is considered the middle age of man? J. C. F.

The middle age is marked from the thirty-fifth to the fiftieth, or fifty-fifth year.

When Introduced

Dear Mrs. Adams,

1. Will you please advise me what to say when a person is introduced to me?

2. Should I thank a man after he has taken me for a drive?

3. If a man asked me to visit his folks, should I go or not?

1. When any one is introduced to you, you should smile sweetly, bow the head and say, "How do you do, Miss Smith?" If you have heard of the person before, you may make a remark to that effect.

2. Yes.

3. There are certain conditions to be considered before yes or no may be said to this question. If you are well acquainted with the young man's family, you should not hesitate about going, but if they are strangers you should be sure that his mother or sister has expressed a desire to have your call, and through him has sent the invitation.

Dinner Napkins

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it correct to have dinner napkins embroidered? What size should they be? Mrs. G.

It is quite correct to embroider dinner napkins. The standard size of napkins for dinner use is about twenty-five inches square.

Invitations to a Recital

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Will you kindly tell me whether it is proper to send invitations to a recital in single or double envelopes? GRACE.

Such invitations are inclosed in single envelopes.

Card in Envelope

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When inclosing a card with a gift, is it necessary to put the card in an envelope? WINIFRED.

It is better form to do so.

The Bride's Shower

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Should a shower for a bride be a formal or an informal affair. May the hostess invite some of her friends, even though they do not know the bride? A. B. C.

A much better time will the guests have if the shower is an informal affair. Only the intimate friends of the bride should be invited to the shower.

Calling on the Bride

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When a bride has recently moved into a village should the neighbors call on her before she calls on them? IN DOUBT.

It is always customary for the bride to wait until the neighbors have called on her.

Wedding Invitations

How should one reply to a wedding invitation? FLORENCE.

If an answer be requested, you should send one written in the third person; but, otherwise, the invitation requires no reply.

When Introducing

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When introducing a man and a woman, whose name should be mentioned first? STELLA.

The woman's name should be the first mentioned. It is sufficient to say, "Miss White, may I present Mr. Jack?"

Going In to Dinner

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When entertaining men and women at dinner, who should lead the way into the dining room? ETHEL C.

If the hostess is married her husband should lead the way, with the woman guest of honor. If the hostess is single she may have her brother or nearest male relative take this part.

Inviting a Man to Call

Dear Mrs. Adams,

There is a young man who has been to several parties that I have attended. I thing I should find him an agreeable friend and therefore write to ask if it would be proper for me to invite him to call on me some time? A. M. G.

You may with propriety invite the young man to call. If he does not show any inclination to accept your invitation, do not extend a similar one again.

"At Home" Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Please tell me if I should enclose separate "At Home" cards with my wedding announcements or can they be written upon engraved on the announcement card.

PEGGY.

If you expect to be "At Home" on one or two special days, and give the dates, it would be better to use separate cards, but in order to merely inform your friends that you will be ready to receive them on and after such a date, you may have "At Home" and the date engraved on the lefthand lower corner of an announcement.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Lemons and Salt

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please inform me whether or not the eating of lemons with salt on them is a benefit to the complexion? A CONSTANT READER.

I am afraid the treatment would ruin the lining of the stomach. If you are anxious to get thin you should follow a diet list. Avoid all starchy and sweetened food, all cereals, vegetables containing sugar or starch, as peas, beans, corn, potatoes, etc. Have lean meat, broiled, stewed or roasted, and instead of using table salt, use Kitchen-ine, it is pure and good, as it contains no chemicals. Drink hot water in an excellent substitute for coffee or tea. Add a little of the juice of lemon or lemonade to the water. Shorten your sleeping hours to seven at the outside. No naps. You must take exercise.

If you cannot walk at least five miles a day, go to one of the institutions where mechanical massage is given. Several days spent there will prove a most excellent results from this method of exercise. The exercise they receive from the system is thoroughly wholesome, but not excessive in reducing flesh, the fact is that fat is taken up and destroys or burns out by the oxygen you take through your lungs. Of course the more exercise and consequent destruction of fat, the more healthful method of curing it.

Cut out starch and sugar you eat or drink, and learn to burn away fat.

For Superfluous Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please tell me the quantity of alum and water to use on superfluous hair? MARY.

Any drug used on the face increases the growth of superfluous hairs.

To one part ammonia add six parts water. The constant application of this will bleach the hairs and in time destroy the roots.

Shaving the face will not increase the growth of hair, but it must be patted on the skin, so to speak. Any rubbing may increase the growth.

To Remove Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Please tell me what will remove freckles and how to keep my hands and face from chapping. My fingers are also rough and chapped. Will lemon juice remove freckles and whiten the skin? This should be applied after the skin has been cleansed and the water and rinsed thoroughly with cold water.

You cannot increase the length of the bones of the fingers, but you can give them a tapering effect by massaging them from the base to the tips.

Trouble With the Ears

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please tell me what is good for my ears? They get red, very warm and swell and peel sometimes. I have gone to every doctor in this city, but have received no help. MARY.

Your trouble is too serious for me to treat. There are many things that might be the trouble with your ears, but instead of doctoring it in a haphazard way you should go to some reliable physician in a nearby city.

A Massage Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please let me have the recipe for a massage cream which I may use, to develop the bust? AGNES.

Following is the recipe for a very splendid cream:

Lanolin	6 ounces
Spermaceti	½ ounce
Mutton tallow (freshly tried)	4 ounces
Oil of sweet almonds	4 ounces
Tincture of benoin	4 drams
Oil of neroli	20 drops

Cure for Sties

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly tell me what causes sties and what will cure them? A CONSTANT READER.

Sties appearing in succession indicate that the health is run down. For temporary relief hot fomentations of boric acid solution will suffice, but a physician should be consulted in order to build up the system and get rid of the sties permanently.

A Dangerous Article

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please advise me in what quantity to use arsenic for the complexion? I have a large supply of both and it is a source of great annoyance to both me and the girl in the flat. LULA.

Arsenic should never be taken unless prescribed by your physician. If your face is unbecomingly red you may be able to make it less so by carefully selecting your foods. Avoid highly seasoned and rich foods and do not partake of any alcoholic liquors.

An Astringent Lotion

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly give me the recipe for an astringent lotion? MARIE.

A beneficial astringent lotion is made of the following ingredients:

Alum	70 grains
Almond milk (thick)	1½ ounces
Rosewater	2 ounces

Dissolve the alum in the rosewater, then pour gently into the almond milk, with constant stirring. Apply with a soft linen cloth every night before retiring.

Lines at the Mouth

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Can you tell me what to do to remove the lines from the side of my mouth, as per inclosed illustration? They are not very deep, but deep enough to be noticeable, especially after laughing. I am only 22 years old and do not think I should have lines at this age. What do you think causes them?

I would rather not use a massage, unless you recommend it. A CONSTANT READER.

One way to erase the lines is to take a deep breath and fill out the cheeks until they resemble a toy balloon. While the cheeks are thus inflated apply a liberal amount of cold cream to the lines and rub them up and out toward the ears.

The Finger End

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I have a piece of flesh torn from one of my fingers, leaving it thin and scarred. It is near the end of the finger and quite noticeable. Can you tell me what will restore the normal shape of the finger?

Please publish a recipe for a wart cure. GRATEFUL.

You can do much to improve the shape of your finger by massaging it daily with olive oil. This will feed the tissues and build up the broken-down part to a very great extent, although it is hardly likely that the normal shape will be resumed. However, do not let this fact discourage you, but do your best to make the finger look as well as possible.

Sublimated sulphur	120 grains
Glycerin	2 fluid drams
Acetic acid	1 fluid dram

Apply repeatedly to each wart, continuing the treatment for several days. The warts dry up and then drop off.

Tonic for Falling Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes,

My hair has been falling out at an alarming rate? Will you please give me the recipe for a tonic which I may use? EDITH.

Here is the recipe for a splendid lotion:

Phenol	½ dram
Tincture of myrrh	30 grains
Tincture of cantharides	½ dram
Tincture cinchona	1 ounce
Eau de Cologne	4 ounces
Sweet almond oil	4 ounces

Apply to the roots of the hair with a soft sponge once or twice a day.

You cannot expect the tonic to do all the work. Massage the scalp and brush the hair thoroughly every day. This is necessary to stimulate the circulation of the blood through the scalp.

If your general health is not up to the mark you should try to correct any trouble. The hair is affected by the condition of the health.

To Remove Blackheads

Dear Mrs. Symes,

1. I have blackheads, and when I squeeze them out the pores remain open. Will you please tell me what is the proper way to treat the blackheads?

2. What shall I do for oily hair?

3. How can I thicken my eyebrows? ANNA R.

1. A very satisfactory way to treat blackheads is to apply cloths wrung from hot water to the skin, renewing them constantly as they cool. Then scrub the face to release all possible dirt. After wiping the face perfectly dry, massage with the cream for which I am giving the recipe:

Rosewater	4 ounces
Almond oil	4 ounces
Spermaceti	1 ounce
White wax	1 ounce

Add the rosewater slowly, so that it will emulsify.

A few such treatments on successive nights before retiring ought to soften the blackheads, so that they will yield to gentle pressure. Never attack them with the finger nails. Use only the ball of the thumbs in pinching the skin around the blackheads. The treatment will cause a temporary redness, so, for this reason it is best to give it when one does not expect to appear in public immediately after. After the blackheads have been removed, the face should be bathed with water to which witch hazel has been added—a tablespoonful to the finger bowl of a quart of the former is the correct proportion to use. This solution will contract the pores.

2. Following is the recipe for a lotion which you can use on the oily hair:

Alcohol	2 ounces
Witch hazel	4 grains
Benzoin	½ ounce

Use daily, rubbing well into the scalp.

3. To thicken your eyebrows, apply melted vaseline to them daily.

Brittle Nails

Dear Mrs. Symes:

My finger nails are inclined to break off. Will you please tell me what I may do to stop this? WINIFRED.

Evidently your nails are very brittle. To correct this condition you should hold them five or ten minutes daily in a vessel containing warm olive oil. Before retiring, cover the cuticle surrounding the nails with cold cream. To prevent the bedclothes from being greased it is well to wear loose gloves when the cream is on the fingers.

Around the Nails

Dear Mrs. Symes:

After I have pushed back the cuticle from my nails through skin remains, which I have been unable to remove. Can you tell me what to do for it? Also let me know what makes the nails so white.

YOUNG ONE.

You can improve the condition of your cuticle by applying vaseline or cold cream to the base of the nails every day. This treatment will make the skin soft so that it may be easily pushed back.

For Commencement Day

Frock of embroidered voile. The skirt ruffle is threaded with velvet ribbon.

CUSTOM still decrees that the girl graduate wear white, but it is not needful that she wear expensive materials. In fact, simplicity is considered in better taste, as so many girls a little less fortunate than the others have been subjected to much mortification at being obliged to wear cotton gowns, while their classmates donned frocks of silk and satin. The broad generous spirit that prevails in the woman's college of today has overcome the difficulty by decreeing the adoption of simple materials and requiring them to be developed in a simple manner.

Suppleness will be an essential quality of the washing frock of the coming summer. The new piques are soft in texture as silk, and the crepons are a synonym for limpness.

Nothing makes a blouse look more clinging and easy than drooping shoulder seams, and since it happens that the short sleeve is to be a fascination once more many of the models, though they have a piping about three inches below the crown of the shoulders, have the Japanese effect strongly marked.

Yet another item that emphasizes the case of the new blouses is the low cut neck, which looks and feels cool and can be embellished with any number of different collars.

Many girls will wear a touch of the bright hued Bulgarian colors. Others will add to their store collars made of needle run net or delicately embroidered linen, while those who like plenty of change can place chiffon on their list of materials, and cut for themselves collars of any shape, rounded, square, vandyked, and scalloped.

It is a pretty caprice to leave the edges of the chiffon collar raw, though hemstitching is again fashionable and will be noticed in connection with the collars of the summer season.

Let no one who is picturesque and youthful forget the charm of the lace tucker plaited, rather closely at the back, and it may be slightly plaited in front with only a trifling fullness.

Such tuckers may be matched at the wrists by ruffles made of net mousseline de soie or chiffon, and white blouses with crystal or pearl buttons have neck and sleeve ruffles which make a very pretty finish.

Out of an old and forgotten chest the other day was taken by a descendant of its owner a sharply vandyked ruffle of unpatterned clear muslin, the ancestor of the device used now for framing a pretty neck and clasping dainty wrists.

The Directoire influence which is observed widely is responsible for the new coats and collars, giving to those items the dandified aspect that is their chief charm. The coats are fashioned with belts or sashes, but instead of wearing them over the coat they are in numerous instances seen beneath and as a rule silk is used.

There is an excellent intention in this change which provides beauty for the dress when the coat is removed, a precaution that warm weather will make necessary.

The dark blue and dark red poplin coats worn with cotton frocks will serve a very good purpose and can be relegated to the companionship of various dresses.

Hats to match the coats are a clever resource, and the sailor shape commends itself to brilliant weather wear, with a narrow silken crown band and an inconspicuous bow at the back.

Coat tails of the jauntiest aspect are given to the new little jackets, some turned back and buttoned in their place and others short and plaited.

A dressmaker of renown probably prophesied wisely when she declared the other day that white set off by one striking dash of color would be the accepted vogue of the summer.

"Not too much color," she said, qualifying her pronouncement. "I shall use lapels of linden green eponge upon a white cloth suit or a gamboge belt will serve my purpose in another case.

"Then, here is another caprice. Buttons of Bulgarian embroidery are the sole hints of brightness upon a blanche crêpon robe. I like the idea and expect it will please others also.

"I can do much," she continued "with different shades of white on white. It is a small variation in tints, but isn't it pretty, this use of Roman pearl buttons hanging from long silk covered shanks upon a silver white blouse? You see, the pearls are of a deep and lustrous shade, almost a yellow tint, and the crêpe fabric of the blouse is as pure as moonlight.

"These buttons are one of the newest fancies and take a high rank among the amber lapis lazuli, the sugar stick, and spotted china kinds.

Looking far ahead at the frocks leafy June will make possible, there is a promise of lingerie and lace in charming alliance. Girls are always suitably clad in hot weather in the finest nainsook embroidered by hand with plumetis stitchery and broderie Anglaise, but the babyish aspect of the dresses will be dignified by the addition of lace as elegant and fine as Malines, the two materials, deftly allied, making for perfect elegance.

The half and half bodice and the tunic merging into draperies offer themselves as candidates for the materialization of the two fabrics, with bright turquoise blue and coral sash posed upon the knee line and partly veiled by lace.

The graduate is to be a lissome nymph, willowy and absolutely natural looking. Rich materials await her, for surely there never were more lovely silks, crêpes, and gauzes.

It is not always easy for the girl who is just leaving school to find exactly the right style of dress to suit her. The grown-up fashions are still too old, while she has already passed the age catered for under the title "Misses."

Many girls are inclined to think that the turning-up of their hair and the letting down of their skirts set them free to copy the "model gown" of the shop windows, which is a fatal mistake. At seventeen the figure is not developed enough to stand the lines of the ultra smart, and would they but realize it, a younger, simpler style is far and away more charming.

The sash, which has been demanding an unusual amount of attention lately, is not even yet at the zenith of its influence over matters concerned with dress.

It is a pretty conceit for a girl to wear a coat that does not match the skirt either in material or color, for it has the air of novelty which is very dear to the heart of the graduate.

The new caprice in the case of the patterned crêpes is that the design is of the same color as the background, only of a regular, brighter weaving, a fact that adds to its allurements. Tassels are used not only as the finishing touch of a sash or instead of a flower to punctuate a drapery, but to outline the sleeves and waist line of a corsage made entirely of latticed pearls.

Nothing could be more effective for a graduate's dance wear than a soft crêpe, mounted upon white chiffon and hemmed with little white chenille tassels mingled with pearls. Quite a girl's frock and yet not altogether like the frocks of other girls.

The bayadere drapery, originally the chosen sash for the waist and hips of the dancer and traceable in the native costume of various countries, is among us again. How we should have scorned it a year or so ago, when there were no folds in our catalogue of dress adjuncts.

Then there is a studiously simple home made looking sash, tied at the back, where it falls down from the waist in a flopping bow, a new contribution to those fashions made purposely with an amateur look, to the hats, for example, that seem to have been concocted by the immature fingers of a child. I have seen it given to a frock with a very schoolgirl air for the afternoon, the corsage of which comprised a bolero and soft blouse.

But it is as a part of the evening dress that the belt is called upon to play the most important part, seeing that it it practically the sole representative of the corsage. The strangest effects are gained by the employment of pure white chiffon or tulle to clothe the shoulders and upper arms in a most ethereal manner and a black or vividly colored belt drapery which has no relationship to the rest.

Two Emory Buildings Bear Many Traditions

Few and Phi Gamma Literary Society Halls on Emory Campus Stand as Silent Witnesses to Deeds of Valor, to Suffering, to Training of Great Minds and Even to Scenes of Love Making

Wounded Soldier From the Battle of Atlanta During the Civil War Were Nursed Beneath Their Roofs; Great Orators Began Their Careers There and Many Fair Maidens Were Wooed Within Their Shadows

Special Dispatch to The Journal.

Oxford, Ga., May 24.—Two simply designed white buildings have stood on the Emory college campus for more than three score years, and could silent witnesses speak, they would reveal the trials accompanying the nourishment of a new republic, the tribulations heroically endured through a four years' war, the training of youthful minds who have become some of our nation's greatest thinkers, and their subsequent return to their homes, while many died and were buried near these buildings in what is now known as the Emory College Confederate cemetery. This burial ground has been cared for by the ladies of Oxford, and each year the graves are covered with flowers and wreaths on Memorial day. These good women erected a monument in the center of the square to "our soldiers" and placed a neat coping around the plot.

A good many years ago a marble slab was placed at each grave, and the names of the dead who are known were carved with their companies, while seven graves bear the inscription of "unknown."

LIST OF DEAD.

Only twenty-five soldiers who are sleeping in this sacred plot are known, and they are:

R. G. Southwell, Co. K, 47th Georgia.
J. Cloud, 10th Georgia.
G. A. Smith, Co. R. 40th Georgia.
D. Augustus, Co. A. 39th Alabama.
J. E. Courtney, Co. G, 56th Alabama.
A. Black, Co. F, 46th Alabama.
H. Kendrick, Co. H, 31st Alabama.
A. H. Gilmer, Co. H, 39th Alabama.
Z. Dutton, Co. L, 28th Alabama.
G. F. Robeson, Co. A, 19th Alabama.
C. W. Watts, Co. F, 17th Tennessee.
G. W. Pencar, Co. A, Tennessee.
R. F. Morris, Co. K, 31st Tennessee cavalry.
T. E. Wilson, Co. A, 52d Tennessee.
R. B. Pyron, Co. B, 45th Mississippi.
D. F. Wells, Co. B, 5th Mississippi.
J. Hughes, Co. H, Arkansas.
J. A. Wood, Co. A, 4th Arkansas.
John Tinsley, Co. G, 16th South Carolina.
— Hurley, Co. L, North Carolina cavalry.
R. R. Hodge, 3d Texas.
F. M. Peters, Co. A, 6th Florida.
J. M. Hew—, Co. A. Louisiana.
W. A. Cox, punknown state.
S. F. Hardy, unknown state.

It is thought that a number of other Confederates were buried here, but time has blotted out all traces of the graves, and all the ground is revered as if all the graves were known and marked.

TRIBUTES ARE PAID.

Countless tributes have been paid to these Confederate dead in prose and verse by men who are close to Emory, but one of the noblest are the lines to Emory's Sentinels," by Dr. Wightman F. Melton, professor of English at Emory, which are as follows:

"Down where the pine trees nod their plumes
To the tune that the South Wind plays,
Deep in the earth sleeps the brave, gray dust—
The heroes of other days.

"Unknown' is the story the granite tells
To the idle passerby;
But it is not so to those who know
How these heroes came to die?
"They laid them down with a right good will,
Husband, and father, and son;
What matters a name, or earthly fame,
When the thing to be done is done?"

Along with the traditions and historical facts concerning the suffering during those days in 1864, are the memories of the times at Emory as the war cloud was gathering. A prosperous college, with a student body of young southern manhood, scented the approaching conflict, and they began to prepare for the struggle.

When the first call for volunteers came a number of students answered the call, while some remained in college not taking seriously the possible long war. The "Emory Guards" were formed from the students, and the late Dr. Gustavus J. Orr, professor of mathematics at Emory, and later state school commissioner of Georgia, was chosen as captain. Resolutely and earnestly, he drilled his young company which in a few short months became the volunteers from Georgia who rushed toward the north and became part of Lee's great army of Virginia. The ladies of Oxford presented the young company with a flag, the exercises taking place in front of Few hall. This flag has never been accounted for as the "Emory Guards" did not leave this state as a company.

About the same time the older citizens of Oxford formed the "Silver Grays," with Rev. J. R. Thomas, then president of Emory, as captain. A majority of these men never saw active service, as they formed the fading generation with this great conflict as a climax.

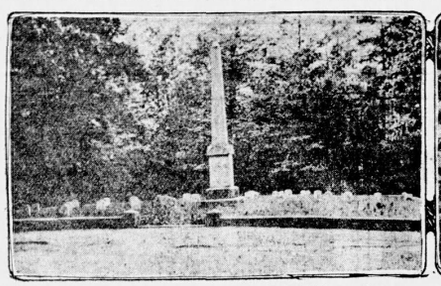
Emory was opened after the war in January, 1866, and very interesting documents are the minutes of the two literary societies at their first meeting after the war. Phi Gamma's first meeting was held on January 20, 1866, with only one member, E. V. Branham, present. He chose two other members, W. W. Evans and A. Gaithers, who formed the nucleus around which the society was rebuilt. An extract from the minutes of this meeting at Phi Gamma is: "The society met this morning at 9 o'clock, under circumstances of a peculiar nature. Four years have passed since the last meeting of this body, three of which have been spent in one of the bloodiest struggles on record. The south has been foiled in her attempt to establish a government of her own, and now amid the political ruins, the Phi Gamma society with only three members attempts to resume its former position."

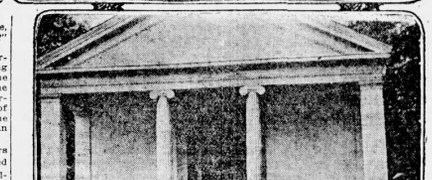
During the years which have bridged the space between then and today, both of Emory's literary societies have been found at work consistently training the students at Emory in the arts which form the public speaker and ready thinker.

Some of the great men who have been successful in their chosen vocations are alumni of these two societies. Among them are Few—Rev. Young J. Allen, Judge John S. Candler, Dr. Morgan Callaway, Jr., Dr. H. Stiles Bradley, Colonel Thomas Norwood, Colonel I. S. Hopkins, Dr. J. E. Dickey, Phi Gamma—United States Senator L. Q. C. Lamar, Bishop Atticus G. Haygood, Bishop J. S. Key, Bishop Warren A. Candler, Colonel John W. Aiken, Congressman Gordon Lee, Dr. C. E. Dowman, Dr. J. F. Bonnell and Prof. M. M. Parks.

Entwined among some of the sweetest traditions are the love affairs which are said to have been enacted around the halls of these two societies. As they stand majestically as silent guards they have been the refuge of many lovers, who have sought their confidence and the healing hearts became as one. Tradition tells that one of the happiest moments in the life of a prominent Georgia woman was when she became engaged to an Emory student sitting on the steps of Phi Gamma hall.

As long as these two halls stand and their memory lives, there will be sacred traditions and proud historical facts linked among the vicissitudes of Emory college.





At the reader's left is a part of the Confederate cemetery. On the right is Few hall. At the bottom is a picture of Phi Gama hall.

THE OTHER

A NOTABLE SHORT STORY BY A FAMOUS WRITER

PLEASE be seated, madame, my mistress will be down directly," said Miss Fletcher's English maid, and having seen the visitor comfortably seated in one of the comfortable chairs the little drawing room abounded, she raised a shade slightly and noiselessly disappeared.

Mrs. Dick Witherby, left alone, looked about her with eager, girlish curiosity.

"What a pretty room!" she commented, to nobody in particular, "and how like an actress, though. No photographs!"

Rising she moved a step or two to examine a small picture hanging on the wall.

"Oh, it's only some old saint!" she murmured in a disappointed tone; and was about to explore further when the sound of silk whispering on the polished stairs sent her flying back to her seat, just in time to give from an expectant pose as Miss Fletcher entered, balanced smiling, with outstretched hand.

She was a tall woman, overtopping her visitor by a head, good looking rather than fine as well as the rich, mellow tones which made her greeting almost caressing, seemed to add to her air of gentle authority.

"I am very happy to see you, Mrs. Witherby," she said.

"You might say at last," murmured that lady, deprecatingly. "I wouldn't blame you. I meant to have called on you the very first of the season, but I don't know how it is there's always so much to do, what with housekeeping—every one knows what that is in the country, where servants simply laugh you to scorn—and the Clio club—we've taken up Russia this year and the names alone are enough to drive you distracted. And now there's the Babies' hospital; we've got to raise $1,000 this month if we don't want to lose another thousand that's been offered to us—you know that horrid Carnegie-Rockefeller way—and we're about at our wit's end. We've had lawn parties until every one is sick of them—that Dick says we'll never need another 'Keep off the grass' sign in Rivergrove as long as the town exists. And—and we thought, perhaps—"

"You thought perhaps I might help you out?" broke in Miss Fletcher, filling the breathless pause and smiling genially.

"It would be perfectly lovely of you," declared Mrs. Witherby, in a soft flutter, clasping her hands on her tightly crossed knees. "You see, we've never had any one living here before who was really distinguished. There have been actors and actresses, who, it appeared, were very well known in Australia and Colorado, but never in Chicago and places like that; but no one seemed to have heard of them in New York. But now—you!"

"New York has been very good to me," said Miss Fletcher, smiling still, "and if I can be good to the Babies, I shall be very glad. I suppose you want a benefit? Let me know your plans, and I will arrange to meet them."

"How sweet of you!" murmured Mrs. Witherby. "You don't know what a load you've taken off our minds," she went on. "I was saying yesterday I simply would not play bridge again for charity this summer—not if I never saw another card. And that's good of Botticelli than of any one and is without bridge in winter I'm sure I can't imagine. But I know I'm taking up your time, though you haven't told me once you're 'a very busy woman,' the way some horrid women do who haven't accomplished half what you have. But you must be busy, with every minute working up your new roles. So interesting—she murmured, lifting her candid eyes in a childlike burst of admiration.

"Oh, no," Miss Fletcher hastened to disclaim; "I'm not working now; I'm just enjoying the lovely country about Rivergrove, and, above all, revelling in my dear garden."

"You've got so many pretty things here, too," said Mrs. Witherby, rising and pausing to glance around the room as she adjusted her veil.

"Don't go yet," urged her hostess. "Won't you have a look at my pictures? I have some rather nice ones." As she spoke a frown contracted her level brows, and she swept the room with a rapid glance until her eyes rested on a bowl of lilies of the valley half hidden by an intervening screen. "How careless of Jane! Excuse me a moment," she murmured, and, lifting the bowl, she opened a window and placed it outside on the ledge. "I was sure I perceived the perfume; I can't endure it—just a foolish trick of mine," she explained, returning to her visitor, who had remained motionless, watching her with only half-veiled curiosity.

Miss Fletcher loved her books and pictures and it was evidently a pleasure to her to show them, but her voluble but new acquaintance had fallen suddenly silent and found little to say until she stopped in front of a small painting which her hostess had passed by.

"How many Botticellis you have!" she exclaimed. "That's a very good copy, isn't it? You must be very fond of him," she ventured.

"I am," said Miss Fletcher, "he means spring to me."

"I don't suppose I should recognize them all," the younger woman went on, "not knowing anything about art, really; only that my husband is fonder without bridge in winter I'm sure I of Botticelli than of any one and is always rummaging at sales for old prints or copies."

Miss Witherby has excellent taste, I know," said Miss Fletcher, politely.

"So people say," sighed his wife. "It seems to me that he is rather whimsical at times. My husband used to know you a little, I believe," she continued. "Long ago in Canada wasn't it? He mentioned it when I told him I was going to call and ask you to help us out."

"Yes, in Canada long ago." Miss Fletcher's deep, sweet voice echoed the words.

"How beautiful your voice is!" said the other woman, pausing and staring a moment. "You made that sound quite different. It seemed to mean all sorts of things."

The next moment she was exclaiming over the treasures the bookcase held.

"What beautiful bindings," she sighed, dropping to her knees to study them. "We have just a few—Dick will buy them, though he knows we can't afford them. Shelley, Swinburne, Keats, Keats. Keats! Why, you must have copies of all the editions that were ever printed!" she straightened herself and, still kneeling, stared at Miss Fletcher, who had moved away across the room and was absently picking the dead leaves from a flowering plant.

"I thought we had about all there were," she continued in a moment, "but you have so many more. What an exquisite cover!" she exclaimed, taking a volume from the shelf and opening it carefully.

"Let me show you this carving," Miss Fletcher's voice broke in abruptly—it was almost harsh, and she advanced brusquely—"such a beautiful carving; a friend brought me the other day from Japan; you must see it!"

But Mrs. Witherby seemed unaware of any interruption. Turning the leaves of the volume she held, she whispered:

"They are all marked—the ones he is always raving over and wanting to read aloud," as if unconsciously, she turned to the front of the volume, but suddenly she closed it resolutely, and rising, advanced upon Miss Fletcher who had stood waiting and watching her nervously. "I didn't look to see who gave it to you," she said, "I don't need to. I know now. You are the other woman. I always knew there was one."

"There always is one," said Miss Fletcher, facing her gravely.

"Yes," Mrs. Witherby conceded, "but for you he never would have had all those whims, those tastes—if you like that better. None of the rest—his brothers and sisters—have them. This room is full of his fads," she went on, sweeping it with unfriendly eyes. "Why, just now, when you took away those lilies with such a look of disgust, it came over me in a flash. He can't endure their perfume, either. The sweetest things! I wanted them for my wedding bouquet, but even than I had to give them up. I didn't know why. But I know now!" she added bitterly. "It was because you didn't like them!"

"Just possibly I didn't because—he didn't," suggested Miss Fletcher.

"No, no! Men don't have those fancies. He's queer because you made him so. And I have to be queer—as far as I can—because you were so. It's insulting!" And dropping upon a couch, Mrs. Witherby turned her head away and let her eyes gaze into vacancy.

"I saw him a week or two ago," the other woman began from her seat across the room. "No, I mean saw him," she repeated, as Mrs. Witherby started and looked up. "Please understand that I had no suspicion he was living here when I happened on this place. He was walking that day I saw him, and I passed him in a cab. He did not look very 'queer,' as you call it. I wondered if it could be he. I don't believe I hurt him very much. He has grown stout, and he looked comfortable and—pardon me, since we are speaking so very frankly—a little bored."

"He is comfortable," asserted the wife; "I hope I make him so. And if he is bored sometimes, why so are all men after they've been married and settled half a dozen years—if they are happy."

"He—says so?"

"He doesn't need to say so," answered Mrs. Witherby, the color rising in her cheeks. "I can see it for myself."

"Oh, yes, of course," conceded Miss Fletcher, and rising, she began to pace up and down, speaking in her low, sweet voice as if unconscious of the other woman's presence. "It was such a beautiful time!" she sighed. "A dream filled with visions of springtime. Every smallest atom in my whole body lived and exulted In Him—and what but he unreservedly approves of them, and so they remain in his wardrobe until such time as the chief valet will receive the intimation that they are no longer wanted. Uniforms, of which his majesty possesses more than 400, last but a short time, for a large percentage of them are seldom used, while others, perhaps, are worn only once in a season.

The whole of this large collection of clothes is kept on dummy figures in glass-fronted wardrobes fitted round the hall of the large rooms and is under the direct charge of the principal of the king's four valets, this functionary having a book containing a complete list in numerical order, corresponding numbers appearing over each suit.

Another room contains nothing but boots, these numbering dozens of pairs, and comprising military, naval, riding, walking and dress shoes, and being cataloged in the same way as the uniforms and suits.

Not a Paying Concern

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

The following note was recently received by a school teacher from a careful mother:

"Dear Miss School Teacher: My boy Fritz has been going to your school for —ten weeks already and not yet has he received any wages. Tell me please when you will pay him, for if you don't I put Fritzy into a business where more money in."

Dummies Wear King's Clothes

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

LONDON.—King Edward's tailor has just given a formal denial to the truth of a popular idea in London that the king of England only wears a new suit of clothes once and then has it destroyed. If his majesty likes a suit he will wear it at intervals through a season, although he never wears the same suit two days in succession.

Of shooting and sporting suits, his majesty at the present time has some in use that were bought two years ago; but he unreservedly approves of them, and so they remain in his wardrobe until such time as the chief valet will receive the intimation that they are no longer wanted. Uniforms, of which his majesty possesses more than 400, last but a short time, for a large percentage of them are seldom used, while others, perhaps, are worn only once in a season.

Western Life Wins Lillian Who Loves It

STATUESQUE "MOVIE" GIRL.

BY GERTRUDE M. PRICE.

The (Name Paper's) Moving Picture Expert.

Lillian Wiggins is the star of the western Pathe company at Edendale, Cal.

She is a new recruit from the legitimate stage, and life out west in the open is still very much of a wonderful novelty to her.

Since she went to California, a few months ago, she has learned to ride a horse, to sit on a soup box and eat a sandwich for her mid-day meal and to do all sorts of hair-breadth stunts just for the sake of the pictures.

Miss Wiggins is one of the statuesque type of beauties! No one would dream that she could do a good character part or look like a gypsy. But she can, all right!

Most of the pictures done by the western Pathe company are the wild and woolly sort. So Miss Wiggins soon found out that she would either have to forget herself and her tailor-made clothes (during work hours) or forego the pleasure of being a "movie" maid.

One trip around the Pathe ranch; one trial ride on the back of a western pony and one day's fresh, free ozone were sufficient to convince her that she could forget pretty clothes if she might have a chance to do some of the daring things she saw being done on the Pathe ranch in the "movies."

So here she is!

WHAT THE STAGE HAS MEANT TO ME

folk. Mr. Frohman, Mr. Belasco, Mr. Sothern, and Mr. Bellew are the great men they must be to be great producers and great actors. My engagement with Mrs. Fiske would have been delightful had it meant nothing else but association with her. All in all, the stage has meant to me friendships that are invaluable.

WOMEN AND THE STAGE.

"You hear a great deal said that makes you believe a woman who is a great actress must be artificial. I don't believe it. Some of the most devoted, some of the most wholesome and lovable mothers I know, are successful actresses.

"The difference in being upon the stage and being at home is that you work harder for your bread and have a more varied experience.

"If a sister of mine was talented and wished to follow the calling of the stage, I would by all means advise her to do so, and say God bless her. But I wouldn't advise a wind flower or the girl without talent to take to acting as a procession. It is true, absolutely, that a woman meets with no more temptation upon the stage than in business life.

"The work is hard, but the compensation is great. What the stage will mean to anyone who is fitted for it, and who chooses right, is the friendship of remarkable people, success, and a work that is unfolding and developing, probably more than any other work.

"But I have toiled over many of my roles. In 'The Governor's Lady' there was a scene where I struck the wrong note. It was my big scene, my chance to act, and I meant to make the most of it. I acted all over the stage.

"MARSE DAVID'S" WOE.

"I could see 'Marse David' sigh"—this is Miss Hanson's southern nickname for Belasco. "He would run his hands through his hair and twist in his chair. But he never said anything. His rule is to have the members of his companies think for themselves. That is how he gets such originality and such variety. He seldom suggests. He leaves the interpretation to the actors.

"I tried and tried, but I knew the scene didn't go right. I acted it at breakfast, dinner, and supper and in my sleep. At last one day, I came to the theater utterly fagged. I was too weak physically to 'act' my big scene. I just recited it, and I saw 'Marse' David sit up and smile pop out on his face, and I knew at last, by pure accident, I had struck the right note.

"The key, the right tone, in acting is as important as in music. Acting really is music. It is harmony of expression.

"It also is complete forgetfulness of oneself, and entire absorption in one's role. It requires an actual understanding of various phases of character; acting really is a schooling in character. It offers a greater degree of development than I can easily express.

"My six years' experience has been of more value to me than any schooling, any other experience, I could have had.

"Under Mr. Belasco's management I am just where I want to be. My ambition is, first to succeed in a modern play, and then to return to the classical. I am better fitted for classical plays, but not just now; and meantime I wish to succeed in a play of modern life.

"I will have a new role next season, but I don't know what just yet. Mr. Belasco doesn't announce his plans this soon.

"I shall be at home for about six weeks, then I'm going to England and to Paris. At least, that was what I first intended, but it is so good to be here that I may just stay on until rehearsals begin."

are such friends, you know!" And father says:

"Why do I let John spend his time practicing on the piano? Why his mother wanted him to, and I just left it with her. It does come high, though, and come to think about it, there isn't much sense in it."

BOTH WERE WRONG.

But neither of them told the truth. Perhaps neither knew that the truth is, that in every man's mind or soul or what you will, exists a tremendous longing for the good and beautiful. Most of us kill it down, by every possible means, fearing to appear goody-goody, or sentimental. But it will out, and if we have succeeded in ourselves in covering it deep in layers of conventionality, deceit, Pecksniffism, etc., out it comes in our training of our children to be artists, musicians, social workers and philanthropists, generally.

Excuse it as we will, we are expressing daily that love of good and beauty, that came out of the old Greeks, in beautiful buildings; from the Romans, in law and engineering; from the Renaissance, in exquisite human art, as well as architectures, from this modern German in soul-stirring music; and from the French and Americans of today in revolutionizing inventions.

THE RECOGNITION IN EUROPE.

The time came long ago in the old country when this love of beauty was recognized, and provided for in buildings set aside for the housing of beautiful things, on which the people might feast at will. First the church was the treasure house, and gradually as the office of the church was somewhat crippled by this other duty, special buildings were set aside, by, rising also, ignored the traces of her tears and smiled a rather crooked little smile. "But all the same I have to live with your Keats and your Botticellis, and—and go without my lilies," she ended, whimsically.

"And I?" asked the other, holding out her hand. "Is there nothing I must go without? It is the common lot. Good by. Count on me for the Babies."

beautiful in themselves, and with beautiful surroundings, where the treasure of the community was made a common joy.

For some years Atlanta has been in that state which every nation as well as city reaches, when all of the luxuries and joys of life are within reach. When that time arrives, the amount has come when the thought of a common treasure house for beautiful things is born simultaneously in the minds of thinking citizens. Such has been the case here. For seven years the Atlanta Art association has been working toward the building of an art museum. Two years ago the city government recognized the wisdom of this step and offered the land on which the museum is to be built. The architect immediately came forward with his offering of the plan, and the association has added year by year to the small sum necessary to make a beginning of the building, and the first gifts for the collection of beautiful things to be on exhibition there.

THE TIME HAS COME.

Now has arrived the moment for that to happen which has happened again and again throughout the history of the world. Some fine, noble man or woman realize this spiritual hunger of the community, and by a gift from his or her ample funds, provides food for the soul as well as that bodily need which Atlanta has so successfully labored to supply of late years.

When this gift comes as it surely must, in the natural order of things Atlanta will not only stand intellectually and spiritually equal with her sister cities in America, but will as always be a leader in this as in other lines in the south.

SAVANNAH HAS BECOME CITY OF MANY CHURCHES

Georgia City Is Making a Reputation as a Builder of Churches, and Claims the Record for Having More Buildings Than Any Other City of Its Size

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 24.—Savannah is making a reputation for herself in a new direction. The town is making a record as a builder of churches. There is no city its size anywhere that has so many new church buildings in course of construction or where there are so many contemplated upon which work will begin within the next few months.

Those outside of Savannah who are not fully acquainted with its many characteristics may be surprised to learn of this feature of its progressiveness. The "City by the Sea" has been pointed to by other sections for such a long time because of its record in directions other than the construction and use of houses of worship that the fact that it is now going in extensively for church building will come as a sort of revelation.

Because Savannah has not always paid the very strictest attention to some of the laws passed for the government of Georgia by legislators who knew nothing of local conditions down here and who would not themselves pay any attention to some laws passed by Savannahians for the government of sections remote from the seacoast, there are some of our Georgia neighbors who look upon Savannah as a center of a population that believes in selling beer—both near and real—fishing on Sundays and shooting wild ducks when the law says they shall be immune from molestation.

CLAIMS CHURCH RECORD.

But let those who look upon Savannah as this sort of a community readjust their ideas. Savannah has more old churches—those that have celebrated their century of existence—than any other place in the state and right now the city is in the very center of a church building boom that would make any other section of the state jealous. It is the purpose of this special article in The Sunday Atlanta Journal to show to all the world just what Savannah is doing in this direction.

The Methodists are just putting the finishing touches to a $75,000 church of Stone Mountain granite on the corner of Bull and Thirty-eighth streets. It is the new home of Epworth Methodist church and it is going to be a building that will acknowledge no superior within the confines of the state. Rev. W. M. Blitch a pastor who is known as a church builder has the erection of this edifice in charge. The fund from which it is being built was started when Rev Low Warwick, stalwart Methodist and earnest worker in the Lord's vineyard, was pastor here. Mr. Warwick started the work and Mr. Blitch is completing it. The new home of Epworth has had its cornerstone laid and the granite work is complete. It will be finished before fall.

Methodists are not alone in their activity in this direction. Westminster Presbyterian church is erecting a new building of buff brick on Bull and Thirty-eighth streets a short block from that which Epworth is completing. Rev. W. A. Nisbet, D.D., is pastor of this church. The new Presbyterian church is to be known as Hull Memorial. It is erected from a $50,000 fund furnished by Mr. Joseph Hull, one of Savannah's millionaires. Mr. Hull is a man who has grown wealthy through Florida phosphates and fertilizers and he has contributed the fund for the erection of this handsome memorial within the past year. The work on the new building is going ahead rapidly and the congregation will be in the new church building line. Rev. John S. Wilder, pastor of the South Side Baptist church, has had plans drawn for a handsome new building on Barnard street between Thirty-second and Thirty-third streets and it is expected ground will be broken in a month or so. Mr. Wilder is a hard worker both in and out of his church. He has been the friend of many men in distress.

He has had much to do so far with saving the life of Dr. W. J. McNaughton now under sentence of death for the murder of Fred Flanders in Emanuel county and it was Mr. Wilder who was largely responsible for the commutation of death sentence of J. C. Hunter the man convicted of killing three women in Savannah three or four years ago. But with all his outside work Mr. Wilder has time to see about building a new church for his congregation and the work is expected to start soon.

The lot has been acquired and the plans drawn. Preparations for beginning actual work are now under way.

The Duffy Street Baptist church has recently been practically rebuilt. It is to all intents and purposes now a new church. It stands on the corner of Duffy and Abercorn streets. Rev. W. T. Granade is the pastor. When the church was originally built it was of wood and was of peculiar design. Mr. Granade and his coworkers have had the woodwork incased in red brick and the exterior effect has been materially changed. Duny Street Baptist is really a new church that has been completed within the past year.

NEW BAPTIST CHURCHES.

The Baptists are also active in the Different Denominations Are Busy Replacing Old Buildings With Structures, While Many New Edifices of Worship Are Being Constructed by Congregations

Out in West Savannah, where there is a small band of Baptists there is a new church to be erected this fall. It will be a chapel and a very complete and comfortable one. The Fourth Baptist church has recently been donated a couple of lots and will move its church building to the new site with several additions to it.

One of the few Christian Science churches in the state has just been erected in Savannah. It is a very pretty little building standing on the corner of Thirty-second and Whitaker streets. It is to be dedicated this morning. This modest little structure is the acme of neatness and compactness. It will hold about 300 people comfortably. It is the first Christian Science church to be erected in south Georgia.

CHRISTIANS ARE BUSY.

The Second Christian church has just bought a lot on Thirty-fifth and Whitaker streets and last Sunday moved into a spacious tabernacle that was built within a month after the lot had been bought. This tabernacle has just been occupied, the Sunday school marching over in a body last Sunday and the dedicatory services were held later in the day. Mr. Sam J. White is the pastor of this church. The First Christian church a year ago built a new house of worship when the original church was burned down.

The Seventh Day Adventists have just purchased a church building in Savannah and are now holding services therein each Saturday.

It will be seen that Savannah is setting a pretty steady pace for the church people of other cities in the state to follow. It is hoped that the publicity given the activity of the people in this direction will give to the citizens of the state at large something like a true conception of what Savannah is like.

Joseph and Benjamin. Gen. xliii. Golden Text—He that loveth his brother abideth in the light. 1 John ii, 10.

(1.) Verses 1-7—Which has the greater tendency to draw men to God, and why, famine or plenty? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the class.)

(2.) What part had Judah taken in selling Joseph into Egypt?

(3.) When in Egypt the first time they had told Joseph the simple truth about their father and Benjamin. Show how the truth always harmonizes and that Jacob was wrong in wishing that they had kept back the truth about Benjamin.

(4.) Verses 8-10—Can there be true repentance without making such restitution as we are able?

(5.) In what way did Judah show that he was truly penitent?

(6.) Verses 11-14—What was the pressure or motive which finally induced Jacob to let Benjamin go to Egypt with the other brothers?

(7.) If we receive too much change in making a purchase or are paid too much when we check money out of the bank, what should we do with it, and why?

(8.) Would you say or not, and why, that a man is a common thief who keeps what does not belong to him even if he has come into its possession innocently?

(9.) Do parents, as a rule, love their grownup sons as tenderly as when they were little children? Why or why not?

(10.) Verse 15—What is more horrible than famine, and can you state some of the tragedies that have resulted from famines?

(11.) Whatever may have been thought proper in those days, is it right in these days or not, and why, to make presents in order to influence those with whom we do business?

(12.) Which gives us more pain, the anticipation or the realization of a dreaded event? Why?

(13.) Verses 16-18—What effect did the sight of Benjamin have upon Joseph and why was it so?

(14.) If these men had been truly good, with clean consciences, would they have been afraid to meet Joseph? Why?

(15.) How is it that people, as a rule, are more partial and hospitable to their relatives than they are to others?

(16.) Verses 19-22—What spirit did it show and what wisdom did it manifest that these men brought up the matter of the money which they had found in their sacks to Joseph's steward at the first meeting with him?

(17.) Verses 23-25—What is the evidence to the true children of God that events are generally better than their fears and even better than their faith?

(18.) If we are living right, is it our privilege to take everything that comes to us as the very best thing that could happen to us? Why?

(19.) Is it our privilege to have "peace" all the time and our duty never to "fear?"

(20.) Verses 26-34—Would you say or not, and why, that it is ever right for us to dissimulate as Joseph did?

(21.) Why was it that Benjamin more than any of the others so stirred the emotions of Joseph?

(22.) From this story would you judge that Joseph and his brethren got into a good social mood with each other, and if so, how do you account for subsequent events?

REV. C. V. WEATHERS AT RAILROAD Y. M. C. A.

Rev. C. V. Weathers, pastor East Atlanta Methodist church, will address the gospel meeting at the R. R. Y. M. C. A. at 1-2 West Alabama street, Sunday, May 25, at 3:30 p. m.

Rev. Mr. Weathers is not a stranger to an Atlanta audience, as he has been preaching in and around the city for the last several years. He is a man that knows and loves railroad men and it will be well worth while to hear him on this occasion.

All railroad men and their friends are cordially invited to attend. Electric fans to keep cool. Good music and singing.

Isabella to Rewed

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

BERLIN, May 24—The Archduchess Isabella, who recently secured a divorce from Prince George, of Bavaria, will, it is believed, renounce her royal privileges to marry a young officer whom she met prior to her ill-starred marriage. She has not yet secured the consent of the emperor of Austria, whose favorite she is, but it is thought he will relent.

SECRETARY BRYAN'S NOBLE POSITION

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

THE country is to be congratulated that the President, the Vice President and the Secretary of State of the Republic are all total abstainers, and have banished wine from their social entertainments.

A few British editors have undertaken to deride Mr. Bryan because he omitted wine from the banquet which he gave in honor of Mr. Bryce, the retiring Ambassador of Great Britain at Washington. Some editorial pens also in our own country have undertaken to ridicule our honored secretary of State, but Mr. Bryan deserves the cordial approval of all good people for the stand which he has taken upon this subject. London editors say affide to Washington as "Wishy-Washington" because of Mr. Bryan's wineless banquet, but it is better to have a "Wishy-Washington" for this republic than a "liquored London."

Mr. Bryan sets a good example to people of position in the United States; and following his leadership they should make a declaration of independence from all those social usages in conformity to which wine has been considered indispensable to a dinner-party. The drinking habits of "society" can not be defended on any reasonable grounds; and it is time reformation were begun in this matter of social wine drinking. There is not a sensible person in America who will not admit that wine drinking at social entertainments has been the ruin of multiplied thousands of young men. Even women have not escaped demoralization through this wine drinking custom.

Doubtless there are many good men and women in what is called "society" who have secretly lamented these demoralizing social usages, although they have refrained from openly condemning them. Now is a good time for these people to assert openly and emphatically what they have long believed, but have hesitated to express. Let them declare that the indiscriminate offer of wine at dinners and other social functions is not only improper but positively vulgar, as it undoubtedly is. Let them affirm flatly and finally that for the sake of the young, the weak, the wayward—for the sake of personal purity and family peace, for the sake of social propriety and the national welfare,—they will banish wine from their feasts from this time forth and forever.

It is worse than idle for men and women to indulge in private intemperance which they dare not defend in public. They can not, without stultifying themselves, stand for temperance publicly while promoting intemperance in their customs.

Many more people now travel in Europe annually than was the case twenty-five years ago. There they see wine drinking and beer drinking, both publicly and privately, as we never see it in this country. Some may be misled by what they thus observe in European cities. It is very easy for half-educated people to imagine that whatever they see abroad must be all right. But people of sense know we have nothing to learn on the subject of temperance from European customs. It does not become us to ape the evil things of Europe, but to copy only the good and make it better. It is time Europe learned some things from America; and Mr. Bryan has set a conspicuous example of virtue which should be copied by European statesmen and social leaders. But whether our friends across the sea imitate this example or not, our honored Secretary of State or not, we in America should follow his leadership in the matter.

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

All the talk about the sobriety of wine-drinking countries is the veriest nonsense. Any man who has visited Paris, or Berlin, or Vienna knows that there is not a syllable of truth in the claim that the people of those capitals are more sober and virtuous than the people of our own country? But even if it were true that those wine and beer drinking countries are more temperate than ours, it would not follow that we will become more temperate by drinking wine as they do. Our case is bad enough as it is, without superadding their vices to our excesses. We can gain nothing in the way of sobriety by adding their wine drinking to our whisky guzzling. Let us not lose those characteristics, and we must do our duty to ourselves, to our neighbors, and to our children by banishing the drinking which are around us and not in view of the remote condition of other lands.

Prohibition has spread very widely in our country, and it can not be doubted that the legal prohibition of the liquor traffic has greatly reduced intemperance in America. There have been difficulties in enforcing prohibitory laws, and oft-times they have been nullified in some communities. Nevertheless prohibition has done much good, and it will do more. But temperance reform can not be brought to perfection by prohibition alone. We must have a change in those social usages which are prevalent in what is called the higher classes of society and which constantly produce a fearful crop of drunkards and drunkenness. Locker clubs would die of inanition but for the prevalence of those evil social customs. The responsibility of destroying the social usages which produce intemperance in our land rests upon the men and women who occupy positions of prominence in the community. The editor of Scribner's Monthly, years ago, put this matter most cogently and conclusively in a strong editorial under the caption of "The Wine Question in Society." The closing paragraph of that editorial will suitably close this article. The editor spoke as follows:

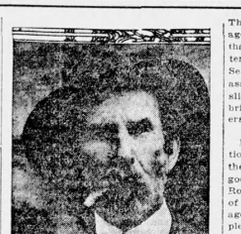
"If the men and women of good society will but have less drinking to excess, let them stop drinking moderately. If they are not willing to break off the indulgence of a feeble appetite for the sake of doing a great good to a great many people, how can they expect a poor, broken-down wretch to refrain at a sacrifice that is stronger than the love of wife and children and even life itself? The punishment for the failure to do duty in this business is sickening to contemplate. The sacrifice of life and peace and wealth will go on. Every year young men will rush wildly to the devil, middle-aged men will booze away into apoplexy, and old men will swell up with the sweet poison and become disgusting idiots. What will become of the women? We should think that they had suffered enough from this evil to hold it under everlasting ban, yet there are drunken women as well as drinking clergymen. Society, however, has a great advantage in the fact that it is vulgar for a woman to drink. There are some things that a woman may not do, and maintain her social standing. Let her not quarrel with the fact that society demands more of her than it does of men. It is her safeguard in many ways."

The course of Secretary Bryan is not fanatical. It is conservative, patriotic, and worthy of universal approbation. Let men and women in prominent position everywhere follow this lofty example in this important matter.

PROUD PARIS SPRANG FROM MUDDY LUTETIA

SAILING ON THE SEWER

By Smith Clayton



BY SMITH CLAYTON.

THE night-side of Paris will have to go over.

There is no law like proceeding with orderliness. I have given you a glimpse of the catacombs and shall remain under Paris in this article to tell of a sail on the great main sewer. What more natural than the catacombs followed by sailing the sewer, both leading up to night scenes in the great gay city or the underworld, giving glances at the Boulevardier, the Lorette, the Apache, the Demi-monde, the bungler, and the demo-mondaine.

NOTHING LIKE IT.

In some respects the most novel happenings of my life took place on a bright day in Paris about a decade ago. It was one of those experiences that a man can not possibly believe in anywhere in the world save in Paris. I certainly would not expect my readers to credit the statemnt about to be made if it were based on hearsay—it is so hard to believe, sounds so very unnatural.

NOT LIKE JEAN V.

And yet I sailed on a sewer in Paris. I did not tramp in the sewers or lay at hide and seek in them as did Jean Valgean, that wonderful fugitive from justice, so called. The sewers of that day and time were very gloomy, dismal, reeking with foul odors from the purlieues, choking with the refuse of an old and very dirty city. That was before the marvelous drainage system of Paris was instituted, that vast network of sewers more interesting even than the catacombs. Sewers, mind you, which are always associated in the mind with filth and slime and foulness, darkness miasma, bricked-in malodorous dungeons, breeders of disease and death!

THE GREATEST WONDERS.

Not so the Paris system the construction of which is one of the wonders of the world, doing humankind far more good than the Colossus of Trojan? the Rock of Gibraltar or the famed Colossus of Rhodes. For so perfect is the drainage system which they illustrate, so complete is the sanitary work which they daily perform, that for decades they have not only been the preservers, but the improvers of the health of the million who laugh and sing and dance and love and grieve and sigh and hate above them.

INCALCULABLE BLESSING.

It is a fact that this unapproached system of drainage has been so beneficial to the public health, the greatest of all blessings that the yearly death rate which was thirty-six per 1,000 under Louis the XVI, over 100 years ago, has been reduced within the past quarter of a century to twenty-two per 1,000, barring of course, the bad years consequent upon wars and deaths from violence. Paris is indeed the healthiest capital on the continent to be expected from the fact that with the possible exception of Hamburg, she is the only continental city having a complete system of underground drainage. You cannot pollute the public streets, or gutters with dirty water or offal in Paris without being in peril of heavy penalty. The channels are there provided for surface, as well as other drainage, connected with the sewer and conducting it to a long tunnel which falls into the Seine below the bridges of Asinieres.

DROPPING THROUGH THE OFFICE.

When the guide said: "Here is the bureau to the sewers," I looked around. We were near the front of the great Church of the Magdalen, before the door of what seemed to be a very neat office. There were about ten people in the party including a splendid looking Russian, his handsome wife and two or three fine children. We entered close upon the heels of the guide and passed down a wide carpeted, electric-lighted stairway and a moment later stood upon the bank of the main sewer of Paris. I looked up. The lofty ceiling and walls were of solid masonry and lined with water-proof cement. Electric lights glittered overhead, the air was fresh and pure, the ventilation and the light perfect. The whole width of this underground way was about twenty feet, the width of the softly flowing, clean stream of water several feet deep being about eight feet.

A STUDY.

The boat was a study. It was about the length of a gondola, perhaps longer, built in oblong form with an aisle running down the center and with comfortable leather stuffed cushioned seats. Stalwart men in the whitest of duck, wide caps to match, gripped spotless ropes attached to the head of the vessel and pulled it with a joyous celerity as they fairly trotted along the smoothly paved embankment on either side.

IN THE CITY.

As we sped along we could tell exactly where we were by glancing up, for the boulevards and streets are numbered in this great sewer gallery, just as they are above ground. Occasionally we would get out of this boat at a branch or smaller sewer running at right angles to the main sewer—get out and ride some distance from the main stream in cute little wagons which ran like so many small cars on roads laid at the bottom of the narrow channel.

Returning to the boat landing, we sailed on under the Avenue de l'Opera, the Boulevards des Italiens, Mont Martre, on pass the Porte St. Martin, the Place Bastile, and at last took a turn to the northeast, and at length landed from the romantic soil near the Place du Chatelet, at the south end of the boulevard near the Seine. We had sailed several miles and felt the more triumphant when just here we noted the Fontaine de la Victoire, erected in 1807 to commemorate the first victories won by the great Napoleon. It is adorned with four figures, which stand for Fidelity, Vigilance, Justice and Power, and surmounted by the "Colonne de Polinier," on which is written the names of the battles. On the summit is a splendid statue of Victory, with hands outstretched, as if distributing laurels to the victors. This monument stood originally farther from the Seine, but was removed entire to its present location when the Boulevard de Sebastopol was finished. On the right and left of the Place du Chatelet are the Theatre Historique, formerly the Lyrique, which was burned down by the Communists in 1871, and the Theatre Chatelet, seating 3,600 people, the greatest theater for the exploitation of spectacular drams and ballet in Paris.

CAN DO ANYTHING

A city which can make the main sewer fit to sail on in light, cleanliness, sweetness of air and so on can do anything within the range of human possibility. But the great transformation of the nolsome may be foul and diseaseful to the fair and the hygienic shows that the Parisians possess the faculty of making the uncouth, the utterly repulsive not only wondrously useful but absolutely attractive, lands striking illustration all over Paris.

MUDDY LUTETIA

A most notable instance is furnished by the Ile de la Cite, the most antique part of Paris. Above this island and connected with it by a bridge is the smaller less important Ile St. Danish. Here in the time of Caesar 100-44 B. C. the town of Lutella on the edge of a great marsh flanked by the swampy banks of the Seine. A more forbidding spot than Lutella, the muddy city and its surroundings could hardly be imagined. And yet these marshes and swamps the notoriously unattractive Lutella has become the cleanest great city in the world, affording better security to life and property than any great city of the globe despite the 100,000 criminals which find shelter within its borders.

GREAT BUILDINGS.

And the great Buildings hoary with historic interest and architectural grandeur which adorn this Ile de la cite are well worth a trip across the water to see.

Notre Dame, the oldest and most interesting Gothic church in Paris; the Hotel Dieu, the oldest hospital in Paris; the Fountain of Notre Dame at the rear of the Citadel; the Palais of Justice, where all the big courts sit; St. Chapelle, a gem of purest ray serene, the most beautiful Gothic church in Paris or the world, unsurpassed in lightness, loveliness and grace; the Conciergerie, the oldest of prisons, within whose walls of gloom and ancient towers overlooking the Seine, in which was the room, afterwards converted into a chapel, destroyed by the council in 1871, from which Marie Antoinette was led to the guillotine.

BUILDING UP A WORN-OUT FARM

BY DR. ANDREW M. SOULE

IN 1907, when the State College of Agriculture was reorganized there was turned over to it for its use a much abused, washed, eroded and run-down farm. Situated in the Piedmont region the land is naturally hilly, and the difficulty of how to gain and maintain in a friable condition after improvement has been effected. The problem of building up this farm was one of the first to which the college directed its energy, for it was felt that it represented one of the state's most important agricultural problems, and that if this land could be built up successfully at a moderate cost and in a reasonable length of time that it would constitute one of the most important demonstrations which the institution could make for the benefit of its student body and the guidance of the farmers of the state. The situation of this farm and the physical condition in which it was found does not vary greatly from that prevailing on thousands of homesteads throughout the great Piedmont Plateau, and the methods which were employed to build up this land and reclaim the farm at Athens are applicable throughout the whole tier of states bordering the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

The area of land included in the farm is some 830 acres, of which nearly 100 acres were set aside for campus and forest reservations. Nearly 300 acres are in woodland. The area devoted to crops in 1911-1912 consisted of 232 acres exclusive of pastures. Of this area, 80 acres were devoted to the growth of peas and sorghum for hay production, 24 acres to peas and soy beans for soil improvement, 65 acres to oats for hay and grain, 10 acres to rye for grain, 40 acres to cow peas/crimson clover for soil improvement, 15 acres to cotton, 40 acres to corn for grain, and 48 acres to corn and sorghum for silage. These farms do not include a very considerable area of land devoted to Bermuda for pasture purposes. It will be noticed at once that the farm is not organized on the basis of practicing a crop rotation, minimizing the production of cotton, and emphasizing the maintenance of stock. Each season sees a new area of land has been brought under cultivation, and its improvement systematically undertaken, and in the course of a few years a considerably larger area than that mentioned in this article will be devoted to crop production.

In 1908, the income from the farm was $2,737.24; in 1911-12 it was $6,581.40. The receipts have shown a steady increase throughout the period in question. These results have been obtained by plowing the land as deeply as possible with large plows, extra heavy mules, and draft animals of the Percheron breed. The organization of a dairy herd has assisted materially in the development witnessed. The herd has not only proven a profitable adjunct to the farm, but has supplied ever increasing quantities of land manure for the enrichment of the soil. The growing under of green crops has changed the physical condition of the land, while the drainage of certain lowlying areas has made their cultivation possible. In connection with the improvement of the land several miles of fencing have been built, the pastures very materially improved through grubbing, a fair stock of farm roadways constructed, and a number of barns and other buildings essential to the housing of live stock and implements and the protection of the forage erected.

Starting with practically nothing in the way of live stock, there have been built up in a period of five years herds worth about $10,265. The college at the present time owns seventeen horses and mules, seventeen pure-bred Jerseys, ten pure-bred Holsteins, thirty-one grade dairy cattle, thirty grade shorthorns, forty-eight Herefords, twelve Tamworths and fifteen Berkshires, making a total of 159 head of live stock. The excess over and above that necessary for distribution amount annually to several hundred dollars. When it is recollected that these herds have been built up in a period of five years at a very small outlay for the purchase of pure-breds, it illustrates very forcibly how quickly herds may be developed on the average farm if the energy and thought of the management be directed towards this end. The idea in emphasizing live stock farming at the State College of Agriculture has been to illustrate its possibilities and to show that through its agency the farmer could not only make a good profit from his land, but build it up more effectively than will ever be possible by devoting it to the growth of corn and cotton without regard to the maintenance of a proper crop rotation.

The value of the buildings on the college farm at present has been conservatively estimated at $9,492, and the value of the tools and implements at $3,003. While these may look like relatively large investments to some, it should be remembered that they represent permanent investments which will last through a series of years. A number of experienced farmers who were familiar with the farm before the work of improvement was undertaken, and who have examined it within the past year, are of the opinion that the area under cultivation has been increased in value at least $5,000 for agricultural purposes, and if the land were offered for sale today it is quite certain that it would bring a much larger relative increase than that in actual value than is represented by this figure.

Farmers will no doubt be interested to know just what results were obtained from the farm operations during the year ended June 1, 1912. The expenditures for maintenance were as follows: Labor $3,845.79; fertilizer $979.86, foodstuffs (chiefly cotton seed meal) $1,300.50, dairy equipment $447.-84, miscellaneous expenditures for repairs, betterments, etc., $1,959.44, a total lay for maintenance of $6,855.89. The receipts from the farm were as follows: Dairy products $5,093.44, farm products $3,481.97, making a total of $8,581.41. The difference between the receipts and expenditures is thus seen to be $1,725.52. While mainly this is a respectable margin of profit when the volume of business conducted is taken into consideration, the statement of this kind would not do justice to any farm, for certainly the cost of the permanent improvements of the year should be charged up against the farm on the one hand and the value of the improvements effected during the year credited to it.

For permanent improvements there was expended during the year under discussion $4,018.76, divided as follows: Buildings and repair $3,537.93, tools and implements $409.46, live stock $71.25. The value of the improvements effected during the year was as follows: Tools and implements $245.64; building and repair $2,537.93; increased value of live stock $265; fencing $87.45; teaming for buildings $171.15; grading $207.80; clearing land $8.15; removing stumps and rocks $82.20; work on roads $60. The total expenditures for maintenance and permanent improvements on the one hand thus becomes $10,874.47; receipts and value of improvements total $13,321.83, leaving as net earnings for the year's operations $2,246.36.

Remember that this volume of business has been built up in a period of five years with the investment of a very small amount of capital. This work has been accomplished on a thoroughly exhausted farm where all the labor had to be hired and paid at a higher rate because of the proximity of the institution to the city of Athens than prevails in the open country. These results have been accomplished through the establishment of herds of live stock and the minimizing of the production of cotton. The data presented should certainly encourage every farmer to give more attention to the institution of a systematic method of farming on his land in which live stock husbandry shall occupy a more prominent place than has been accorded to it in the past.

WEAK LOINS AND THEIR TREATMENT.

G. W. F., Matthews, N. C., writes: I have a cow which was taken sick a few days ago. She could not chew and appears to be weak in the loins. I am feeding on cotton seed meal and grazing her. Would like to know what is the matter with her.

From the description offered in your letter it is impossible to say definitely what the trouble with your cow might be. If she has very recently calved there is a possibility of complications due to parturition. The symptoms you have included in your letter would not indicate any evidences of milk fever. I would suggest that you give a mild, stimulating purgative at once of three-quarters of a pound of Epsom salts and two ounces of ginger dissolved in four quarts of warm water. Plenty of water should be given to drink and enemas of warm water will move the bowels. The animal will take food, bran mashes made by pouring warm water on pure wheat bran will be found helpful. Cut out the grain rations for a few days. Provide fresh green feed and give easily digested laxative food. Medicine should not be resorted to unless absolutely necessary. Nature will tend to effect a cure if the trouble is due to impaction of the rumen or a more or less chronic form of indigestion. I believe the treatment suggested will prove effective.

A PLAN OF CULTIVATING CORN.

W. H. Covens, Ga., writes: Would like some information on how to cultivate corn from now on. I broke the land with a turning plow ten inches deep and run a sweeter in the furrow eight inches deeper which makes eighteen inches. I run the rows off forty inches apart and the corn is eight inches in the drill. I broadcasted eight loads of lot compost before breaking. When I sided it I drilled cotton seed meal in the rows. I have cotton seed meal, muriate of potash and acid. I would like to know how like to know how to mix them to make a fertilizer for the corn and how much to apply and when.

The care and skill with which you prepared the seed bed for your corn crop is to be highly commended. Putting the land in shape is one of the most important and essential matters and is not prized and valued by our farmers as highly as it should be. Your example in this respect will no doubt be of value to your community and it is to be hoped that many farmers will profit by the improved methods of practice with reference to soil cultivation which you are following. We would suggest that you use on your corn a formula prepared by mixing together 1,000 pounds of high grade cotton seed meal, 900 pounds of acid phosphate and 100 pounds of muriate of potash. This will give you a formula carrying approximately 8.4 per cent of phosphoric acid, 3 per cent of nitrogen and 3.5 per cent of potash. As your corn is now planted, we would advise you to put on 200 pounds as a side application, and in two or three weeks put on an additional 300 pounds. It is desirable that you put all fertilizer on two or three weeks before the corn bunches to tassel. In our judgment it would be better to put a part of the fertilizer under the drill row rather than to wait and put it all on as side application, especially where you use yard manure to supply vegetable matter to the soil. We do not like the idea of attempting to use more than 600 pounds of fertilizer as a side application.

MANAGEMENT OF A SORE SHOULDER.

P. C. H., Rhine, Ga., writes: I have bought a mule which has a sore on the point of his shoulder. I have done everything I know for him but the sore comes on all the time and runs matter. When I work him the scab comes off and it looks red and raw. I would like to know what to do to cure him.

You should wash and cleanse the shoulder very thoroughly and give your mule as much rest as possible. It is important to examine the collar and see that it fits properly and that there is padding of the right character to protect the sore spot without irritation. Keep the sore spot well bathed with cold water and thoroughly disinfected. To this end you may use carbolic acid, one part to thirty or fifty parts of water. After thoroughly cleansing sore place, prepare a drying powder as follows: Air-slaked lime pulverized twelve parts, tanic acid pulverized one part. This is an excellent powder for sunken sores and galls and for healing raw surfaces. The powder should be dusted on freely. The treatment should be given two to three times daily.

EVIDENCES OF HOG CHOLERA.

W. L. P., Artow, Ala., writes: I would like to know what to do for my hogs. They are six months old and they act weak in their hips and fall about. Do not eat anything hardly and in three or four days they die.

The chances are that cholera has attacked your herd of hogs, and if the case is well defined you can determine from the following description whether this disease is present or not. Loss of appetite is accompanied by fever, the temperature ranging from 103 to 108 degrees. Red or purple spots appear on the skin, especially on the belly and the inside of the thighs. The eyes become sore, first a reddening and then a gummy exudation forms in the corners. Sores appear on the limbs and ears. The coat is rough and there is weakness and a staggering gait. Emaciation sets in shortly accompanied by rapid breathing. The lungs then become involved. Constipation occurs in the early stages of the disease, diarrhoea often marking the later stages. The sick hog tends to isolate itself from the balance of the herd. These symptoms indicate the presence of cholera. The only effective treatment is to isolate the sick animals and remove the healthy ones to uninfected ground. Then treat all with serum. Hog cholera serum is a preventive and not a cure for this disease, though it may exercise some curative effects. The serum should be administered in proportion to the size and weight of the animal. The following dosage is recommended: Hogs weighing 25 to 50 pounds, 10 to 20 c. c.; 50 to 100 pounds, 20 to 30 c. c.; 100 to 200 pounds, 30 to 50 c. c. The serum is not manufactured at the agricultural college located at Auburn in your state, you will of necessity have to purchase it through your local drug store.

REMOVING WARTS ON CATTLE.

W. A. R., Woodbury, Ga., writes: I have a nice milk cow that has warts on her, and I would like to know how to get rid of them.

The best way to get rid of the warts about which you write is to cut them off with a sharp knife and sear the affected parts with a hot iron. You may also tie strings around the warts tightening them from day to day or small rubber bands may be employed to advantage for this purpose. Of course, acetic acid may be used, but this sometimes makes a sore, especially where it is not applied with skill. Warts are a nuisance and unsightly, therefore, it is not surprising that you should desire to get rid of them, but the methods we have suggested are about the only practical ones which you can employ.

ANALYSIS OF A CERTAIN MIXTURE.

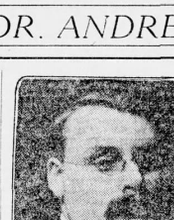
M. K., Handsboro, Miss., writes: Kindly tell me the analysis of 400 pounds of acid phosphate, 200 pounds of nitrate of soda and 100 pounds of muriate of potash. Is this a good mixture for potatoes on sandy soil without clay foundation?

A mixture containing 400 pounds of acid phosphate, 200 pounds of nitrate of soda and 100 pounds of muriate of potash would contain approximately sixty-four pounds of available phosphoric acid, thirty-two pounds of available nitrogen and fifty pounds of available potash. Its percentage composition would be about 9.1 per cent of phosphoric acid, 4.5 per cent of nitrogen and 7.1 per cent of potash. This formula used at the rate of 77 pounds per acre would answer well for potatoes on sandy land. Only one change could be suggested in that it might be better not to use quite so much nitrate of soda. Substitute, say 200 pounds of cotton seed meal for 100 pounds of the nitrate of soda, and we think the mixture will be improved, and that you will be securing nitrogen from both organic and inorganic sources, one being virtually an insurance against the growing crop and the other more slowly available.

NITRATE AS A TOP DRESSING FOR COTTON.

J. P. W., Troy, Ala., writes: I wish to use forty or fifty tons of nitrate of soda under cotton this year, and would be glad to have you give me your opinion in regard to same. Would like all the information you can give me in regard to the use of nitrate on cotton.

No doubt you desire to use nitrate of soda almost exclusively as a top dressing on cotton. Of course, at this season of the year it is possible to use it as a side application in conjunction with phosphorus and potash. When used as a side application we would prefer to mix it with some form of organic nitrogen so that upon the assimilation of the nitrogen derived from the soda an additional supply of this element might be available to the growing crop. Of course, organic sources of nitrogen as a rule have to undergo fermentation which takes longer and is more complex than with some of the inorganic sources of nitrogen. For instance, the nitrogen in nitrate of soda is immediately available when brought into solution by the water of the soil. In cotton seed meal it must first be transformed into ammonia and later into nitrogen. Cotton seed meal and nitrate of soda combine well together for use in a side application along with phosphorus and potash. Where side applications are used we would advise that they be put on relatively early. The amount to apply will depend on the nature of the soil; on clay soils, 200 pounds and on sandy soils probably 300 pounds. A side application may be used alongside the drill row or scattered over the ground and worked in with a cultivator. We think the latter method preferable where the land has been plowed before planting and properly cultivated and fertilized. A good formula to use for this purpose will be from 8 to 10 per cent of phosphoric acid, 3 to 4 per cent of nitrogen, and 4 to 6 per cent of potash. On sandy lands where there is a tendency for the cotton to rust, we would use the higher per cent of potash.



DR. A. M. SOULE,

Used by itself we believe about 100 pounds of nitrate of soda is the largest amount which is likely to prove, profitable on most of our southern soils for general field crops. On truck crops probably 200 pounds in extreme cases, 250 pounds can be used to advantage. It will not do to depend on nitrate of soda or any other artificial source of nitrogen for the entire supply of this element. Part of it must be derived from humus, and preferably from organic matter such as yard manure or green crops plowed under. When using nitrate of soda alone it should be applied on top of the ground. If there is any moisture whatever it will quickly dissolve and be taken up by the soil water. In a very protracted drought, the nitrate might be covered very lightly. It should be put on after a rain in order that it may before. We think one application as a rule will be satisfactory for corn and cotton. We would prefer to put it on cotton from the 15th of June to the 1st of July, depending somewhat on seasonal conditions, and on corn well in advance of its bunching to tassel.

DESTROYING MOLES IN A GARDEN.

M. A. B., Deveseaux, Ga., writes: Please let me know how I can get my way to destroy or get rid of moles. My garden is a perfect network of them. They ruin everything I have planted. Have tried corn soaked in arsenic, but they do not appear to care for it.

There are special traps for catching moles which we think you will find fairly satisfactory. They are not very costly. If your local hardware dealer does not happen to have them he can order them for you. We have enjoyed moles by using carbon bisulphide. Saturate bunches of cotton with it, and drop up the runways, close them in and cover with earth. Put several in each runway. The gases are so penetrating as to kill the moles if the work is properly done and persisted in. Carbon bisulphide is not expensive to purchase nor difficult to handle provided you remember that it is inflammable and therefore, matches or pipes should not be used in its vicinity. It is useful to destroy ants on buildings out of doors. A gallon will be sufficient to treat a considerable area of ground.

"ATTAIN A BOYISH CONTOUR"

Suggests Billie Burke, and Then You Will Be Billie's "Modern Idea of Venus"

Now that the women are going corsetless or at least are striving to make themselves appear uncorseted, you can almost tell the character of a woman by her hips. There is the girl who has "waggly" hips. You know the kind. They look as though they were going to be put out of joint every step she takes. I always put this kind of a girl down as having an unbounded desire for the admiration of the other sex and little intellectual caliber.

Then there is the girl who looks "slip-shodded" around the hips. Her dress never quite fits over them, it is higher or lower than it should be in the front or back. This girl is lazy. Then you have the girl who early begins to take on a settled look about the hips, she has lost many of her illusions and enthusiasms and will be the girl who will show age early. If she is fleshy she will soon have what is called the "middle-aged spread" and even if she is thin her abdomen will be higher and more noticeable than her hips.

There is very little need of a girl wearing corsets unless she carries too much flesh. If the ordinary girl will be careful of her diet and keep herself to the right proportion physically and if she will stand properly, walking on the balls of her feet, she need not worry about the line of her hips, this line will be perfectly natural, free and beautiful.

It is quite the fashion nowadays to have this line of almost boyish contour. The modern idea of Venus is a much more girlish figure than that of the famous de Milo, and it is very hard for the matron to attain these lines.

You know the French say that beauty is only attained through great pain. We of the modern beauty cult do not believe in this. We think that beauty means health—both mental and physical health—and I am glad to say that health is not painful. But we do know that health means sacrifice of a great many of the so-called pleasures of life.

The woman who would retain a youthful figure late in life must take a great deal of exercise even when she wishes to keep still. She must not allow herself to get into any habit of indolence. She must eat plain food and never gorge herself with food or drink simply because she likes them, and, above all, she must keep herself physically buoyant by choosing the best.

THE ROVER

THE FIRST OF A NEW SERIES
By George Randolph Chester

"I don't believe you like the churn business very well, Tommy," speculated Helen Rand.

I DON'T believe you like the churn business very well, Tommy," speculated Helen Rand, as a powdered-looking superintendent went back into the factory with a small sheaf of orders.

"It's rotten," Tommy gloomily confided.

"How did you come to select churns?" wondered Mrs. Rushmore, replacing her subscription list in her handbag, but opening it again to see if Tommy's name was dry.

"I didn't," confessed Tommy with a half-vexed smile; "they selected me. The Johnson Churn company is the oldest factory of its kind in the country, and I didn't want to see a nice old business like that go under. They needed a combination of new capital and new blood, and I had it, and so there you are."

"Then why don't you like it?" puzzled Helen, her particularly effective eyes resting on him for a moment with frank approval.

"I don't seem to have the right kind of new blood," he worried. "My money kept the concern from bankruptcy, but nobody seems to care for the suggestions I make. There's something wrong here, but the fact of the matter is I don't know enough about business to find out just what it is."

"It'll be all right, Tommy; you're lucky," laughed Helen as she rose to go.

The door opened, and there came in, from the factory yard, a tall and exceptionally fine-looking stranger who was dressed with extreme nicety. He bowed in the general direction of Tommy, but his glance, in sweeping from Mrs. Rushmore to Helen, caught for a fleeting second, the eyes of the latter.

"I will see you tomorrow night, Tommy," remarked Mrs. Rushmore, and Helen, as she went out at the door, waved Tommy a gay adieu.

"Mr. Spencer," inquired the stranger, "correct," admitted Tommy, with a parting nod to the ladies though the crack of the closing door, and he examined the neatly engraved calling card. "What can I do for you, Mr. Ames?"

"I'd like permission to inspect your factory," requested Ames, with a smile of friendliness.

"I don't see any objection to that," granted Tommy, responding to the smile. He felt an instant liking for the man. "I'm afraid you won't see much, however."

"That's what I hope," returned the stranger.

Tommy looked at him wonderingly.

"That's a queer statement," he observed.

"It merely needs explanation," answered Ames, pleasantly. "I'm looking for a business opportunity."

"Come right in, the water's fine," invited Tommy with a grin. "That's what I was looking for; but I found it."

"So I understand," smiled Ames. "I came into town last night, and have been making inquiries all morning about your various local enterprises."

"How did you happen to pick out the Johnson Churn company?"

"Your pay roll. At one time this concern employed 500 workmen. Today it employs scarcely more than 200. I can discover the reason for that, it might be of benefit to both of us."

"I think I'll go through the shop with you," suddenly decided Tommy, and led the way into the factory.

CHAPTER II.

THE shop was apparently busy. The whirring of belts and the low roar was turning at a good speed, and in two squat rows was heavy looking machinery, about half of which, however, was idle; there were shavings and mill dust everywhere, a planing machine in the far corner of the shop was singing in a monotonous whine, and eating its endless procession of rough lumber from an open doorway, next to it a rip-saw was cutting the smooth oak into narrow strips.

"Where's that lumber going?" asked Ames.

To the grooving machinery in the next room," replied Tommy.

"I see, what's that chap doing in this upper corner?"

"Smoothing the tubs. It's an interesting process."

Tommy led the way over to the corner. A man, surrounded by high piles of the white oak churn bodies, was clamping them, by turns, in a clumsy lathe, and scraping them, both inside and out, first with steel planing tools and then with sand paper. Ames watched him interestedly for a few moments, and walked away. An elevator came down piled with staves. A boy unloaded them and carried them back to a groover, which stood near the rip-saw. Another boy came down the aisle pushing a huge box on wheels. It was filled with shavings.

"Where's that stuff going?" Ames wanted to know. He stopped the boy and reached his hand in the box.

"To the boiler room," Tommy told him.

Ames fished around in the shavings. He brought out a strip of oak two feet long, two inches thick, three inches wide at the butt and an inch wide at the point. He found three others just like it.

"You send a lot of these pieces to the fire, I suppose," he surmised.

"Stacks and stacks of them," worried Tommy. "It's funny the oak we can buy, and it seems a criminal waste, but it's apparently unavoidable. They're trimmed from the edges of the staves, and the lumber can't be cut any more economically, because we must have the grain running straight."

"True enough," admitted Ames, "but something should be made of these pieces."

"I suggested that," and Tommy wrinkled his brow. "The superintendent and the manager laughed at the idea. They claim we'd scatter our force in making a market for another product. They've run this plant for years and years, and they know all about it. I don't."

"They were in financial difficulties when they got you, weren't they?"

"Yes, but there was a time when they made a good profit. They've been cramped for capital here lately."

"Why?" asked Ames.

"I don't know," mused Tommy. "The big cramp came right after they enlarged the plant. I guess they overplayed themselves; then they ran into heavy competition."

"I understand it now," nodded Ames. "They did all their big manufacturing in this room. When they enlarged the plant they didn't rearrange the machinery. Now they cart their lumber all over the place and back, and give it a dozen handlings where it should have but one. I suppose that tub-scraper always stood in this corner."

"Since the plant was built," corroborated Tommy. "Those tubs go over into the new building to be finished. They just came from there to be scraped."

"We'll see the new building," suggested Ames.

As they turned away, the superintendent, a wrinkle-faced old man, with a white moustache, came up to them and Tommy introduced him.

"Mr. Ames is studying our methods of production," Tommy explained. "He is pointing out where some of our profits go."

"Are you familiar with the churn business?" inquired the superintendent, with ill-conceived resentment.

"I never saw a churn factory before," confessed Ames with a laugh.

"Oh," said the superintendent with a snort of amusement.

When Tommy and Ames returned from their inspection of the plant they found the superintendent in the office with the manager, a large, red-faced man, who was addicted to shirt sleeves and who chewed cigars. The superintendent was leaning on the corner of the manager's desk and both turned with displeasure as Tommy came in. The superintendent nodded and returned to the factory. Tommy introduced his caller, and explained his present mission in life.

"Yes," acknowledged the manager, giving Ames a thorough sizing up. "Brinkley has just been telling me that you were giving Tommy some expert advice. What do you think of our plant, Mr. Ames?"

Ames removed his hat and gloves, sat down and lit a cigarette.

"Frankly, it's pretty bad," he began. "You should shut down your shop for about a month and rearrange all your effective machinery. At least half your machines should go to the scrap heap. Next, you should put on one or more side lines. At present you're using only about one-third of your capacity. You're crowding onto the price of your present output the entire burden of taxes, interest, insurance and all such fixed items of expense. If your output were three times as much, the prorata of this overhead expense would be just one-third. My suggestion would be that you put in some line of special furniture, and another line of small articles to use up your waste material."

The manager leaned back in his chair and looked at Ames through heavy-lidded eyes.

"Do you like the color of the new rug Tommy put down?" he insolently inquired.

Ames rose.

"I came here to talk business," he stated.

"Who invited you?"

"I did," unexpectedly declared Tommy. "There's something wrong with this factory, Lasset, and I'm going to find out why. Reverse Gear people can undersell us."

"Mr. Ames is as ignorant of a churn factory as you are," retorted Lasset. "You took after this factory, Tommy, and we'll tend to the factory."

Tommy studied the manager unsmilingly.

"I've made an unfortunate impression on you, Lasset," he presently observed. "You think, I'm a saphead, because you got my money into this concern; but I want you to always remember that I came along with the money; and by jinks, I'm going to see that I get my money's worth. Come on, Ames, we'll take a spin. I want you to talk to me."

CHAPTER III.

TOMMY found Brinley out in the foreman of the stave department about the handling of his material.

"It's awkward to do it," the foreman was protesting when Tommy came up.

"It saved two haulings," Brinley insisted. "You take them now from here into the other building, finish and shape the ends, bring them back to have the edges grooved, and take them over to the other building again for assembling. By moving the edges back fore you take them out of here we'll save two handlings. You can see that yourself, I hope."

"That's what I've always said," declared the foreman; "but, at the same time, I don't blame you to blame me with rotten work. Either the end shaper should be here, or the side groover should be in the other building.

"You do as I tell you," ordered Brinley, and as the much disgruntled foreman walked away to injure the perfect workmanship in which he had taken so much pride—

"You're putting into effect the execution of one Mr. Ames' suggested," charged Tommy.

"It's something I've had in mind a long time, denied the superintendent.

"Then why didn't you do it?" Tommy immediately wanted to know.

Brinley turned on him with a flush of anger.

"Mr. Spencer, I am supposed to answer leading questions like that to only one man in this concern," he stated, "and I can't work for two bosses, and I won't."

"Some day you'll try not working for any," prophesied Tommy.

He returned to the office full of anger.

"Lasset, I find Brinley putting into execution one of Ames' suggestions, only doing it clumsily," he observed.

"Suppose he is," growled Lassett.

"I think it proves Ames point," persisted Tommy. "I talked with him all yesterday afternoon in the car, all through dinner, and all last evening at his hotel, and I want him in this factory."

"We don't need another ornamental man," remarked Lasset with a glance at Tommy's new rug, which had been the cause of much criticism among the stockholders.

Tommy kept his temper pretty well, considering.

"We need a new manager," he declared. "You represent to me that if you were unhampered by debt, you could put us on a dividend paying basis. You showed me your volume of business, and proved to me that, with the labor and material costing so much on each churn, you made a certain amount of profit. It's a fact that the books show a deficit every month. I didn't know why until Ames came along. Our volume of business is not large enough to carry our overhead expense, and we can't charge more because of competition."

"The price of lumber's gone up since you came into the business," Lasset informed him.

"Not enough to account for our monthly losses," argued Tommy, "and not enough to make the Reverse Gear Churn company agree with us on a price. Our methods of production are full of leaks."

"Brinley has been a little careless," admitted Lasset. "I went after him this morning. I think we'll rearrange some of our machinery."

Tommy, who was a hearty young man, with no kinks on his shoulders, slammed a quite capable first on his desk.

"By jinks, that does settle it," he swore. "If you'll go that far in stealing Ames' thunder, you prove to me that he was right in everything he wanted to do; and I'm going to have him out here."

"Are you aware that you don't own this factory?" demanded Lassett icily.

"I hold more stock than you do, I control the situation, and I'm going to run this plant without interference. Who is this Ames, anyway? Where does he come from?"

"Blessed if I know," replied Tommy. "I never thought to ask him."

Lasset laughed.

"Exactly," he accused. "That shows how thoroughly impractical you are. Ames is probably a grafter. Has he any money?"

"I think not," acknowledged Tommy. "He's stopping at the best hotel in town, but he told me he was watching his expenses just now. He did say though, that he had remodeled a dry goods concern, a mine, and a stove works, and some other business quite successfully."

"Then why hasn't he a job?" Lasset very naturally wanted to know. "A man as smart as he pretends to be don't go around to small concerns like ours hunting work."

"He isn't hunting work," insisted Tommy. "He says he fairly aches to put this plant on its feet. It interests him. He'll come in here, remodel our factory and output, install our side lines, and he'll take one-third of the increase of profits for his share. Of course, we'll have to advance him money enough to live on."

"Now we're coming at it;" triumphed Lasset. "How much does he want?"

Lasset threw himself back in his chair to roar, then he jumped up and went out into the shop, and Tommy heard him laughing with Brinley. A few minutes later, Tommy saw him out in the yard with the engineer and the lumber foreman, and all three were laughing. Tommy telephoned Ames.

"It's no use, old man," he regretted. "I can't make them see it."

"You see it, don't you?" inquired Ames.

"I see it so hard it hurts my eyes," emphatically announced Tommy.

"Then sell me a share of stock," suggested Ames. "As a stockholder he can't keep me out of the factory, and he can't keep me out of the stockholders' meeting the first of the month. Find out how the stock is divided."

"I can tell you right now," returned Tommy. "I looked it up this morning. I own 40 per cent of the stock, Lasset owns 45, outside stockholders, who haven't attended a meeting for years, own 5 per cent, and the other 10 per cent is owned by the workmen."

"Then there's an easy solution," advised Ames in a relieved voice. "You'd best buy a little more stock, and win over as many of the workmen as possible to vote with you. At the next stockholders' meeting you can throw Lasset out, if need be. If you want to save a dollar of your investment, you must obtain private control."

Tommy knitted his brows. The course proposed meant that he must invest the balance of his small fortune in what had already proved to be a woefully losing venture.

"By jinks, I'll do it!" he decided. "Ames, suppose you come out and help me talk to the men?"

"All right," laughed Ames. "By the way, Tommy, can you lend me $500?"

For a moment Tommy hesitated. The sheer nerve of the thing took his breath. Just then Lasset came into the office.

"Certainly, old man," gulped Tommy. "I'll see you this noon."

He hung up and turned to Lasset.

"I'd like to draw $500," he said, and grinned.

CHAPTER IV.

TOMMY met Ames at noon and handed him the five hundred dollars he had promised.

"Thanks," said Ames, and stuffed the money nonchalantly in his pocket. "Have you time for lunch?"

"I'm going to take it," laughed Tommy. "I'd like to have you come over to the Commercial club with me."

"With pleasure," accepted Ames, and Tommy, with a trace of pride in the distinguished appearance of his guest, walked into the well-appointed business club which he had so recently joined.

He introduced Ames to three or four of the members, and they strolled through the billiard parlor on their way to the dining room.

"Hello, John Ames!" greeted Dick Templeton, walking up to the visitor and shaking hands cordially.

"You've deprived me of a pleasure, both of you," complained Tommy. "I had hoped to introduce you."

"Couldn't think of it, Tommy," declined Dick. "I was a guest of Mr. Ames at the Ivy club in New York. This is my first opportunity to buy him a drink."

Tommy, a bit dazed, walked back with them to the cosy little bar. The Ivy club was supposed to be a tremendously exclusive affair.

"Going to be in town tonight, Ames?" asked Templeton, as their guest set the healthy example of Vichy.

"I hope to remain some little time," replied Ames with a quiet smile at Tommy.

"Fine business!" exclaimed Dick. "Tommy, we must take him out to Mrs. Rushmore's little informal dance, and give the girls a treat."

"Mrs. Rushmore will be delighted," quiped Tommy. Later he had a moment alone with Dick, and expressed his perplexity.

"I didn't know Ames had any social connections," he explained. "I've only met him in a business way."

"I didn't know he had any business connections," laughed Dick. "I only met him in a social way, and he's the life of the ball wherever he goes. A fellow who attends the Trappings' special annuals in Washington, is entitled to the entree anywhere."

"I'm proud of my judgment," chuckled Tommy.

CHAPTER V.

WITHIN ten minutes after John Ames landed at Mrs. Rusmore's that night, the entire feminine contingent of the most exclusive set in town realized that this would be a lively social season. All the mammas with marriageable daughters threw out nervous tentacles in every direction, frantically anxious to absorb information. If John Ames had money, the scramble for him would be shocking, and, if he had no money, he was the most dangerous thing in their horizon.

He danced first with Helen Rand, and that lively young lady sparkled and snapped and glowed under the consciousness that the eye of every girl on the floor was unceasingly upon them. Tommy Spencer danced with that fluffy little Rostand girl, and surprised Helen by flirting outrageously. Helen flashed at him a glance of amusement as she as she passed him in the waltz, but Tommy seemed even more amused than she.

"You waltz like a sunbeam!" observed John Ames, as he guided Helen deftly out of the pocket made by clumsy Al Blair. His voice was deep and musical, and full of vibration.

Helen favored him with her most bell-like laugh, and turned her wonderfully effective big eyes up to his for a fleeting second.

"I have a badly arranged card," he told her. "It only carries one dance with you."

"I'll give you the first extra," she immediately offered, and flashed another glance at him, an inquiring one this time. Yes, he looked immensely gratified.

"Just one extra won't do," he urged her. "I must have more than that." He glanced down at her, his big black eyes aglow with eagerness. Yes, she looked pleased.

Tommy scowled for an instant as they whirled by him, and then he turned to that fluffy little Rostand girl with determined ardor.

"You want too much," Helen chided Ames.

"I take pride in my selfishness," he assured her. "Let me see your card." He took it from her in the intermission and scanned it sharply. "It's most improper for you to dance three out of four extras with Tommy Spencer," he charged. "Tommy has to give up one of these."

"You may see Tommy," she shyly suggested.

"I won't lose a minute," he promised, and stepped over to where Tommy was in danger of becoming cross-eyed with trying to keep up his tremendous affair with that little Rostand girl and, at the same time, catch Helen's every glance.

"Tommy, I've found a bad trait in you; you're greedy," Ames complained. "You've gobbled up all Miss Rand's extras, and I have to have one of them."

"That's up to Miss Rand," said Tommy, with brave carelessness, and looked inquiringly across to Helen. She laughed happily.

"Then it's my dance," exulted Ames. "Thank you, Tommy," and he hurried back to Helen, as the musicians picked up their instruments.

"You have to make up that extra to me," Tommy fervently informed the little Rostand girl.

"You'll have to see Dick Templeton," dimpled Miss Rostand, but her eyes were following the broad shoulders of John Ames. He was remarkably handsome, and such a lovely dancer!

CHAPTER VI.

AMES visited the factory as Tommy's guest. He inspected each machine in turn, and he watched the operations of each workman with interest. He paused at a lathe and began to take off his gloves.

"That's a bad bevel you have on your gouge," he told the workman. "It's too blunt, and to get a proper slice with it you must hold it too nearly at right angles. One of these days you'll strike a particularly tough knot, and you'll get that handle on your chin."

The workman grinned sheepishly.

"I've had it jerked out of my hands a dozen times," he confessed. "I've told the tool grinder this bevel is wrong."

"Let me try it a minute," suggested Ames, and took the tool from him.

He glanced at the pattern and threw over the idler. Two or three workmen, at nearby machines, paused to enjoy the novel spectacle of a tall young man, in a cutaway coat and a silk hat, turning a churn leg; but their grins of amusement changed to respect when they saw that his strong hands held the gouge firmly, and that he followed the sweep of the pattern with an instinctive muscular adjustment which produced the utmost effectiveness with the least effort. He laid down the gouge presently and took up a finishing chisel. He examined its edge critically before he began. In a moment or so, he stopped the machine and took out the leg. It was smoothly and perfectly done.

"You could work faster and with less expenditure of energy if your tools were in proper condition," he commented. *"This old lathe is shaky. It needs re*setting and a new arbor. Let's go back and see the grinding machine."

The man at the drill came over to the lathe as Ames and Tommy went away.

"Takin' lessons from the kid-glove expert?" he bantered.

"He knows his business," admitted the leg-turner. "He's the boy who wants to come in and remodel the factory. He wants five hundred bones a month to start with."

"Lasset had better be a sport and spend the money. Something ought to be done. I've got five shares of stock that hasn't paid a dividend for ten years."

The tool grinder gave way to Ames and Tommy with hopeful interest.

"This old bank of emery wheels ought to go to the junk heap," he complained. "I can't get a decent edge on anything."

"I think you do wonders since I've seen your machine," declared Ames with a smile of such friendliness that the tool grinder was an ardent supporter from that minute.

"Tommy, here is one machine which is too important to monkey with. To begin with, there should be automatic rests to produce the proper bevel in the grinding. I can tell by the sound of the planer in there that the planer knives are not cutting at the proper angle."

Tommy looked at him with proud admiration.

"That's what you told me last week, didn't you, Billy?" he wonderingly declared.

"Lasset said the firm had made a quarter of a million churns with the present grinder and these wheels," remarked Billy with contempt.

Brinley came through the shop to the grinding room, looked in at the door with a scowl at Ames and Tommy, and went away. Presently a boy came back. Ames was in the engine room listening with a frown, to an annoying click in the governor.

"Mr. Lasset wants to see you right away," announced the boy to Tommy. "Go as far as the office," invited Tommy. "I'll be back in a few minutes."

Tommy went into the office and found Lasset in a snarling frame of mind.

"You'll have to get your friend Ames out of here, and keep him out," he ordered.

"Mr. Ames is a stockholder," returned Tommy, coming around in front of Lasset's desk, where he could talk directly at his face. "I gave him a share of stock."

"That's your lookout," snapped Lasset. "The fact he's a stockholder, however, doesn't give him the right to come in here and disturb the men. Half of standing around, with their tools in their hands, talking. How do you expect Brinley to preserve discipline?"

"I don't," answered Tommy. "I'm going to fire Brinley at the same time I get rid of our clumsy old machinery."

"You're going to fire him!" snorted Lasset.

"That's what I said," insisted Tommy, laying his fist gently but firmly on the manager's desk. "Now, look here, Lasset, I'm going to talk to you like a Dutch uncle. Will you, or will you not, employ Ames to remodel this factory?"

"Certainly not!" shouted Lasset.

"Then I will," declared Tommy. "You got me into this concern under the impression that I couldn't be any trouble, because I didn't know anything. In that far you were right; but you didn't take into consideration the fact that maybe I could learn. I'm coming into the next stockholders' meeting prepared to fire you and Brinley, and then I'm going to run this factory myself. I've discovered that I like the churn business better than billiards."

CHAPTER VII.

THE men voted solidly with Tommy at the stockholders' meeting, and Lasset, who had not believed it possible for him to lose, made them a scathing speech in which he predicted disaster of every form and dimension. He was white with rage, and it was only because *he did not like the shock*ers of either Tommy or Ames that the meeting did not end in a fist fight. He took Brinley with him when he went away, and left the Johnson Churn company to its fate! The next they heard of him he was with the Reverse Gear Church company, and cutting the price against his old output.

Ames and Tommy plunged their company into debt for new machinery, and, when it came, they closed down the factory long enough to make a thorough re-arrangement.

Ames put on overalls and went into the shop. He invented a line of small dairy conveniences, and devised some wooden toys to use up their hardwood waste to the last scrap. Thees things done and put in good running order, he went into the office with Tommy, and, with the same happy energy, put into effect a new selling system, whereby advertising expenses were kept to a minimum and the sales increased.

At this point of his activity, John Ames might be said to be one of the most contented men in existence. Day by day, he saw the fruition of his plans, and, week by week, Tommy Spencer developed from a social idler into the live, keen business man his father's blood entitled him to become. There was something rather sad in Tommy's steadiness thees days. Ames tried to drag him into the social activity of which he himself was so much a part, but Tommy showed an unaccountable lack of interest.

"Suit yourself, Tommy," laughed Ames, "but you're only young once, you know. We're getting up a little series of costume dances for the first Friday in each month, and the crowd would each other's throats."

"You're not in Lasset's scalp again, are you?" laughed Ames.

"No," hesitated Tommy. "Say, do you know, I'd like to have Lasset go through our factory now. Why, man, I'm so proud of this plant I make a bore of myself down in the Commercial club. We take rough lumber in at one end and shoot out churns at the other, with the smoothness of a greased bullet. By the way, I think I have a little improvement in our churn, which should make a 10 per cent saving and give us a better article.

Ames looked down at him with a smile.

"It seems to me tat I'm becoming an ornamental man," he observed. "You scarcely need me any more, Tommy."

"I need you forever, old man!" declared Tommy heartily. "You've done wonders for me, Ames, and, within six months your share of the increased profits will make a fine and dandy income. Why, you're out of debt now, for all the advances you've had."

"Is that so?" laughed Ames. "Give me a thousand, Tommy. Coming back to that series of costume dances, old man, I do wish you'd wake up and join us. Helen says you must. What's the matter that you never get around to Helen's any more? She thinks you're treating her shabbily; and, by George, you are."

"I've been so busy," lamely defended Tommy. He mused heavily a moment. "If Helen says I must, I suppose I must," he finally admitted. "When do you begin?"

"The first Friday in next month," said Ames. "I am to see Helen this evening. I'll tell her. She'll be delighted."

Tommy winced internally, but outwardly he smiled most pleasantly.

"I guess I am becoming stupid," he acknowledged.

That evening he regretted his promise. He saw Helen and Ames flashing by in the new touring car which was a part of the extravagant Ames advances. Ames was a wonderful fellow. Everybody liked him, men, women and children. He was clever, he was polished, he was handsome, and he had a smile which was a passport to the good graces of any properly conditioned human being. At first Ames had been the delight of all the girls, but, with the passing of time, he had become more and more devoted to Helen. The two were almost inseparable.

CHAPTER VII.

THAT first little costume dance was a tremendous success, for everybody but Tommy Spencer. He danced once, with Helen, and he thought her tremendously kind to him. He had rather that she had not been quite so hurt a little, to have her treat him with so much grave consideration. It seemed to him that she, too, had quieted somewhat in the past winter. He found he eyes fixed speculatively on him more than once, and he thought them almost wistful at times.

He slipped out for a smoke after that dance. Somehow, he wanted to be alone, and he took a seat in a dark corner of the little side porch. The intermissions were rather long, for a lonely person, and in one of them he saw Ames and Helen come from the house, arm in arm, and they strolled down the path directly in front of him.

Tommy felt a pang at his heart as he realized what an unusually perfect couple they were. This was a Louis XVI night, and both Ames and Helen were all in white; Helen with her powdered hair and glistening shoulders, and a wide spreading satin gown, and Ames particularly tall and graceful in his pigtail and his knee breeches. They were like a ghostly pair from an old tapestry, as they stepped into the moonlight, and Ames' head was bent low over Helen. He was holding her hand in his, and the tones of his voice to her in a very low voice, while Helen's head drooped and her eyes were averted.

Tommy jumped down from the balcony as soon as they had passed, and strode in the opposite direction. He felt the need of rapid exercise, and he walked briskly down through the flower garden, and back up to the fountain. He had just turned the corner of the summer house when he almost ran into Ames and Helen. The tall white *coat*ter was standing in front of Helen, holding both of her hands in his, and just as Tommy came upon them, Ames bent forward and kissed her fair face to his, and he kissed her on the lips.

Tommy mumbled a hasty apology and started to hurry away, but they both called after him, and gulping down the lump which had leaped in his throat, he turned and came back.

"I've just been bidding goodby to the prettiest girl in town, Tommy," said Ames in a serious tone. "Helen and I have been tremendous pals, and I'm going to miss all the rest of you more than I can say."

"You're not going away," protested Tommy, bewildered.

"Yes; I find I can't stand it any longer," laughed Ames. "The fact is very much the same old freight car backed up on the same old siding every day, and the same old churns."

"But you can't leave now," protested Tommy. "The business is just beginning to yield a profit."

"I can find a profit any place," smiled Ames. "I'm not interested in the churn business never interested me. I only cared for the problem of straightening out its difficulties, and now the tangle is straightened, the blocks are all fitted together, and the only way to enjoy them any further is to test them all apart again, and that's no fun for me, is to wander on and find a new puzzle."

"I thought you were at home here," protested Tommy.

"I don't think I shall ever have a real home," laughed Ames. "I belong to the air, and I have to be free. I'm tired of your town, Tommy. I'm tired of the Soldiers' monument and the Union depot and the yellow street cars, and the very atmosphere that hangs above Main street. The only regret I shall have in leaving is for my good friends," and he reached out a hand to both Helen and Tommy.

Helen slipped her other hand in Tommy's arm.

"What about Helen?" Tommy suddenly demanded. "Ames, when a fellow monopolizes a girl's entire time—"

"Why, you silly Tommy!" cried Helen, drawing away from his arm. "Is that why you've neglected me all winter?"

"And you know, I thought," stammered Tommy.

"And you know I thought," breath*lessly interrupted Helen.*

"Let it," laughed Ames. "The music's beginning. Helen, will you let Tommy take you to the rest of this series of dances?"

Helen and Tommy looked at each other, then suddenly laughed. Ames turned away and lit a cigarette.

"I'll give it to you, Tommy. Run along."

He laughed as he watched them run into the house, arm in arm. He blew a wreath of smoke at the stars.

Attractive Small Gifts

The old familiar glass lemon reamer has been revived in attractive form for the dining room or the summer veranda. It is now obtainable in cut glass, with a small glass tray below, and is set in a silver holder or stand.

The neatest idea in the tea chests is a little mahogany box with rounded top and clasps, in which are neatly arranged the silver tea caddy, tea ball and its stand. For the card or dinner table are little individual silver ash trays and holders. These come in sets. Another design has a match box and a clasp, by which it is fastened to the edge of the table.

A dainty conceit for the modern woman is the little round flat enamel box, like an old-fashioned pomander, with perforated bottom. Inside is a cake of scented wax, which diffuses the fragrance of rose or violet, as the case may be. A box similar in shape holds a tiny powder puff, and in each case the top is ornamented with a tiny hinged egg of enamel in heliotrope, blue, pink or yellow or white, opened reveals a watch; these also may be obtained in the heart shape.

Pretty frames are very attractive in this enamel, as are the tiny egg-shaped glass salt shakers with enamel stands. The French are enameled on silver, while most of the other work is applied to gold.

Little round vanity boxes in gold, in size like a very small walnut and fitted out with powder puff and mirror, can be hung on a chain if desired. Little gold articles for the toilet are always acceptable. A new article is the tiny gold backed eyebrow brush, which is about three inches long.

AT THE THEATRES

"St. Elmo," With Its First Scene Cast Near Lookout Mountain, Will Be Presented This Week at the Atlanta by the Billy Long Stock Company–Story Is One Known in Every Home

By popular vote of the theater patrons, "St. Elmo" is to be presented at the Atlanta theater this week by the Miss Billy Long company. The story can be found in nearly every household and has been read and re-read until it has grown very familiar. There is a romantic interest in the story and in the play which is strong in its appeal and makes repetition welcome.

Much interest will center in Miss Long's portrayal of Edna Earl, granddaughter of Aaron Hunt. Miss Long is in love with the part and it is said plays it to perfection. Edwin Vail, too, will make an ideal St. Elmo. Joseph Kirkham will be cast as Rev. Allan Hammond and Fert Gardner will play his son Murray, who is killed in a duel with St. Elmo at the opening of the play. William Triplett will be cast as the grandfather; Ralph Murphy will play Gordon Leigh; Al Warren will be the doctor, and the comedy role of Vanderdecken Jiggins will fall to Allan Robinson. Miss Sheldon and Miss Insley will play the two remaining feminine roles—those of Agnes and Gertrude Hammond.

The story of how St. Elmo, owner of a vast estate, comes to the village blacksmith shop and meets with the disapproval of the blacksmith because of his treatment of his horse, is familiar already. Although warned against St. Elmo by her grandfather, Edna Earl takes an interest in the fine, well-dressed gentleman who had given her a smile. After leaving the blacksmith shop comes the trouble between Murray Hammond and St. Elmo, and they fight their duel, in which Hammond is killed.

The duel is followed by the death of Edna's grandfather, and the girl leaves home and becomes a governess. Meanwhile the minister, who always has had a great influence over St. Elmo, induces him to enter the ministry. Edna, returning from New York, where she has studied and grown from girlhood into beautiful young womanhood, finds a new St. Elmo in place of the one she left behind. Although when a girl she had seen Murray Hammond fall in the duel, yet she had never realized who shot him.

This is told her, after her return, by Jiggins, but she realizes that St. Elmo has redeemed himself fully and she marries him. The story is full of heart interest and gives an opportunity for some really fine acting. The first act is laid near Lookout Mountain and the scenic artist has painted a realistic drop, showing the mountain and the valley so familiar to the people of the south.

There will be matinees on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, and performances every night during the week.

"THE DISTRICT LEADER" IS WEEK'S TABLOID AT BIJOU.

Following the success of tabloid musical comedy with vaudeville at the Bijou, when "A Trip to Joyville" last week attracted more people in the regular schedule of performances than have attended entertainments in the Marietta street house in many weeks, the management announces for this week "The District Leader," a story of love and politics, with genuine musical numbers, that dovetail in a most pleasing fashion.

"The District Leader" is the property of Joseph E. Howard, one of the prominent producers of musical comedy in vaudeville, known in theatrical history. The book, music and lyrics are from his pen. When it is known that he is also the composer of "The Time, The Place, The Girl," "The Girl Question," "A Stubborn Cinderella," and "Land of Nod," real theatergoers may anticipate a genuine treat in "The District Leader." Mr. Howard's success in vaudeville was the inducement for him to attempt tabloid productions, and that he has succeeded wonderfully is evidenced by the fact that his shows are in greater demand than any other producer.

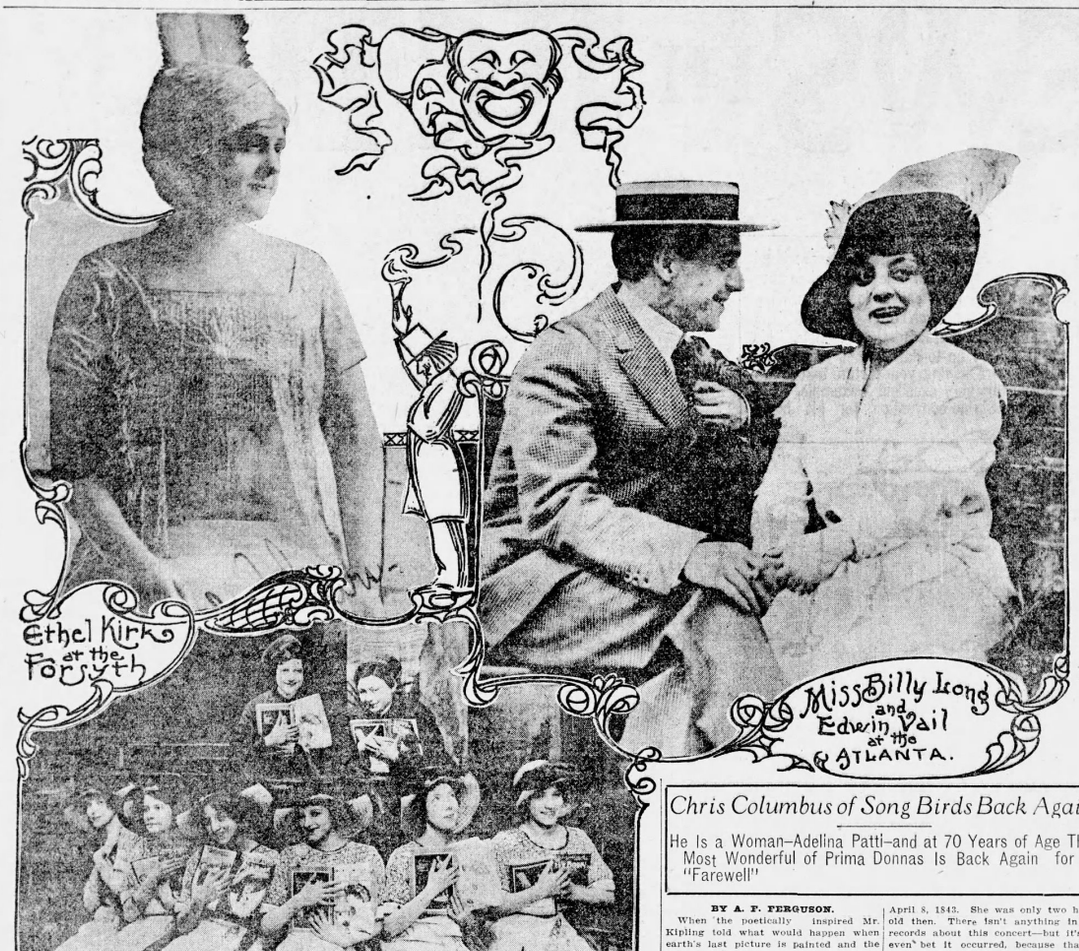
Mr. Howard has paid particular attention to the scenery and costuming department of "The District Leader." He believes that these features are as essential as his cast and chorus. He has won approval all along the line with, this his greatest of all tabloids now in the circuit."

While "The District Leader" was intended originally for the dollar and a half circuit, the producer has succeeded in abbreviating in such a fashion that he has secured the result that both managers and opposition producers have been striving for. There is not one moment of wasted time from the beginning of "The District Leader" until everybody is happy at its finish. There is a touch of melodrama in two stirring scenes, and there is music and comedy that will delight and interest from the very beginning.

Ten selected musical comedy numbers, used exclusively by "The District Leader," will be an important factor in the success of the offering. Among the hits that have never been heard in Atlanta are "So So," "Make Your Own Sunshine," "What's the Use of Dreaming," "Heart to Let" and "Lindy."

The cast is made up of people who have been identified with musical comedy in vaudeville for a number of years. The chorus was drafted from some of Mr. Howard's best vaudeville productions, and in all, this attraction promises to cement the success of tabloid at the Bijou.

There will be the usual daily matinees and evening performances, and prices of admission continue at 10 cents, though there will be a number of reserved seats at 10 cents extra.



Captain Churchill

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 24.—Mr. Winston Churchill, M. P., first lord of the admiralty, can now claim the title of Captain Churchill. He was elected an Elder Brother of Trinity House at a special court of the brethren at the Trinity house, and last Christmas by a royal order the king conferred on the Elder brethren the right to the title "captain," and to take precedence on all occasions next to that accorded to captains in the navy. Among the Elder Brethren are the king, the duke and Prince Arthur of Connaught, Prince Louis of Battenberg (the first sea lord), Mr. Asquith, Mr. Balfour, the earl of Rosenbery, the earl of Selborne, the marquis of Crewe, Lord George Hamilton and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain. Prince Louis and Mr. Asquith were present at Mr. Churchill's election. Mr. Churchill will now be able to wear an imposing uniform, which differs but little from that of an admiral.

Vaudeville at the Forsyth Will Include Maggie Cline, Famed Varitty Star, "the Irish Queen" o Vaudeville–"The District Leader," Tabloid Musical Drama, at the Bijou All Week

An important bill of vaudeville will be the attraction at the Forsyth this week. The combination will be headed by the famous American character artiste star, Maggie Cline, and the supporting company will be made up of some of the distinguished features of Keith vaudeville.

Maggie Cline is, in point of service, the oldest variety entertainer in the profession. Long before vaudeville was anything at all she was a star in the good old-fashioned variety world. She was a favorite, and when musical comedy became a rage she was one of its first stars. When B. F. Keith determined to make of variety an attraction that would come to just what it is now, Miss Cline was among the very first headliners. And in all the years that have come and gone Maggie Cline has held her own, always a headliner and always a hit-maker.

Because of her tremendous ability as a character comedienne, she was not long in becoming known as "the Irish Queen," a title that has clung affectionately to her longer than some of the present day stars have been on the stage. Miss Cline has created more Irish song hits than any person alive, and, though she had retired from stage life, she could not resist the lure of the footlights, and it was not a difficult task for the managers to bring her back, much to the delight of eastern audiences, who have done her honor ever since.

In sending Miss Cline to Atlanta the Keith offices accept the accomplishment as the most important booking since the engagement of Miss Kellerman. No less a notable than Mme. Sara Bernhardt a week ago announced at her farewell reception that Maggie Cline is in the same position in vaudeville that she occupies in the dramatic world.

In selecting a bill to surround the star the Keith offices have accomplished much. The six other acts are of exceptional quality. A feature is to be The Great Howard, the Scotch ventriloquist, who appeared at the Forsyth three years ago, just prior to his return to the other side. He has been scoring triumphs all over Europe, and in returning to America the Forsyth will be one of his first engagements. This ventriloquist is a comedian of ability. His chatter with his dummy partners is unusually clever and his songs are the newest. The act is conceded to be one of the very best of its sort in all the profession.

Madden and Fitzpatrick, in "The Wanderer," will be another of the feature acts, and are assured of a welcome. These two clever entertainers hold the hit record of the old Orpheum theater. Madden and Fitzpatrick, at the Orpheum, had the honor of being the first act to bring out the standing room sign. One of the duo is a pianist of ability, and he surely will repeat his wonderful hit of five years ago.

The famous Hammerstein is responsible for the appearance of Caesar Nesi in vaudeville. "The American Caruso" was discovered by Mr. Hammerstein, whose judgment of vocal ability is not disputed. The famous manager heard the young man sing, and immediately engaged him for a special week at the Victoria. New York raved over the voice, and after a long engagement at Hammerstein's, Nesi sailed for the other side, and his engagement there was a triumph. He has been a great success in the west, and at the Forsyth will be a favorite with the thousands of people who admire real music.

The Equill Brothers, a famous combination of gymnastic experts, are going to prove that there is much that is interesting and attractive in an act of this sort, and it is assured that the comedy magic of Carl Rosin and Company will be of value on the bill.

There will be the regular schedule of Forsyth performances, including the matinees every afternoon.

Chris Columbus of Song Birds Back Again

He Is a Woman–Adelina Patti–and at 70 Years of Age This Most Wonderful of Prima Donnas Is Back Again for a "Farewell"

BY A. P. FERGUSON.

When the poetically inspired Mr. Kipling told what would happen when earth's last picture is painted and the tubes are twisted and dried—he left off somethine—he didn't finish his verse in a logical way. For after the picture has been painted and the paint has become a crust and everybody is settling down after tearing the husks of everyday life from their salvation—why then Mme. Adelina Patti will hand some well known impressario a list of towns that will look like a railway schedule and set out for a farewell tour. Of course, Kipling couldn't know this, because he only deals in poetry—and, besides, Mme. Patti had declared she wouldn't ever do it again. But—

Dear Public, she's in again.

While other ladies of her age and station are sitting with folded hands or knitting socks or studying religion the Baroness Cedarstrom, nee Adelina Patti, is celebrating her seventieth birthday mapping out a program to be given by her at the Verdi festival to be held in Italy in honor of the dead composer's anniversary this spring. There isn't anybody living who has batted over .300 in the vocalist's league quite so long as the fair Adelina. And anybody who thinks she can't step up to the plate and deliver an aria or any other complicated series of melodious yodels that big league singers effect today, along with the Mary Gardens and the Cavalleris, has a chance to revise his returns here and now.

Mme. Patti began to sing in Madrid about 6 o'clock on the afternoon of April 8, 1843. She was only two hours old then. There isn't anything in the records about this concert—but it's an even bet it occurred, because that is the time of day when Adelina was held over a large stone baptismal font and received the name she bore to glory.

The Patti family were opera singers by profession and they moved to the United States soon after the fair Adelina came into the world. She is said to have lived in St. Louis for a while as a little girl. Despite all such obstacles to her success, when but ten years old she commenced singing for a living, making her first tour with Ole Bull, and after a turn in the child wonder business graduated into a full-fledged star at her New York debut in 1859. Her voice was carefully confined to the United States for a couple of years, while her press agent was preparing Europe for her coming. In 1861 she turned loose her golden notes on London.

There have been other singers—but only one Patti. The quotations on her voice show her rise to prosperity and fame. Beginning with a salary of $100 per month, she rose to $5,250 per night. And the last figure is what she received for her last concert tour—her last farewell tour, rather. She is the Christopher Columbus of the farewell tour business. It is estimated that since she was fifty she has made at least fifteen farewell tours.

She has been married three times—her present husband, Baron Cedarstrom, owns a castle in Wales, where he and the singer spend most of their time.

Krupp Influence

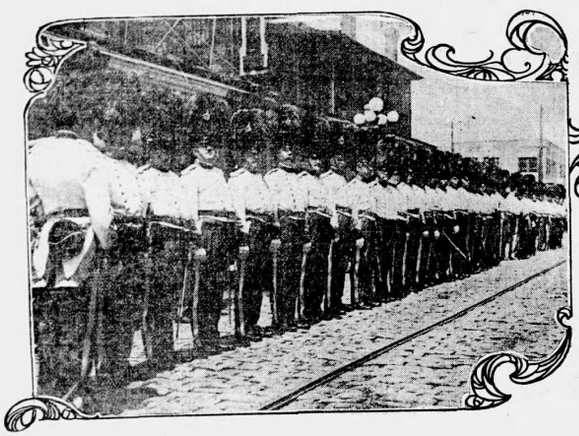
BERLIN, May 24.—Aprops of the revelations which have been made in regard to the methods employed by Krupps to influence public opinion in favor of more expenditure on armaments in Germany, it may be mentioned as a fact that it is part of their settled policy to insist on the contractors with which they do business either paying a special subsidy or giving advertising contracts to a list of German papers submitted by them. In this way they are able to influence the general policy of the paper.

FAREWELL GIVEN TO SARAH BERNHARDT BY THE LEADING FOLKS OF THE STAGE

All the "stars" gathered recently in New York to crown the great actress wit ha laurel wreath and to bid her farewell upon her departure for France. In the group is Maggie Cline, who will be the headliner next week at the Forsyth.

NEWS IN PICTURES

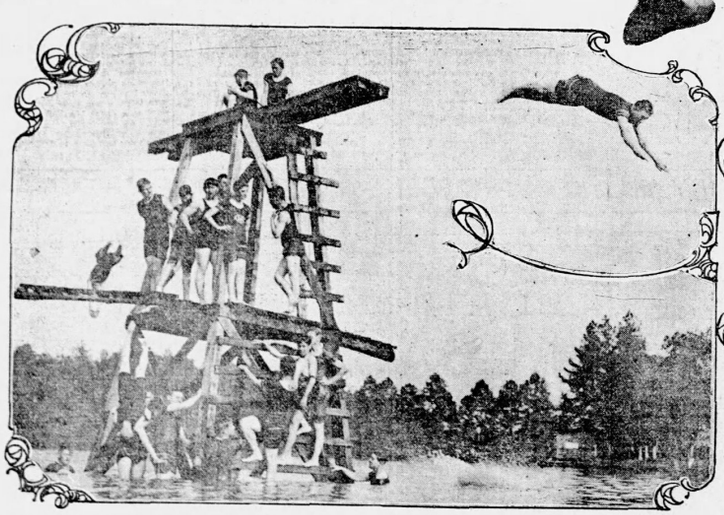
CAMELS, human beings, trumpets, a drum or so, and a brass band welcomed Potentate Forrest Adair and his delegates, when they returned from Dallas, Tex., with the 1914 convention of Shriners. No reception was ever heartier, and none was ever better deserved. The camel does look a little bored, but that is characteristic of camels. This one, being from Grant Park zoo, is a very up-to-date camel, and knows it is the thing to look blase when you are having your picture taken. Mr. Adair, however, couldn't quite follow this very excellent example, because a Shriner who has just won the Shrine convention for his home town feels very far from bored.

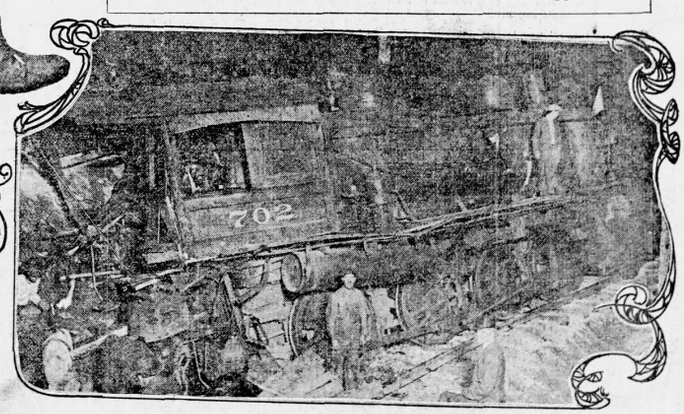


THE OLD GUARD, which went north at the close of the Civil war to bring peace between the people of two sections, is repeating the journey made years ago. The famous regiment is revisiting cities to which it then went upon its mission of peace, and is renewing the friendships made at the close of the war. The regiment is shown drawn up in line, just before it entrained for the north.

That jaunty figure, who has taken to himself the center of the page, is one of the newsboys who have made a ball ground out of the railway tracks between Forsyth street bridge and the Whitehall street viaduct. Regardless of railroads and engines, they pursue their play upon the network of tracks, and had as soon stop traffic as not, if that unimportant obstacle interfered too much with their game.

BASEBALL games are not won solely on the diamond. The crowd in the grandstand, the bigger crowd in the bleachers, and the sponsors, have some share in the victory. For instance, didn't the presence of the sponsors cheer the Yellowjackets on in those Tech-Georgia games – those unforgettable, epochal games? Don't you know they did? Just at the time these Tech sponsors were photographed, a crucial moment had arrived. It was two strikes and three balls on the man at the bat, and there was a fellow on second. What did the fellow at the plate do? He glanced at the sponsors, and hit a two-bagger.





THIS is an instance of aviation without either airship or wings. A diver at Lakewood jumped from the highest spring-board, and posed in the air until he had been photographed. Then, he dropped downward, like a plummet, and explored the bottom of the lake. The recent summer weather warmed the water until bathing last week became a popular pastime. The lake at Piedmont Park was opened to bathers, and at Lakewood the swimming season had already been in progress for days.

A LOCOMOTIVE on the Seaboard Air Line road left the track at Rice's station on Wednesday night, May 14, and the engineer, R. G. Brooks, and the flagman, J. T. Allen, were killed. A "hobo," who gave his name as R. G. Burns, played the part of the hero. This picture is a flashlight photograph which was taken at midnight. The part that the tramp played in this wreck was a bit of unusual bravery. While trying to save the engineer, he was badly burned, but when doctors came he asked that they first attend the others who had been injured. "Don't mind me," he said, "I'm a tramp. They're people."
